Two Lincoln Divers Place In State Swimming Meet

Thief River Falls divers Todd Wing and Jeff Rosetta placed eighth and 12th, respectively, at the 1984 Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) state swimming and diving championships completed Saturday at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

A field of 40 divers was cut to 16 after five dives Friday, and after three more dives the number was reduced to 12 for Saturday's finals, with the top six grouped in the championship finals and the 7-12 divers competing in the consolation finals.

Wing, a junior, was eighth through the prelims and held on to that position in the consolation finals with 326.65 points. Rosetta, a senior, was tenth after the prelims and finished 12th in the consolation finals with 285.85 points.

A year ago Wing was 12th and Rosetta 14th in the state meet competition.

Tom Rosencrantz of Hopkins won the 1984 diving title with 363.60 points.

Thief River Falls coach Jay Forney said the two Prowlers made a solid state meet showing. "It was their first real competition of the year," he noted. "It was their first pressure situation they've had to deal with. All things considered, we're not too disappointed in their performances."

Senior Dave Ose was also a Thief River Falls state meet competitor. He swam his best time of the season in the 200 I.M. in Friday's finals with a 2:09.39, but failed to advance.

Forney said that Ose, too, made a good showing. "To swim in the state meet is a nice way to cap many years of swimming," he explained. "You have to be doing something right to get to the state meet."

Only Section 8 swimmer to place in the state meet finals was Dave Irgens of Alexandria, third in the 100 freestyle.

Edina won the state meet title with 119 points, followed by Park Center with 91 and Lakeview 68 to round out the top three. Section 8 champion Alexandria finished in a tie for 19th place with 19 points.

Durand scored 16 points as the Eagles beat the Nordics 51-42 for the tournament's third place trophy.

FWS Sponsors Summer Jobs For Teenagers

A limited number of unique summer work experiences are being offered to teenagers by the Department of the Interior's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS).

Work opportunities for youths range from feeding fish at a national fish hatchery to helping wildlife researchers on a national wildlife refuge or working on wildlife-related projects at various FWS offices scattered across the country. These possibilities are all part of the Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) program, which is open to men and women 15 through 18 years of age.

YCC program objective is to employ the youths in positions linked to FWS activities, while providing them with an understanding and appreciation for the nation's wildlife heritage. Applications for the program are currently available from most U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service offices. All applicants will be notified whether or not they were selected by May 1, 1984. The majority of those selected will begin their employment, usually for eight weeks, in June and will be paid minimum wage.

Fish and Wildlife Service expects to employ approximately 2,000 youths nationwide. For additional information, consult the telephone book for the nearest office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, National Park Service, or the U.S. Forest Service.

Wildlife Week Is Set for Mar. 18-24

It's hard to think of something that doesn't contain — or wasn't produced with — water.

"Water: We Can't Live Without It."

That theme is the conservation message of this year's National Wildlife Week, to be observed March 18 to 24, and sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation (NWF). The theme will be promoted throughout the year to make Americans more aware of the critical significance of life-sustaining water.

Honorary Chairman of the 47th Annual Wildlife Week is popular Muppet, Kermit the Frog, the host of television's award-winning "The Muppet Show." One of Jim Henson's internationally acclaimed Muppet troupe, Kermit will speak on behalf of the National Wildlife Federation in its 1984 broadcast public service announcements that promote the conservation of the nation's dwindling supplies of fresh water.

More than 20 million students, teachers and conservationists are expected to participate in the Wildlife Week observance helping promote the importance of clean, life-giving water and the necessity of conserving critical water resources. Each year, school children learn about Wildlife Week with information provided by the National Wildlife Federation in specially prepared education kits.

"More than any other resource, water is basic to survival," said Jay D. Hair, NWF Executive Vice President. "Water is part of every living thing, and is just as vital to our industrial processes. Unfortunately, our useable freshwater supplies are threatened by contamination, mismanagement, and wastes. We hope to impress upon Americans this year the need to protect and conserve our precious water supplies."

Earth is covered with 326 million cubic miles of water — of which only three per cent is freshwater. Varieties of fish and wildlife depend on that fresh water for life: Freshwater wetlands support species from the bullfrog to the banded water snake, while rivers, streams, and lakes are precious habitat for moose, trout, turtles, raccoons and salamanders, among others.

Just as dependent on fresh water are humans, whose bodies are 65 per cent water. It has been estimated that as a nation we use as much as 700 billion gallons of water a day.

Scarce supply of fresh water isn't the only problem facing this resource. Each year, several billion tons of soil are washed into our waterways, making them unfit for use.

While controlling water contaminants is crucial, conservation is the key to solving our nation's freshwater demands, says the National Wildlife Federation. For instance, the country can save millions of gallons a day by using more efficient irrigation systems and water-saving plumbing fixtures, and by repairing leaking water systems.

DNR Wildlife Course Will Be Held In Roseau

"Attracting Wildlife to Your Yard" is a mini-course scheduled at the Roseau library assembly room Friday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. How to use trees and shrubs to provide food and shelter for birds and other animals will be emphasized. Ideas for supplying birdhouses, feeders and waterers will be included.

Course leader Katie Hirsch is a wildlife biologist with the non-game program of the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Wildlife.

Printed materials from Department of Natural Resources, Soil Conservation Service, Extension service, public library and private collections will be on display.

"Attracting Wildlife to Your Yard" is the first session in the annual spring "Grow Your Own — and Like It!" series sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education Council. "Raising Fruits in the Northland", led by Henry Marshall of Morden, Manitoba, is scheduled for Friday, March 30; "Garden Planning" will be Thursday, April 12; and "Super Salads, Naturally!" is set for April 19.

All sessions are in the Roseau library assembly room at 7:30 p.m. There is no admission charge. Refreshments will be available. For more information contact Betty M. Johnson at 463-2181.

DNR NEWS

Campground Hosts

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Division of Forestry is recruiting volunteers to work as "campground hosts" at selected state forest campgrounds this summer.

Campground hosts will be unpaid volunteers who are given a campsite, free of charge, at one of forestry's primitive campgrounds in exchange for assisting other campers and visitors.

Program is currently being used successfully at state parks and U.S. Forest Service campgrounds in Minnesota and around the nation.

DNR says the ideal campground host is a mature, experienced camper who loves the outdoors, has a genuine interest in protecting our natural resources and is willing to assist fellow campers.

Officials said they would like to employ hosts who can stay all summer, but will consider those who will stay a minimum of four weeks.

Hosts will stay at their own camping unit at one of the larger DNR-Forestry primitive campgrounds. The site is provided free of charge. Campground facilities include fire grates, picnic tables, pit toilets and drinking water.

Hosts will work a part of each day, five to seven days a week, answering questions, giving out information and performing minor campground maintenance such as litter pick up.

Persons interested in receiving further information and an application form should contact John Hellquist, Forest Recreation Specialist, Box 44, Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Deer Shiners

A deer shiner who shot a 14-point buck last fall near Red Wing discovered that trophy hunting is an expensive sport when he was sentenced recently in the city court room.

The judge fined the offender $1,000, suspending $750, but also assessed $50 court costs, ordered him to perform 400 hours of public service, and directed him to pay $250 to Turn In Poachers Inc. — the amount paid out by the TIP organization to an informant who provided the DNR with the information that led to the arrest.

Deer shiner's rifle was confiscated and authorities are in the process of confiscating a truck used to transport the deer.

Receiving a phone tip that the deer had been shot, a conservation officer drove to the site and found the still warm gut pile where the animal had been field dressed.

Reasoning that the shiner might try to register his kill — perhaps with the idea of entering it in a "big buck" contest — the officer drove to the nearest registration station and found the man in the act of registering the deer.

When confronted with what the officer knew, the man confessed his guilt and was arrested.

Meanwhile, a Tenstrike man is going to spend 30 days in the Beltrami county jail and pay $1,400 in fines and court costs for deer shining and attempting to escape from a conservation officer.

Department of Natural Resources reports that Gordon Eickstad was convicted by a jury on Jan. 31 after four hours of deliberation.

He was arrested by a conservation officer on Sept. 27.

Judge Clinton Wyant fined Eickstad $1,103 plus $300 in court costs and sentenced him to a year in jail. The jail sentence was stayed for two years with Eickstad placed on probation on condition he pay the fine and court costs, serve 30 days in jail and commit no other offenses.

A 90-day jail sentence for shining wild animals was stayed for one year.

Wildlife Week

"Water: We Can't Live Without It" is the theme of National Wildlife Week, sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation — and Kermit the Frog is honorary chairman of the March 18-24 observance.

Kermit is one of Jim Henson's internationally acclaimed Muppets and FWS officials said he was a natural to head up the event.

"Kermit is immensely popular with millions of people of all ages," said Jay D. Hair, NWF Executive Vice President, "and besides, who knows more about the importance of clean water than a frog?"

Hair said the water conservation theme was chosen to make Americans aware of the critical importance of life-sustaining water.

"Water is basic to survival," he pointed out. "It sustains all life forms and is essential in every industrial process: in cooling machinery, in assimilating wastes, in transportating products. But useable water supplies are dwindling because of contamination, mismanagement and waste."

Beaver Season

Beaver trapping season will remain open throughout most of the state until April 30, the Department of Natural Resources reminded trappers, but the season closes February 29 in the Mississippi River Zone which extends from Hastings to the Iowa border.

Beaver populations are high throughout most of Minnesota and the DNR is encouraging trappers to take beaver, particularly in areas where they are causing damage.

Trappers are reminded that they need valid 1984 trapping and small game licenses beginning March 1. More details on spring beaver trapping regulations can be found in the "1983 Small Game Hunting and Trapping Regulations."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Scientists are still unsure about how and why the dinosaurs became extinct. There are a good number of theories: climate changes; the donosaurs' inability to adapt; and their steadfast refusal to wear seatbelts. But the jury is still out.

Now, scientists cannot travel back in time and discover why the dinosaurs went the way of the dodo bird, but perhaps much can be learned from watching the same process taking place today in the continued decline, and perhaps ultimate fall, of America's once-fearsome labor unions. I have watched this process for some time and will venture to predict that, should labor unions choose to continue on the path followed by the stegosaurus and friends, the death certificate will read as follows: death by suicide.

The decline in both the political and economic clout of labor union officials that began 30 years ago is largely self-inflicted. In the 1950s labor unions could claim the allegiance of roughly one-third of all working men and women. By 1970, union membership fell to 25 per cent of workers. Today, unions represent fewer than one in five American workers.

In the political arena, labor union officials not only represent a smaller percentage of Americans — despite their claims to speak for all working Americans — but also fail to represent even their own members on a vast array of public policy questions.

Thus, while four millions new jobs were created in 1983 as a direct result of President Reagan's low-tax, low-inflation economic policies, most labor union "leaders" were lining up to denounce the president's policies.

Poll after poll shows that union members oppose tax increases to cut the deficit and support reductions in federal spending. Where do the union bosses come out on this? They collect dues from their members and spend it to push for more taxes on their members and a continuation of the government spending spree that causes high deficit spending.

What the union bosses are selling, the union members simply aren't buying anymore. We saw this quite clearly in 1980 when the unions launched a full-court press for Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale. Over 40 per cent of union members simply said, "No, thank you," and pulled the lever for Ronald Reagan and his pro-growth, pro-jobs economic policies.

Is it any wonder that union members are suing their unions for taking their dues and handing them over to the big-spending politicians without their members' consent? Is it any wonder that labor unions now lose more union elections than they win? Or that union members are petitioning more often to have their unions decertified?

Membership institutions that mock their members and ignore their interests quite deservedly lose the loyalty of their members. And more important to those union officials, they lose the members' dues.

And while union "leaders" have been ignoring the political concerns of their members for years, they haven't done them any favors in the economic arena either. By forcing featherbedding rules into union contracts and pushing wages above market levels, union officials have put their members out on the streets and handed their jobs over to foreign imports and non-union workers. The steelworkers' union has not helped its unemployed members by having them unemployed at $22 per hour rather than employed at $16 per hour.

Now there has been some marginal willingness on the part of some unions, such as the airline unions, to eliminate unnecessary work rules, which lowered productivity, and to show wage restraint. As a result, the airlines saw employment increase by 5,900 jobs in 1983. But although such negotiations have grabbed the headlines, they are the exception rather than the rule.

Refusing to make serious reforms, the unions have decided instead to gamble all on the 1984 presidential elections. Breaking tradition and ignoring the interests of their membership, the AFL-CIO and the National Education Association have endorsed Walter Mondale before the Democratic Convention in San Francisco. How does a union member who supports John Glenn or Fritz Hollings feel about that? And what will those two senators have to say the next time a labor lobbyist asks for their support on some special interest legislation. Their response might well be unprintable. After November 6, 1984, Walter Mondale may be the only person, of either party, who will return Lane Kirkland's phone calls.

Union members pay good money to have their interests represented by union officials.

It's time they got something for their money.

George, George, George, say it isn't so. Not one but two more columns by the otherwise lucid and well-reasoned columnist George Will explaining that the American people are undertaxed? It just couldn't be. Yet, right before me I have two columns from the back page of Newsweek magazine dated Jan. 2 and Jan. 16, and up in the left-hand corner, glaring out at the reader from behind steel-rimmed glasses, is a photo of George Will with piercing gaze, looking, no doubt, for our lunch money which he believes would be better spent by the federal Treasury.

Despite the familiar visage and the large block letters identifying the columns as the handiwork of George F. Will, I hesitate to believe even a died-in-the-wool Tory capable of such, well, nonsense.

The column dated Jan. 16 argues that in 1985 either President Reagan or a President Mondale will and should raise taxes on the American people. This prediction, phrased in the imperative, is based on two incredible assertions. First, that federal spending has been pared back as far as possible, and second, that the American people are — are you ready? — paying too little in tribute to the Internal Revenue Service.

Federal spending cut to the marrow? Come on, George. Federal spending was $657 billion in fiscal year 1981 and will climb to more than $848 billion in fiscal year 1984, an increase of $191 billion. Not only has federal spending increased in the past few years, it is increasing at a more rapid rate of growth than during the none-too-pleasant Carter years. The Grace Commission, AKA the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, has just released its final report which found potential savings of more than $424 billion in the next three years simply by bringing sound management and equitable pay and pensions to the federal government. George, there is still enough fat left in the federal budget to keep a dozen David Stockmans busy for decades.

The further claim that the American worker is undertaxed is ridiculous on the face of it and comes at a most inopportune time as mortal taxpayers are just now beginning to wrestle with Washington's belated Christmas present — the 1040 statement.

Will goes on to write that "there has not been a significant increase (in federal income taxes) since the Korean War." This conveniently avoids mention of "bracket creep," the insidious hidden tax where inflation pushes taxpayers into higher and higher tax brackets. Every one per cent increase in inflation causes the tax revenues flowing into the coffers of Washington, D.C. to increase by 1.6 per cent. (This abomination will not end until 1985, when the indexing of tax brackets — a provision of President Reagan's 1981 tax cut — takes effect). Will's assertion also skirts the issue of the 1978 hike in social security taxes which, while not technically an increase in the income tax, sure could fool the American taxpayers — a majority of whom pay more in social security taxes than they do in income taxes. Remember TEFRA, George, the so-called Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, which of course was neither equitable nor fiscally responsible but the largest tax increase in the history of our nation, prior to which the social security tax hike could claim title to being the biggest goucher of the American taxpayer. One must add to these the nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax of 1982 and increases in state and local taxes.

Taxes have gone up. Spending has not gone down, but rather has continued to careen out of control. The facts argue not for another increase in the taxes laid on working men's and women's pay, but restraint in government giveaway programs.

Perhaps the cruelest cut came in George Will's Jan. 2 column where he argued that "a nation with money for Cabbage Patch Dolls is too prosperous for its own good. We are," George tells us, "undertaxed . . . when money is chasing those dolls."

Come now, George, the children? Are you seriously suggesting that any parent with $20 in his bank account to buy a Cabbage Patch Doll for Betty Lou should instead have that cash snatched away to pay the bills run up by an irresponsible federal government? The holiday season has passed and this is a rather cruel and tardy immitation of Ebenezer Scrooge. When Bob Cratchet works hard for a living to pay the bills and keep the creditors from the door, it is unforgivable to assert that his Christmas savings really should pay for some bureaucrat's expense account.

Shame on you, George Will. I'll lay you ten to one odds that Tiny Tim is a supply-sider.

Research Shows Premarital Test Predicts Divorce

by Jeanne K. Hanson
'U' M News Service

A questionnaire administered to engaged couples across the country as part of their premarital counseling can predict with 80 per cent accuracy which couples will divorce, separate or have serious marriage problems and which will remain happily married during the first three years of marriage.

"Love is irrelevant here," said David Olson, the University of Minnesota family social scientist who in 1978 developed the premarital inventory called "prepare" and, along with graduate student Blaine Fowers, recently tested its predictive validity. "Prepare" is the first premarital inventory ever to be tested in this way; the results are now being readied for publication.

Although all the engaged couples who take the "Prepare" inventory say they are in love, the fact remains that about a quarter of all new couples are separated or divorced within the first three years of marriage, Olson said. Premarital couples, he added, typically ignore general warnings and deny that problems could happen to them. Olson hopes that couples will take the test and heed its warnings. If "Prepare" points out problems, the couple should discuss and begin to resolve them before they marry, said Olson, thereby improving their chances of a happy marriage.

Of the 11 main areas explored by the 125-question inventory, which the partners take separately and then discuss with a counselor, four seem to be the best predictors of early marital success and hence worthy of special attention from couples, Olson said. They are:

(1) Personality issues, such as concerns about the future spouse's drinking or smoking, messiness, jealousy, unreliability, tardiness or dependency;

(2) Communication issues, such as an inability to share one's feelings with one's partner, upsets at the expression of criticism, frequent put-downs or excessive complaints;

(3) Conflict resolution problems, such as fear of conflict, arguments over little things or arguments that never seem to get resolved; and

(4) Realistic expectations about marriage, such as realizing that most couples do have problems in their relationship, that these problems do not go away with marriage and that a spouse cannot meet all the partner's needs.

The couple's agreement on basic religious values was only slightly less effective in predicting marital future, Olson said.

Egalitarian roles, financial management, leisure activities, sexual relationship, children and marriage and family and friends are questionnaire areas that did not prove to be as good at predicting a couple's early marital future. It's not that these things aren't important, Olson said, but rather that they do not discriminate as well among couples.

Almost none of the engaged couples had discussed financial management, for example, so differences among couples did not emerge clearly there. And child-rearing issues, a common source of marital conflict, are often not even confronted within the first three years of marriage.

Olson stressed that there are no right or wrong answers on "Prepare," only areas where partners agree more, called relationship strengths, or areas where they disagree more, called work areas.

This follow-up study drew on a population of over 30,000 couples from across the country who had taken "Prepare" in the last five years, Olson said. Couples took "Prepare" as part of the premarital counseling they received from their ministers. Approximately 7,500 clergy of virtually every denomination have been trained to administer and discuss the computerized inventory with engaged couples. Clergy who use the instrument generally use it with all the couples they marry, Olson said, although they may see a higher percentage of first marriages. However, the sample is probably representative of all premarital couples, since divorce rates in the two groups are almost identical, he said.

From this large sample, the researchers then drew two smaller samples, one of 79 couples who had divorced, separated or become unhappily married within the first three years of their marriage, the other of 59 couples who had remained happily married during this period. The information, provided by a sample of 103 clergy counselors, was confirmed by follow-up questionnaires to the couples. Comparing the premarital profiles of these two groups yielded the prediction accuracy rate of 80 per cent, Olson said.

Another group that emerged from the follow-up study were those couples who had decided not to marry at all after receiving their premarital counseling, Olson said. These couples — about one in eight of those who had taken "Prepare" — had scores similar to those couples whose marriages — encountered trouble, so they probably made a good decision, Olson said.

Clergy counselors are being told of the results of this study, Olson said, and so will be able to tell incoming couples that the inventory has predictive validity. They are already trained to concentrate on both relationship strengths and weaknesses in their sessions and typically give more counseling to couples with more disagreements, Olson said.

But Olson does not advocate giving out individual scores or even couple scores to the premarital couples, much less a divorce warning. "We're glad our predictions are this good — it shows that we're asking the right questions," Olson said. "But we could be wrong about an individual couple. After all, there is the other 20 per cent."

PAVING EQUIPMENT to be used by North Country Paving, Inc., of Thief River Falls is checked by Curt Hovet and Gary Lian, owners of the new company. North Country Paving has also acquired an asphalt plant which is located west of Thief River Falls and will be in operation in early May.

Schooners Win Best Run Of 83 For Rally Here

Prairie Schooners street rod club of Thief River Falls received one of the top awards presented at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Street Rod Association (MSRA) in St. Paul recently.

Last year's Schooner president Marty Lendobeja was presented with the award for the "Best Rod Run of 1983", following a summary of the other 12 weekend events which were in competition for the award.

Winning event was held by the Schooners at member Roger Weise's farm during the Fourth of July weekend. MSRA President Phil Van Tassel said that the MSRA board based their decision, in part, on the concern shown by the Prairie Schooners to find safe shelter for more than 100 visiting families when a severe storm hit the area. Local club members not only found shelter for the women and children in nearby basements, but also found safe indoor storage for the more than 100 custom cars. This was the first major award the local club has received from the MSRA.

That "Run To The Farm" has now been held for three consecutive years, and is one of two major events sponsored annually by the Prairie Schooners. Plans are already in motion for that other big event, "The North Country Auto Show" which will be held at the Thief River Falls sports arena complex in May.

Prairie Schooners membership includes about 40 families who either own, drive, are working on, or just have an interest in modernized old cars. People interested in further information about the club can contact Ed Wals.th, Bryan Steiger or Randy Adamson of Thief River Falls.

City Council Goes To Closed Session

Thief River Falls city council held a relatively short meeting last night in city auditorium, approving purchase of approximately $117,000 worth of utilities department equipment, plus thinner plastic refuse bags and a acting on few housekeeping items.

Nearly all other items on the agenda were referred back to committee, and after hearing a presentation on the "Star Cities" program, the meeting was adjourned to go into a closed "executive session" for the purpose of obtaining legal advice regarding rezoning of the Julian Gunderson property and obligations on the Consumers Coop building.

Purchases approved for the utilities department were all budgeted items, and were all awarded to the low bidder, with one exception. That exception was a backhoe costing $34,200, plus $2,385.60 worth of accessories. That purchase from Case Power and Equipment of Grand Forks, ND. was approved on grounds that the machine was a demonstrator exceeding specifications, and was given a new equipment warranty by the dealer. List price of the machine was reported to be $58,000. Since the low bid was from the same dealer, the attorney advised that purchase of the higher priced piece of equipment was acceptable.

Other purchases approved included a three-quarter ton pickup from Westside Motors for $8,699, plus undercoating for $290; 105,000 feet of various sized 600 volt electrical cable

PCA Notes 50th Anniversary At Annual Meeting

Boyd Christensen from Prairie Public television will be guest speaker Friday when Production Credit association of Thief River Falls conducts its 50th anniversary stockholders' meeting at the Best Western Inn of Thief River Falls.

Registration will begin at 11:15 a.m. with a complimentary dinner for invited guests to be served at noon. Business meeting at 1 p.m. will include election of one director with the term of Edward G. Moe expiring and three regular members and three alternates to the nominating committee. Reports will be given by president Harlow C. Johnson, board chairman Dona Rock of Mentor, and credit and financial committees.

To be recognized at the meeting will be a number of farm families which have been PCA members for the past 30 years or more. They include Edwin Andol, Raymond Bakken, Floyd Brandt, John M. Carlson, Clinton Dahl, Brynolf Grahn, Carroll Hanson, Tony Jochim, Jack Jensen, Rose Ellen Kimble, Dick Marquis, Joe Novacek Sr., Oscar Olson, Robert Parnow, Gordon Pittman, George Reed, Mervin Rindahl, Mylan Ruud, Harry Sigerud, Henry Sikorski, Myron Sorter, Harley Thompson and Warren Wilson.

Balance sheet of the association shows total assets at the end of 1983 of $31,369,305 and liabilities of $25,786,290. The association has $27,755,597 in loans to members with $1,079,642 interest accrued. Total net worth of the cooperative is $5,583,014 including $2,665,970 in Class B stock, $2,805,499 in surplus reserve and $111,545 in participation certificates.

The local PCA was started 50 years ago with government loans under the Farm Credit Act, $5 shares of stock invested by original directors and stock sold to farmer borrowers. Since December of 1953 the government funds used to help establish the association have all been repaid and the PCA is owned entirely by the farmers it serves.

"The basic credit philosophy of the PCA of Thief River Falls has been and still is to provide sound credit to improve the economic well-being and quality of life of farmers located in the territory it serves," president Harlow Johnson said.

WALL FULL OF AWARDS lines the office of Delmar Hagen of rural Gatzke, who has been involved in a number of community and area organizations over a long span of service. Delmar and his wife Eunice built a new home on their farm a year ago, but Dalmar ran into health problems and says it seems he spent more time in the hospital than in the new home last year. In appreciation for the care provided by nurses during his hospitalizations, he has established an LPN scholarship loan fund through Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls.

Judge Russell A. Anderson, who is presiding at the spring term of district court here, granted the motion made by attorney George M. Manning of Bemidji, who is representing Koop. Trial of Koop on charges of attempted first degree murder, aggravated assault in the first and second degree and assault in the second degree has been placed on the calendar for the spring term of court here.

Koop is charged as a result of an alleged attack on his former wife and others with a tire iron. He has been held since his arrest on the day of the alleged attack at the Pennington county jail with bond set at $100,000.

Judge Anderson ordered that the examination under Rule 20.21 take place in Crookston on March 27 and that the private psychiatrist retained by the defense be present at the examination.

Feed Grain And Wheat Signup To End Friday

Farmers in Pennington and Marshall counties are reminded that the deadline for signing up for participation in the 1984 wheat and feed grain program ends on Friday, March 16.

There have been many rumors out of Washington that the program would be changed and the deadline extended, but as of now there have been no changes," states manager Phil Bergland of the Pennington county ASCS office.

"If there is a late change in the program, all farmers who have signed up will automatically benefit," he said. "If any producer has made the decision that he is going to be in the 1984 program, he is urged to call at the ASCS office between now and Friday. If the program is changed at a later date, he will at least have his name on the list and will be eligible for any added benefits."

As far as the ASCS office knows at this time, anyone who has not signed up before March 16 is out of the program for 1984. If you have any questions, call 681-1612 in Thief River Falls or 745-4251 in Warren.

Sue Stigen Service Recognized . . .

Hagens Fund Scholarship As Nursing Appreciation

SCHOLARSHIP DONORS Delmar and Eunice Hagen of Gatzke pose with Sue Stigen, a former LPN at Northwestern hospital, whose name is associated with the scholarship program. The Hagens have donated $5,0000 to the Sue Stigen scholarship loan fund in recognition of the excellent nursing service Delmar believes he has had during a number of hospitalizations. Stigen was one of Hagen's favorite nurses during a lengthy hospitalization here early in 1983 and asked that the fund be operated in her name. In typical Hagen humor, he says he has made a deal with his doctors to continue a $2,500 gift to the program annually as long as the doctors can keep him alive. "If they let me die," he says, "they have to make the payments."

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"I've made a deal with the doctors," confides the 74-year-old Gatzke area farmer who has undergone five heart bypasses. "As long as they keep me alive, we'll put $2,500 a year into the nursing scholarship fund.

"And if they let me die," insists Delmar Hagen with a obvious twinkle in his eye, "they'll have to make the payment." The doctors would probably tell you Delmar lies a lot. That would be an accurate diagnosis.

Hagen has established a scholarship loan fund for licensed practical nursing students through Northwestern Hospital services in Thief River Falls. He opened the fund with a $2,500 donation late in 1983 and added another $2,500 early this year. And he plans to continue the annual funding as long as he lives, in appreciation for the nursing care he has received during the course of many hospitalizations.

"In my heart, they were all angels," he insists.

And one of his favorites from the Northwestern Hospital staff has been selected to have her name associated with the scholarship program. At Hagen's request the fund has been named the Sue Stigen Scholarship Loan fund.

Delmar and Sue are members of a mutual admiration society. Stigen equates Hagen with her estimation of the perfect patient. Hagen says Stigen had a caring attitude that went beyond normal expectations and that her bedside manner was superlative among many excellent nurses.

Hagen has some basis for his judgment. He was hospitalized for 76 days in 1983, suffering from pneumonia prior to his heart surgery, dividing his time between Northwestern hospital and St. Luke's hospital in Fargo, ND. He has previously been hospitalized for an appendectomy, back surgery, pneumonia, bursitis, shingles, a couple of other operations and has been "hurt a few times".

"I really have no right to be alive," he says, only half in jest. "I told the doctors more than once that I thought they were wasting their time with me. But I'm fortunate to be alive and I've had more fun this past year than I've ever had."

Ironically, the nurse who inspired Hagen to name the scholarship after her is no longer able to pursue her profession. She last worked on the hospital floor last July, but since then has often been a patient herself — the last time for seven weeks.

Sue Stigen has diabetes, peripheral nerve damage, an arthritic condition and bones that fracture easily because of her diabetes. She has had six fractures on one foot and

Area Farmers Owe FmHA $202 Million

More than a third of the farmers in eight northwestern Minnesota counties are borrowers through the Farmers Home administration and owe well over $200 million to the federal lending agency. Loan applications presently being processed through FmHA offices in Thief River Falls, Warren, Crookston, McIntosh, Ada, Hallock, Mahnomen and Roseau are expected to significantly increase that outstanding loan total.

Maurice McLinn, who has been assigned to northwest Minnesota to expedite the FmHA loan process here due to a backlog of loan applications in county offices, said this northwest district has 3,328 farm borrowers as of February 2, 1984, with loans totaling $202,940,000 for an average loan total per farmer of $60,980. The 1974 U.S. census of agriculture lists 9,396 farms in the counties served by the offices named, and that number is not believed to have changed substantially during that time.

It appears likely that the FmHA loan average per borrower would be higher in the disaster declaration counties served by the offices in Thief River Falls, Warren, Crookston and McIntosh, McLinn said. "I don't recall seeing any loans for less than $50,000," he said, but added that the loans he sees are the "tough ones" which county supervisors are considering turning down.

"A pattern has developed where the larger the farm acreage the greater the financial problem," he said. "As a result, I am probably seeing more of the larger loan applications and fewer of the smaller loans which are being processed on a more routine basis. I have asked the county supervisors not to turn down a loan until I have had a chance to review it, but I haven't spent any time with the routinely approved loans."

As a general rule, McLinn said, he has concurred with the county supervisors in their decisions to refuse loans. More than 40 loans have been refused, he said, based on constraints placed on the agency to show potential capability of repayment.

McLinn could not list a figure for the largest volume loan granted to an individual borrower during his service period here. Loans are being made every day and such figures could change. "But I have seen farmers with two million dollars of debt through a combination of FmHA and other lenders and I am told

Moccasin Club To Study Culture Of Mums in 1984

At a recent meeting of the Moccasin Garden club held at the Inga Geving home, members decided to devote some time at each meeting in 1984 to the culture of chrysanthemums. This study was suggested since mums are short lived perennials unless proper care is given.

As a program feature, Inga Geving, program chairman, showed a variety of slides, including scenes of Arizona.

The meeting was called to order by Olga Nelson. Rhodella Tieman read the poem "Buds of Beauty." The members answered roll call by relating their problems in growing mums.

Special activities for each club meeting were discussed and planned. As a preview of the August meeting, Joan Nelson introduced the making of fragrance gifts.

Information was given about the Spring Workshop to be held March 31 at Roseau. The hosting club will be the Four Seasons garden club of Roseau. To correspond with the workshop theme, "Hats Off to Spring," members are asked to wear an old-time hat for the spring hat fashion show. Members were also reminded to bring items for the Country Store.

It was also noted that the Horticultural flower show will also be held at Roseau. Members agreed to again donate an award for the show. This year's award will be given in memory former Sun-Brite club members: Hazel Pearson and Evelyn Kruse.

Attending the meeting, in addition to those already mentioned were Christina Anenson, Marianne Nelson, Eva Lendobeja, Alice Lendobeja and Valerie Torstveit and Chad.

The next meeting of the club will be held March 27 at the home of Olga Nelson. A cone craft workshop will be conducted at the meeting by Mrs. Nelson.

Hazel Nelson gave the treasurer's report, and Harryet Larson read the secretary's report in the absence of Selmer Sorter. She also read the communications, which included a thank-you note from Melvin Saugen, and from Milton and Marion Davidson, who included a $10 donation to the club.

It was noted that members hospitalized at Northwestern were Ted Gusa, Edgar Horien and Harry Engen, who had had surgery. Members were asked to remember Med Merell, who is ill at home; and congratulations were extended to the Revs. Rick and Nancy Lund, who recently became parents of a son, Christopher Matthew.

It was also noted that 33 senior citizens from Middle River, Newfolden and Holt had attended the Winter Shows at Crookston on February 21; and that Gerry Nelson, Olga Johnson and Junis Tanner were among those attending the Valentine party at St. Joseph's Catholic church in Middle River.

Bernice Wagner was the winner of the prize given for wearing green in observance of St. Patrick's day, March 17.

Area Farmers Owe FmHA $202 Million

county offices in this area have made loans of a million dollars in prior years."

The FmHA official said loans are routinely made to farmers with negative net worth figures, based on the premise that with the returns from average crop years the loan can be repaid. The supposition is that there will be average crops produced during each year of the term of the loan.

McLinn said that he was not surprised that many loans applied for could not be made by the agency. In nearly all instances where appeals for reconsideration have been made by applicants who had been refused loans by county offices prior to his arrival, the prior decision of the county offices has been upheld, he said.

"I believe the county offices were generally doing a good job," McLinn said of his assessment of the local situation. "The problem here was that offices with skeleton staffs of a supervisor, assistant and a couple of clerks couldn't begin to handle the overwhelming volume of loan applications they were receiving because of the crop disasters.

"What people are unable or unwilling to understand is that making a loan is a lot easier than collecting it. Supervisors are charged with protecting the interests of the U.S. government, and there are times when they have to simply set the office work load aside and go out and service the loans they have — make farm visits, inventory livestock, or even try to collect some payments.

"Now when we have some 20 additional employees working overtime doing nothing but work on loan applications and doing no loan servicing, we are able to direct greatly increased attention to making loans. Right now I'm expecting that in another three weeks or so we should be pretty well on top of things from a loan processing standpoint."

McLinn said that the number of new loan applications has not been unusual and it would appear that most of the people who qualify have already made their application for financial assistance.

Asked if the agency is more likely to be making loans now where repayment seems to be a relative impossibility, McLinn said he didn't think so.

"What I have told the county supervisors and the loan assistants we have brought in is that if they have a borderline question on making a loan to come down on the side of the farmer. I haven't asked them to break any law or to violate any federal regulations," he said.

"We recognize that not all borrowers will be successful in their farming enterprises. But if failures are to come, our intervention at this time will at least spread the economic impact which such failures will have on their communities."

McLinn said he hopes the public will not take to heart all the recent criticism of the agency and its representatives in this area.

As an example, he cited one farmer who came to the FmHA office with a stack of papers in a cardboard box and wanted the office personnel to sort it out and fill out his application. He was advised to take the material home and complete an application form, since it would take hours of the officer's time to do that work. The applicant then proceeded to publicly berate the agency for its failure to provide him with adequate service.

"I guess I believe we're here to help provide assistance to people who need it," McLinn said, "but I also think that people who want help should make some effort to help themselves. Not all of the people who are badmouthing FmHA have made that effort."

Hagens Fund Scholarships For Nurses

because of her condition she has been advised not to continue to work as a licensed practical nurse. It was not easy for her to give up a job she was dedicated to performing, and she now serves as a volunteer at Northwestern hospital, spending Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings reviewing procedures and visiting with patients scheduled for surgery the following days.

A 1981 graduate of the licensed practical nurse program at the Thief River Falls AVTI, Stigen worked four and one-half years at a nursing home. She says the AVTI course here provided good training in the social aspects of the profession.

"I think it's important that patients talk," she said. "Giving nursing care is not just passing a pill or giving a shot. If you don't feel you have the time to sit with your patients and talk or listen to them, then I don't believe you belong in nursing."

Sue worked the 3 to 11 p.m. shift most of the time at the hospital. Because she had been a hospital patient many times herself, she felt the social, emotional and family needs of patients with whom she worked. She agrees with Delmar that sometimes it seems that talking does as much good as taking pills.

Delmar's wife Eunice admits that Delmar probably is a pretty good patient. "He's not always so good when he's well," she says, "but he usually doesn't complain very much when he's hospitalized and it's true that he never gets down so far that he can't laugh. If he has any strength at all, he'll use it to give the nurses a good-natured hard time."

Hagen is not above dipping his thermometer in a cup of coffee and having the elevated temperature send his nurse screaming hysterically down the hall. He would spin his favorite stories from his actual and make-believe past, chide the single nurses about their romances and tell outrageous lies that had to be taken seriously until the punch line arrived.

One such lie involved his early days in Montana when he recalls one winter that things were especially rough. He had no money to buy feed for his few scrawny chickens so he fed them sawdush. That spring when 13 eggs put under a sitting hen hatched, all of the chicks had wooden legs and two were baby woodpeckers.

Nor is Delmar averse to feeding his doctors a line. After he was out of the hospital following by-pass surgery, he over-exerted himself doing field work, making a trip to the Twin Cities and other things his doctor advised him against. He may even have fudged on his "no salt, no sugar, no nothin' diet". At any rate he wasn't feeling well and called his doctor for a consultation.

"I told him I thought I had asthma," Hagen said. "He asked me why I thought so and I told him my neighbor has asthma and that's how it acts. I said I was going to go over and borrow some of my neighbor's asthma medicine. He said I better get into his office. I went."

When Delmar was ready to leave the hospital in Fargo, the nurses held a party for him, complete with a cake. At Christmas he sent a greeting card and expressed thanks for their care while he was a patient. One nurse replied, advised him that her romance was going well, and added what Delmar considers to be the perfect compliment: "You would approve of him."

If one were to count experiences and activities, Delmar Hagen has already lived several full lives. His office wall is covered with recognition and service plaques and other awards are on his desk and shelves. From the time he was "born at Greenbush in a rock pile" in 1910 until his present farming partnership with his son Larry, he has worked hard, played hard and enjoyed life.

"I remember when Dr. Adkins from Thief River was called up to Grygla to visit a trapper who was sick," Delmar says. "The trapper lived in a small shack with a dirt floor and was laying in bed under a dirty blanket when the doctor got there. 'How old are you, Carl?' Dr. Adkins asked him. He said he was 28. 'No,' Dr. Adkins said, 'you must be older than that. You could never get your underwear that dirty in only 28 years.'"

Delmar says there is some truth in the story, but probably not very much.

He met his wife Eunice while she was teaching school in the Gatzke area and he had just shipped in a large flock of sheep. He and his sheep dog "Dempsey" — who Delmar says knew more about sheep than most people would ever learn — were thirsty and stopped at the school for a drink. "To make a long story short," Delmar says, "she got the dog and I got thrown in on the deal."

Delmar and Eunice now live in a house built last year on their farm near Gatzke. A large patio door to the southeast offers a view of snow-covered fields awaiting spring planting.

"People look at this land and tell me what a miracle God has created here," Delmar said. "I have to tell them the land looked a lot different when God was running it."

Among his many accomplishments, Hagen lays claim to a Montana state record and possibly a world record for skinning a sheep. The feat is recorded several places, he says, and was set during a government program to reduce sheep flocks. The hides were purchased by the government for two dollars each. While most skinners were around the 10 minute mark, Delmar's record was one minute and 21 seconds.

Although Delmar says that all his relatives who learned to read and write moved to Montana or California, he enjoys his northern Minnesota existence. He used to do a lot of yodeling on his farm, he said, but during a tonsilectomy his vocal cords were severed. "It was terrible," he said. "My ears hung down and it took two years before I could even swear properly."

Such are the stories that Hagen carried with him and shares with nurses who provide him with hospital care. Sue Stigen was one who appreciated his sense of humor and ability to laugh through physical adversity. She wants to publicly thank Dalmar and Eunice for their establishment of the scholarship fund and is pleased that her professionalism helped contribute to its creation. Although she will be getting married soon, she says the name of the fund will be left unchanged because her co-workers and patients knew her by that name.

And although Delmar Hagen compares himself to "a 1910 Model T with two flat tires and no compression", he is well enough to take great delight in recognizing the services of the many nurses who have made his hospital stays more bearable.

"I think this makes me feel the best of anything I've ever done," Hagen says about establishing the fund. "Outside of shooting a timber wolf," he adds reflectively. "You can print that."

GRANDCHILDREN provide a spark of youth for Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Hagen of rural Gatzke. On Tuesday Delmar turned "74, going on 100". Born in 1910, he compares himself to "a 1910 Model T with two flat tires and no compression", but thoroughly enjoys young people and especially his grandchildren. In appreciation for nursing services he has received during a number of hospitalizations, Hagen and his wife have established a loan fund for LPN students through Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls.

Durenberger Bill Provides State Relief

State and local governments would receive much needed relief from the cost burdens of complying with federal regulation under a bill he has introduced, according to Senator Dave Durenberger.

Durenberger's bill, the intergovernmental regulatory relief act of 1984, would produce relief in two ways:

(1) By reimbursing state and local governments for direct costs they incur in complying with new regulations; and

(2) By requiring a reduction in existing costs either by reimbursement of the costs, by a reduction of the regulatory requirements themselves, or by a combination of the two.

The bill also requires that the President prepare an annual report estimating total costs incurred by state and local governments in complying with federal regulations.

"Under our current system, Congress need not face the full costs of implementing legislation it passes," Durenberger said, "because it is able to shift a considerable amount of costs onto cities, states, and counties through the regulatory process."

Senator Durenberger said that the basic premise behind the bill is that if Congress passes legislation to pursue a national purpose, the federal government, not the states or cities, should pay the costs of achieving it.

Mn. Employers Put Veterans Back To Work

Thirty-four Minnesota employers have applied for the emergency jobs training act and developed job training programs designed to put veterans to work while defraying some of their cost for job training.

Morris Nooner Jr., director of the veterans administration regional office and insurance center at Fort Snelling, also said that the regional office had received 942 applications from Minnesota veterans who want to participate in the current emergency jobs training program.

Nooner said employers interested in receiving reimbursement for training or retraining of veterans for 50 per cent of the veterans' starting wage, up to a maximum $10,000, should contact their local job service office or the veterans administration.

Korean and Vietnam-era veterans interested in qualifying for this program should also contact the local job service office or the veterans administration for further information and assistance.

After some dickering about the relative merits of various types and thicknesses of plastics, council approved a sanitation committee recommendation to accept the low bid for garbage bags, from Wisconsin Film and Bag Inc., Shawana, WI.

Alderman Bill Penning expressed opposition to the purchase on the basis that the 1.25 mil thick bags were thinner than the 1.35 mil bags presently in use. However, Alderman Ken Murphy reported that the bags had passed all tests for strength, noting that the type of plastic was more important to than its thickness. Those bags will be provided in rolls of 50 and 100, at a cost of $54.50 per 1,000 bags.

Other items approved by the council were the use of revenue sharing funds to provide an additional $500 for the community band, bringing their budget to $2,000 for the year; and renewing of club liquor licenses for 1984, effective April 26.

Items referred back to committees included:

— Request for removal of "No Parking" signs on the east side of Kendall Avenue between Second and Third Streets, referred to the safety committee;

— Application for liquor license by Loren McCullough of the Magic Dragon restaurant, referred to the license committee;

— Greenwood Cemetery commission proposals for a rate increase and reduction in perpetual care revenues, referred to finance committee;

— Park board recommendation to advertise an employee position vacated by Sue Belto, referred back to park board for consideration of a either a lateral transfer from another department or hiring of a person presently working part time.

Presentation on the "Star Cities" program was given by City Planner Jack Quinlivan and Jerry Sandstrom, executive director for Jobs Inc. They presented promotional materials to be used in "selling" the city to prospective businesses, including a tape and slide show, a "teaser" brochure, and a booklet with more information for businesses expressing serious interest in locating here.

While council was very complimentary of the locally produced slide show, they found a number of obvious grammatical errors in the booklet, which Quinlivan said could be corrected in the final version, except for the cover, which states, "Here's The Facts." Printing is being done in Brainerd.

Council approved the approximately $5,500 cost of the promotional materials, which are one of the requirements for designation as a "Star City" by the state of Minnesota, making it eligible for certain funds.

In announcing intentions to adjourn the meeting for purposes of holding a closed "executive session," Mayor Bob Carlson explained that there were two matters about which they needed to consult privately with city attorney Paul Ihle, and asked him to explain the exceptions to the open meeting law.

Ihle explained that all meetings of governing bodies must be open to the public, except for labor negotiations or to discuss "threatened or pending litigation," recommending that the council use that exception since both sides involved in the matter of the Gunderson property had publicly stated their intentions to bring suits against the city depending on council's decision.

Ihle explained that the closed meeting could only be used to obtain his advice, and ask questions regarding that advice, and could not be used for the purpose of open discussion or making a decision on the matter. He advised that a transcript of the meeting would have to be made public as soon as any threat of litigation was over. Although reporters present were invited by council members to sit in on the meeting, they were advised by Ihle that they would be unable to report any of the proceedings, and unanimously agreed to leave.

Carlson noted that they would also seek advice from the attorney regarding written notice from attorneys representing Consumer's Coop, threatening suit if the council does not proceed with an option to purchase their building on the corner of Second Street and Atlantic.

Mayor Carlson noted that the meeting would be adjourned to 4 p.m. Tuesday, March 20, for the purpose of reaching a decision on whether to leave the Gunderson property zoned R3, allowing Gunderson to build two 12-unit condominiums along the river; or rescind that zoning change, leaving the property R1 (low density residential).

Also to be discussed at the March 20 meeting will be plans for 1984 street improvement projects.

HONORARY GIRL SCOUT status was bestowed on Mayor Bob Carlson at the annual Girl Scout banquet held at Redeemer Lutheran church on Monday evening. Kittie Cornell, neighborhood chairman for the scouts, presented the mayor with a Girl Scout tie tack, in appreciation for his support in promoting girl scouting in Thief River Falls. In addition to signing a proclamation declaring March 11 through 17 as Girl Scout Week in Thief River Falls, Carlson was guest speaker for the approximately 150 girls and their leaders attending the banquet.

Cancer Crusade In County To Aid Research

Ernie Swanson, crusade chairman for the American Cancer society's Pennington county unit, says that the "war against cancer" is finally being won and points to the rising survival rate as proof. There are over five million Americans alive today who have a history of cancer, he adds.

"Research into cancer treatment and cancer prevention has had these encouraging results," Swanson said, "but cancer is still with us. This year about 450,000 Americans will die of the disease, about 7,400 in Minnesota. We are seeing significant progress but we still need to keep fighting, to keep funding research and spreading more information about ways to prevent cancer and how it can be detected early enough for cure."

Swanson, who quoted the above figures from the 1984 cancer facts and figures published by the American Cancer society, is heading the Pennington unit's crusade efforts this year.

"We know we need to raise dollars for research and for education so that we can finish the war against cancer," he said. "We volunteers take a real satisfaction in knowing that our work has helped in the progress that has been made. We intend to keep working."

He announces that the crusade effort is now underway in the local community and anyone interested in helping can contact him at 378-4262.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hottis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise
Southwest State University, Marshall

The experts were concerned with the reaction to "The Day After." This movie, telecast in November of 1983, disclosed the horror of the day after an atomic attack.

Psychologists told us that permanent danger might occur if teens and sub-teens watched. Politicians feared that this movie might undermine our will to defend freedom. Leaders from the two educational associations disagreed on the hazards of this movie.

There was so much pre-broadcast publicity that this movie became the most observed event on TV with more than 100 million American viewers of at least some portion of the screening.

After the fact, many Americans are wondering why this movie did not scare us to death and set us cowering in the dark corners of our basements with a white surrender flag flying from the rooftop.

Dan Johnson, a columnist and retired editor whom I know and respect, has explained why the movie failed to achieve what had been expected. How can you believe in a movie that has 20 commercials in the first 60 minutes, selling everything and anything between the explosion, fire ball and radiation, all perfectly delayed, like a football game, to allow for the sponsor messages. This certainly interfered with the story-line and getting each of us to believe.

Many years ago, a radio program terrified Americans from coast to coast. Orson Welles and the Mercury players dramatized an invasion of earth by creatures from space. Except for an opening and closing commercial and disclaimer, the program was realistic and uninterrupted.

Frankly, the interruptions minimized the impact of the movie. We and the Russians are negotiating on arms reduction. If the Russians believe that they can get something for nothing, they will not negotiate in good faith. They have tried to get us to agree to arms reduction, while they aim massive and growing missile firepower at the rest of the world and work their munitions plants at overtime.

I am sure that the Russians were hoping that "The Day After" would contribute to their inspired false "peace" offensive, all talk and no action on their part. This "peace" offensive is aimed at the democracies, where governments can be influenced; and not at those in the communist block, where public opinion has little or no impact.

When the Russians found that "The Day After" accomplished nothing for them, they tried another ploy, walking out of the arms reduction negotiation. Negotiators representing presidents from both American political parties acknowledge that the Russians have done nothing but make major propaganda statements and stall. The situation is no different with or without a walkout. Their missile expansion program, now announced, was underway!

The Russians understand only brute force and power. They know that they have greater nuclear and non-nuclear firepower than the United States. They are concerned with having to confront an equal. They are even more concerned with peaceful coexistence, knowing that the Russian people, once exposed to that disease called freedom, will enjoy it and demand more freedom.

The Russian leaders do not want long term peaceful coexistence. They do not want their people infected with freedom and knowledge. They have watched what happened in Hungary and Poland when allies got a touch of freedom.

What I can not understand is why our TV networks play into the hands of those who would destroy our freedom. Only their greed kept "The Day After" from hurting the freedom cause.

I have recently watched prime time interviews with Colonel Muammar al-Quddafi of Libya, where he said that the Libyan army only served at home as a defense force, while we all had seen that same army fighting an invasion of a neighbor state. His accusations and lies and smears against our nation got national coverage without refutation.

Then I watched Fidel Castro, also on prime time, along with his brother, smear us, without his lies being exposed. Even a Moscow propagandist was given national exposure to distort the facts of Afghanistan and Grenada, with the claim that no munitions were ever sent to Grenada. The networks had seen the stuffed warehouses and the Russian agreements that proved this wasn't true, but said nothing, and allowed airwave pollution with Russian lies.

Why do our TV network news people get pleasure out of publicizing enemy lies and presenting biased newscasts that confuse our people and embarrass our government? Valid studies indicate that these biases show through. I do not believe that most TV network news could get an "A" for objective news reporting, and that bothers me!

That's Straight Talk!

Leaner Beef Is Healthy Part Of Daily Diet

Beef is leaner than ever, yet it contributes a significant portion of the many nutrients essential to a healthy daily diet. Those are results of a nutritional analysis of beef recently completed by the U.S. department of agriculture and the national livestock and meat board.

Until now, much of the nutritional data available on beef was 25 years old. The old studies were reliable, but didn't show that today's beef is different and far lower in calories. An updated study was needed to reflect the new changes.

Today, a three-ounce serving of lean, cooked beef — (the amount recommended by nutritionists) — contains only 192 calories. That's eight per cent of the average caloric intake of an adult male. Beef is an excellent source of protein, high in qualify and considered to be "nutritionally complete" because it contains all eight of the essential amino acids in their proper ratio.

As a result, a three-ounce serving of beef provides 45 per cent of an adult male's recommended dietary allowance of protein, as determined by the food and nutrition board of the national research council.

Comparison tests, using the latest laboratory methods and computer technology, show beef to be considerably higher in B vitamins, niacin, iron and zinc than other red meats, poultry and fish. Sixty-two per cent of the iron in beef is "heme iron," a form that is far more usable by the body than iron found in many other foods.

Lean beef available on the market today has what nutritionists refer to as "high nutrient density." That means it is relatively low in share of calories and relatively high in contribution of essential nutrients. The studies were conducted in conjunction with the national livestock and meat board, with cooperation from laboratories of the University of Kentucky and Michigan State university. Funding was provided by the U.S. army Natwick research and development command, the Texas Cattle Feeders association and the Michigan Beef Industry commission.

"Contract For Life" Reduces Hwy. Fatalities

Highway accidents are the leading cause of death among teenagers. While safer cars, better roads and new laws can help, people in general and the American family in particular are the best weapon in the fight to reduce highway deaths.

An important tool for families in this effort is a "Contract for Life" which was developed by Robert Anastas, an alcohol counselor and educator for over 22 years. "Contract for Life" offers families an opportunity to make their own personal commitment to help reduce highway accidents. In this special agreement, young adult or teenage members of a family pledge to call home "for advice and-or transportation at any hour, from any place, if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink or a friend or date who is driving me has had too much to drink." The parents also agree to seek safe transportation is they are ever in a similar situation.

Since 1981, tens of thousands of families have signed a similar contract, making a personal commitment to be responsible drivers and to help family members avoid potentially dangerous situations. "Contract for Life" is a cooperative public service program of SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk), the National Football league and the Distilled Spirits council of the United States. A free copy of the contract can be obtained by writing to: SADD, Corbin Plaza, Marlboro, MA 01752.

To really make the contract work effectively, parents and teenagers should sit down together and talk openly about drinking and driving. Family members should feel free to express their feelings, concerns and beliefs. Everyone should read the entire contract and make sure they understand what it means before signing. No promises should be asked for or made that cannot be kept.

"This concept may not work for every family," said Paul Tschida, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public safety. "But even a thorough discussion of drinking and driving and its consequences may have benefits. Teenagers may be surprised how responsive their parents are and parents may find that their children are indeed as responsible as they hoped they would be. Like anything else, it pays to communicate, plan ahead and be prepared before a difficult situation arises."

Insurance and Safety Tips

HOMEOWNERS INSURANCE: HOW MUCH IS ENOUGH?

On the surface, the answer seems simple: whatever it takes to repair or replace your damage or loss.

Unhappily, it's not quite that easy. Most people know their house is worth more than they paid for it. But too many forget that construction costs have also skyrocketed. And they're shocked when faced with the need to repair or replace a home at today's cost.

We can help eliminate that shock. First, by providing you with a free estimate of your home's rebuilding cost value. And then, once it's insured to its full rebuilding value, by adding — for just a few dollars a year — a Guaranteed Replacement Cost feature to your homeowners policy. That way — if you should suffer a bad loss, you'll be paid whatever it costs to replace the damage with new materials of the same or similar type and quality — even if it's greater than your policy limit.

We represent INA/Aetna. But we work for you.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

For the last two weeks we have studied stocks, bonds, precious metals, gems and collectibles as investments. We have found that they are not "sure things" as to income or preservation of capital value. Today let's look at limited partnerships, real estate, options and commodities.

Most stock brokers have a big inventory of limited partnerships in real estate (shopping centers, apartments, office buildings, hotels, farms, factories, housing developments and more), oil and gas, cattle feeding and breeding, crops, and even motion pictures. The general partner (the broker) puts the deal together for a fee, charges a sales commission and gets a continuing management fee. You share in the profits and losses. Many of these deals are based on buys at excessively high prices or high risks so that there is little likelihood that you will make money.

These limited partnerships emphasize that they are tax shelters that can reduce your income tax liability. That is true because they are losing money, and that loss is shared by each partner in proportion to his interest. The significance of a tax shelter is lost if you never get your investment back with an increment of profit equal to what you could have earned in something else. Selling the limited partnership involves another commission, and getting what you paid out of it may not be easy.

There are many real estate opportunities, if you have a down payment. You can buy a home, apartment complex, store, office building or shopping center, and get a mortgage for the difference between your down payment and the right price. If your new home is located in an area of rising value, the economy is sound, mortgage interest rates are reasonable, and there is a general optimism in the community, you may be able to sell your home at a price that returns the purchasing power you invested.

If those good conditions do not exist, you may be shocked to discover how difficult it can be to sell your home at any reasonable price, even at a loss. What is true for your home is also applicable to other real estate.

When you sell or buy real estate, it is common to use a broker. The broker gives you a contract asking for a long term exclusive right to sell your property. His commission is spelled out. While they usually ask for five per cent to six per cent of the selling price, this is negotiable, and I have seen brokers take on the selling task for three per cent to four per cent for a limited period, so that you can find another broker to take on the task if the first doesn't get you results. In selling real estate where there is a mortgage on the property, financing can become a problem.

Many real estate brokers suggest what they call "creative financing," which involves the seller taking a second mortgage for the difference between the first mortgage and what the buyer can put up. Sometimes this creative financing involves you continuing to own the property and being responsible for the mortgage, and the buyer making monthly payments to you. If the buyer doesn't pay you, you still have to pay the mortgage holder. If you have purchased a second property, which is financed, you could find yourself stuck with two mortgage payments.

There are other investment opportunities. Options are traded, like stock, and are contracts to buy and sell stock at certain prices. Option values go up and down with the stock they involve. They are tricky and require a continuing knowledge of the market and the company. I have seen instances where individuals have multiplied their money investing in options, and lost everything even faster. A few years ago there was a national wire story about a couple giving their broker keys to a new Rolls Royce after his advice earned them more than a half million dollars. Two weeks later the same couple sued the same broker for having lost everything. To give you some idea on the time needed to invest in options intelligently, this broker and his client were on the phone 16 times each day, seven days a week.

Commodities are another area that interests individuals because of the stories of big profits. Commodities investment involves buying and selling contracts to buy and receive or sell and deliver a commodity (wheat, corn, oats, copper, industrial oil, plywood, rubber, coins, sugar, soybeans, orange juice, potatoes, eggs and lots more). Almost nine out of ten commodities investors lose money. It's a tough game.

We're still looking for that "sure thing."

Most everyone is now preparing for spring. Farmers are busy planning their crops and financing, businessmen are ordering spring merchandise and our various forms of governments are making future plans. As we attempt to figure out what we are going to do in the months ahead, we tend to forget who has complete control of our future, complete control of our crops and complete control of our finances. Wednesday's prayer service will focus on the near future of our community," Rev. Holt Walker, pastor at Bethany Lutheran church explained.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

In American politics, as in life, there are no final victories and, thankfully, no final defeats. When we make progress in cutting taxes, beating back overregulation and restraining the cost of government, it comes slowly and only after a great deal of effort. There is no Gordian knot to cut. No magic wand to wave. No commanding height to capture and ensure permanent victory. If we despair that progress is slow, let us remember that the advocates of higher taxes and bigger government have labored long and hard since 1932 to bring us to our present problems. They did not construct the welfare state in a day or one presidential term. And they did not despair. They worked harder.

Now the tables have turned and the steady march of power and money to Washington has slowed and, in many cases, has been reversed. Still, there is no reason to believe that we will be able to undo the damage of two generations in a single four-year presidential term.

One would think that this is obvious. But the lessons of history are lost on some of those who were most active in their support of President Reagan during the 1980 campaign. Unhappy with the pace of deregulation and the continued growth of government spending, they have become the president's most vocal and bitter critics. They ignore the slow and hard-won progress made in reducing waste, slowing inflation, and enacting the tax cuts of 1981. They focus, instead, on the yet unfulfilled parts of the 1980 mandate. Did these people really expect Ronald Reagan to walk into the Oval Office on Inauguration Day and wrestle the federal budget to the ground and beat it senseless before breakfast? The world, unfortunately, doesn't work that way.

Some of these critics go so far as to yell "betrayal" and suggest that the president is not seriously trying to reduce federal spending and has perhaps thrown in with the Washington elite, who push for more power in Washington. Such criticisms are unfair, counterproductive, and mask the very real progress made in the last three years in combatting federal extravagance and bureaucratic arrogance.

A good example of such progress can be found in recent reforms to the Davis-Bacon Act. Davis-Bacon is a federal law passed in 1931, during the Hoover administration (statism did not begin with FDR), which mandates that federally funded construction companies must pay workers the "prevailing wage" in an area.

It was originally enacted to keep black workers from winning contract bids away from white, unionized construction workers. Not the most auspicious of motives. Over the years it has been expanded to cover fully 25 per cent of all construction in America. By stretching the definition of prevailing wage to include urban wages in rural areas and by defining prevailing as the top 30 per cent of all wages, the Davis-Bacon Act has inflated construction costs by as much as $1 billion to $2 billion a year. The higher construction costs increase federal spending. They also cost jobs. The act keeps an estimated 100,000 construction workers out of work. The compliance costs of Davis-Bacon alone totaled $127.68 million in 1982, and Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan reports that the paperwork required more than 5.5 million employee hours. He adds that "none of it is read. None."

Congress has refused to repeal the Davis-Bacon Act. But the Reagan administration has recently reformed the regulations for the act by more accurately defining the "prevailing wage rate." This reform, which has just withstood a court challenge by union leaders, will save American taxpayers more than $600 million every year.

Yes, this is half a loaf. The act should be repealed in its entirety. But the saving of $600 million is tremendous progress and Secretary Donovan is to be commended for his hard work on behalf of the American taxpayer.

This effort to take some of the pork out of the Davis-Bacon act is but one of many successful, yet largely unrecognized, success stories of this administration's battle against waste and spending abuse. Vice President George Bush's Task Force on Regulatory Reform has reformed or repealed many regulations and saved the American consumer some $14 billion in one-time costs and more than $15 billion in annual costs.

I can empathize with those who feel that progress in pruning federal spending is coming slowly. They are right. The battle to reduce federal spending is difficult, long and often frustrating. But these critics are wrong to spend so much time complaining, and they are directing their wrath in the wrong direction when they criticize the president. Their efforts would be better expended working hard between now and November 6, 1984, to elect a Congress that will support, rather than oppose, efforts to control the runaway costs of federal spending and regulations.

Gerald Carmen: Doing the Impossible

Ralph Waldo Emerson was one of America's greatest writers, but this was little help to him one afternoon when he and his son Edward were attempting to get a stubborn female calf into the barn. They pulled. They pushed. They cajoled. But the calf would not be moved until a servant girl came by and putting her finger into the calf's mouth, simply led the calf, through this maternal imitation, into the barn.

That night, Emerson opened his dairy and wrote, "I like people who can do things."

Americans have always looked up to the people who can do things. The men and women who crossed the prairies and deserts to settle the West. The inventors of the telephone, the airplane, the computer. The men and women who put a man on the moon and the space shuttle in the heavens.

There is, I believe, a special place in heaven for "Can-Do" people. They never complain or explain why a thing cannot be done. They simply do it. Others may tell them that man was not meant to fly or that there is no oil in Alaska, but they keep at it. Small businessmen whose friends warn them of the difficulties of starting their own businesses persevere and build empires from nothing except hard work and a good idea. (And then create jobs for their doubting friends and neighbors.)

All this is by way of a lengthy introduction of a man who three years ago took on a job I rank several notches more formidable than the cleaning of the Augean Stables. The man is Gerald Carmen, and three years ago he was appointed by President Reagan to head the General Services Administration (GSA), the agency that oversees all government purchasing and has the responsibility for running all federal buildings.

In taking the job, Carmen had the responsibility of running a bureaucracy larger than the Departments of State, Commerce or Labor — all cabinet level departments. Moreover, he took over an agency wracked by corruption and scandal. (More than 140 GSA employees and contractors had been convicted of bribery and other crimes in the 10 years before Carmen took office.) Yet in less than three years, Carmen has rooted out corruption at all levels and increased the efficiency of GSA by dropping the number of GSA employees from over 37,000 to 28,000, saving the taxpayers millions.

Carmen also consolidated GSA building space and reduced the amount of space rented or owned by GSA by over one million square feet, a 22 per cent reduction, exceeding his original ambitious goal of a 20 per cent cut.

Carmen soon hopes to have all federal office space reduced from an average of 175 square feet per bureaucrat to an average of 135 square feet, more in line with space allotted in private businesses. This move alone would save taxpayers another $100 million.

Fewer employees and reduced costs, which have dropped GSA's budget in real terms by 9.6 per cent, have not come at the expense of reduced services. Rather, efficiency has increased, as reforms have sped up the delivery of supplies from an average of 41 days to less than seven days.

No average bureaucrat, Carmen has frozen purchases of new carpets and drapes and office equipment for GSA and cut back on travel costs.

Indeed, Carmen's victories in stamping out corruption, increasing efficiency and cutting costs have won him strong praise from surprising quarters. Ralph Nader has called Carmen Reagan's "most impressive" appointee.

By doing what was commonly believed to be impossible — taking a federal bureaucracy and making it efficient and lean — Carmen has removed one familiar excuse used by other agency and department heads. No longer can appointees throw up their hands and explain that it simply cannot be done. Carmen has done it and done it well.

Carmen will be leaving his post at GSA within a few months and is heading to Geneva, Switzerland to be the American representative to the United Nations' headquarters in that mountainous nation. We will miss his leadership and "Can-Do" spirit here in Washington, D.C., but I suspect — and hope — that the United Nations will never be the same after his tenure.

Older Workers Week Observed Across Nation

National Employ the Older Worker Week is being observed through March 17, to increase public awareness of the abilities and skills of older workers and recognize their contributions.

For nearly 20 years, Inter-County Community Council (ICCC), Oklee, has operated several programs which serve and employ older people. It currently employs 19 through the senior community services employment program, funded by the Minnesota department of economic security.

Participants are required to be at least 55 years old and meet low income guidelines. Jobs provided vary, but all involve community services, particularly for the elderly. Some workers provide transportation for others, enabling them to travel to doctor appointments, stores, or wherever they need to go.

ICCC also uses some funds to employ senior outreach workers who seek out elderly people having difficulties and help them to resolve their problems.

Many participants, like Elsie Sixta in Red Lake Falls, work in senior craft shops. "I've been here almost seven years now," says Elsie, "and besides helping me financially, the job gives me a chance to be away from home and see people."

Elsie and her husband moved to Minnesota in 1956 from Nebraska, where her husband had been an implement dealer. Although her relatives are still in Nebraska, she chose to remain here after her husband's death in 1980, citing her job as an important part of that decision. Noting that work was not available in Nebraska, she added, "I've been here so long, I would miss my job."

According to Roy Jorgenson, executive director of ICCC, older workers have a positive attitude about their work and show very stable job performance. Contrary to what might be expected, he says the number of workdays lost decreases as age increases. Workers above 50 miss fewer scheduled workdays than those in any age group below 50. He notes that ICCC and other employers benefit from the skills, judgement, reliability and maturity that comes with experience.

Hilda Opdahl, senior program director for ICCC, notes that although there are presently no openings in the program, people who are interested should call her at 796-5144 or write to Inter-County Community Council, Box 187, Oklee, MN. 56742. Assistance in hiring older workers may also be obtained from local Job Service offices.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q: Can animals get cancer too? If so, what kinds do they get? What causes cancer in animals? Can it be treated, or must the animal be "put to sleep?"

A: Yes, animals can develop cancer. The same cancers that occur in people occur in animals, which is why animals are important to research scientists looking for the causes of cancer and more effective ways of treating it.

Some animals seem to have higher incidence rates of certain types of cancer than others. Small rodents, such as mice and rats, seem to be more prone to breast cancer than other animals. Bone cancer occurs most often in large animals. Leukemias and lymphomas, cancers of the blood and lymph systems, are fairly common in cats and cattle. Veterinary scientists have found that boxers seem to develop cancer more frequently than any other breed of dog.

Except for certain specific virus-related cancers in animals, the causes for these diseases are not clearly understood. Animals share the same environment as people and are exposed to many of the same cancer-causing substances. In several cases the development of tumors in farm animals has alerted scientists to the hazards of agricultural or industrial chemical pollutants.

If detected early, cancer is treatable in animals just as it is in humans. Animal tumors can be treated with surgery, radiation, and chemotherapy in much the same ways as cancer is treated in humans. These types of treatment are expensive, however, and in many cases cost is the determining factor in choosing whether an animal with cancer is treated or "put to sleep."

Q: My husband has been smoking a pack of cigarettes a day for over 30 years. I am very worried about him getting lung cancer. Would this new chewing gum with nicotine make him quit?

A: You are right to be concerned about your husband's smoking. Heavy smokers have about twenty-three times greater chance of developing lung cancer than nonsmokers and put themselves at increased risks for many other diseases as well.

The nicotine-spiked gum you refer to is called "Nicorette" and is available by prescription only. It will not make anyone stop smoking, but studies have found that it doubles the success rate for those quitting smoking when used with a program of support and counseling. The gum is used to wean smokers off nicotine while they break their old habit patterns associated with smoking behavior.

Because the nicotine in cigarettes is addictive, many heavy smokers suffer withdrawal symptoms when they first quit. These include mood swings, irritability, difficulty concentrating, restlessness and impatience.

By removing these unpleasant symptoms, the gum should help smokers concentrate on changing their habits. Each piece contains 2 milligrams of nicotine, or approximately as much as one cigarette. The chewing gum releases the nicotine slowly over a period of 20-30 minutes, producing a blood level of nicotine similar to that achieved by smoking a cigarette.

Minor side effects of the gum include hiccups, sore throat, transient mouth ulcers and upset stomach. The gum itself is not addictive.

Nicorette was developed in Sweden 12 years ago and has been marketed there and in Britain and Canada. It was only approved by the FDA in January and marketed here for the first time in late February. Studies in the U.S. have found it effective in helping hard-core smokers get through the initial stages of quitting.

Ask your husband's doctor for more information about the gum. The Cancer Information Service can also send you a free booklet on how to quit smoking called Clearing the Air. To request a copy, call the Cancer Information Service toll free, 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q: These days it seems that everything causes cancer. What things have really been proven to cause cancer?

A: It is important to remember that although several suspected causes are being studied, only a limited number of factors have been identified as increasing one's chances of getting cancer. The American Cancer Society recommends that you change those risk factors you can control and be aware of the ones you can't change.

Of the known factors, there are some that you can control:

+ Excessive use of alcohol increases cancer risk, especially if you smoke.

+ Smoking cigarettes increases your risk of lung caner 10-fold.

+ Cigars, pipes and chewing tobacco increase your risk of mouth, larynx and esophageal cancer.

+ Overexposure to the sun increases your risk of skin cancer.

Your age and medical history can also affect your chances of getting cancer:

+ Risk for most types of cancers increases as we get older.

+ Women who take estrogen for menopause symptoms have a greater risk of endometrial cancer — especially if they take it for a number of years.

+ Anyone with a family history of breast or colon cancer is at increased risk for these cancers.

+ The daughters of women who took DES during pregnancy have a greater risk of vaginal cancer.

+ Anyone who had radiation therapy earlier in life may have an increased cancer risk.

Ask your doctor to recommend a regular check-up schedule that's best for you.

There are also some occupational risks due to exposure to certain substances:

+ People who work with asbestos are at an increased risk for a variety of cancers, especially if they smoke.

+ Certain industrial agents (nickel, chromate, vinyl chloride, etc.) also increase one's risk.

Other factors that are being studied include diet, food additives (such as nitrites), pesticides, fungicides, and chemicals and dusts that are particular to certain occupations.

The ACS recommends the best way to protect yourself against cancer is to be familiar with the warning signals and act immediately if you have one, and to have a cancer-related check-up as often as recommended by your physician.

For more information about risk factors and the cancer warning signals, call the Cancer Information Service toll free at 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q: I was treated for cancer when I was sixteen. I'm fine now, but I'm having trouble getting medical insurance. Can you recommend any insurance companies that offer reasonable coverage for people who have had cancer?

A: We cannot recommend a specific company. However many states have comprehensive health insurance associations made up of all the major health insurance companies. These associations in most cases were created by state legislation to assure that every resident, regardless of medical history, could purchase full medical insurance coverage.

In Minnesota anyone who has been refused coverage, offered coverage at a higher than average rate or coverage with exclusionary restrictions is eligible for this service. For more information, contact: Minnesota Comprehensive Health Association, P.O. Box 9309, Minneapolis, MN 55440, (612) 372-5410.

In North Dakota a similar service is administered for all state residents by Blue Cross Blue Shield. The address and phone number for more information is: Robert Carlson, Secretary-Treasurer, Comprehensive Health Association of North Dakota, 4510 13th Ave. S.W., Fargo, ND 58121, (701) 282-1236.

Q: My mother told me she read in a magazine there's something in baby pacifiers and bottle nipples that causes cancer. Is there anything I can do to make my baby's pacifier safe?

A: Baby pacifiers and bottle nipples made with rubber may contain nitrosamines. Laboratory animals fed high doses of nitrosamines have developed cancer. The Consumer Product Safety Commission is testing rubber baby pacifiers and bottle nipples to find out how much nitrosamine they contain and how much a baby is likely to swallow while sucking them. The CPSC also is encouraging manufacturers to find ways to reduce or eliminate the nitrosamines in baby products.

The Commission advises parents to wash new pacifiers and bottle nipples thoroughly in soap and warm water. Do not boil them — high heat releases nitrosamines.

Although there are pacifiers available made from vinyl plastic rather than rubber, these also are being studied. They contain another chemical, phthalates, which appears to cause cancer at high doses in laboratory animals.

If you have any further questions about these studies, you can call the Consumer Product Safety Commission's national toll-free number 1-800-638-2772.

Q: I have a good friend who has cancer and is in the hospital. I want to go visit her, but I'm worried about what to say. I don't want to make her feel worse by saying the wrong things. Can you give me any advice?

A: Social workers and psychologists who see cancer patients in hospitals find that visitors can do a lot of good. They help patients cope with the stress of being ill and hospitalized and keep them in touch with their normal lives.

It's not unusual for friends and family members to feel anxious or uncomfortable about how to talk with a person who is seriously ill in the hospital. And it's good for a friend who's feeling this way to think about it before the visit. It might be helpful to talk with someone in the hospital social services department, a pastor or hospital chaplain before your visit.

Here are some general suggestions that might make your visits more comfortable.

— Try to behave as you normally would when visiting your friend. If you normally would hug, or kiss her or take her hand, do the same in the hospital. Touching and smiling are personal messages that say more than words.

— Sit near your friend. Sitting rather than standing shows you intend to stay for a while. It's also more comfortable to talk with someone at your own eye level than someone standing above you.

— Instead of asking "How are you: ask "How are you feeling today? or "How are things today?" It's less stressful for someone with a long illness or serious condition to talk about her days than her overall medical condition.

— People who are ill don't want to think about their disease all the time. Give your friend the news about things and people she's interested in.

— Let your friend set the pace for your visit. If she asks about things unrelated to her illness, take her cue. If she wants to confide in you about her condition and treatment, be a good listener. Give her realistic support.

— You needn't stay a long time in order to have a good visit. If you sense your friend is getting tired, suggest it's time for you to leave. If she asks you to stay longer, you can.

Q: My mother just found out she has breast cancer. She says she didn't have a lump, just a brownish discharge from the nipple. I didn't know that was a sign of cancer. Does nipple discharge always mean cancer?

A: Nipple discharge can be caused by infections of the breast and breast cysts as well as by breast cancer. It is normal only in pregnant women and new mothers.

Although nipple discharge can be caused by conditions other than cancer, it should always be checked by a physician.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — I have a war-related injury and my children are ready to start college. Are they entitled to any help from the Veterans Administration?

A — Perhaps. The college-age children of veterans who suffer from permanent and total service-connected disabilities may be entitled to education benefits similar to those granted veterans. The student can use this benefit for college as well as for other types of training, and can make application either through the Veterans Administration directly or through the veterans affairs office at school.

Q — I now receive 100 per cent service-connected disability compensation from the Veterans Administration. My wife and I plan to divorce, and I am wondering whether she will be entitled to a portion of my compensation after we are divorced?

A — No. Her entitlement to all benefits ceases when your divorce is final.

Q — I have a disability claim pending with the Veterans Administration. I have been told to sign a power of attorney. What does that mean?

A — There are many service organizations who retain accredited representatives to assist in presenting claims before the VA. A power of attorney would authorize one of those organizations to act in your behalf for your claim. It is voluntary on your part.

Q: I was recently discharged from military service and need to know if I am entitled to unemployment compensation?

A: Recent changes in federal law have resulted in eligibility restrictions. Veterans should apply immediately after leaving the service at their nearest local state employment service-job service office and present a copy of their DD Form 214 to determine eligibility for benefits.

Q: I am interested in pursuing GI Bill training in a foreign school. What criteria has to be met before I can begin?

A: To be eligible for training in a foreign school, you must meet the same basic eligibility requirements as for training in the United States. In addition, the program of study at a foreign institution must be conducted by an educational institution of higher learning leading to a degree or its equivalent and approved by the Veterans Administration for veterans' training.

Q: I am a 100 per cent service-connected veteran. My dependents were eligible for dependents educational assistance from the Veterans Administration beginning in 1965. My wife passed away and I recently remarried. Is my current wife entitled to dependents educational assistance from the VA?

A: No. The spouse of a veteran must generally have 10 years from the date of entitlement to use VA educational benefits. Your entitlement period has passed.

DFL Precinct Caucuses Set At 3 Locations

To enable Pennington county DFL party participants to attend precinct caucuses at convenient locations, caucuses have been scheduled Tuesday at Goodridge and St. Hilaire as well as Thief River Falls, according to Fran Stromberg, county DFL chairman.

All caucuses will start at 8 p.m. with registration at 7:30 p.m., Mrs. Stromberg said. By law, no other public meetings or events may be scheduled during the caucus hours.

Cornelius Appelman will convene the caucus at the Goodridge senior center which is intended for party members and others from the townships of Goodridge, Deer Park, Hickory, Highlanding, Kratka, Mayfield, Reiner, Smiley and Star and the city of Goodridge.

James Dalager will convene the caucus at the library in St. Hilaire for Bray, Black River, River Falls, Polk Centre, Sanders and Wyandotte townships and the city of St. Hilaire.

Fran Stromberg will convene the Thief River Falls caucus in the Lincoln high school cafeteria for all of the wards in Thief River Falls and the townships of Silverton, Norden, Numedal, North and Rocksbury.

Mrs. Stromberg defines a precinct caucus as a meeting of neighbors who share a common concern for the operation and policies of local, state and federal government. State law requires each major political party to hold a caucus for every election precinct each general election year to elect officers and conduct business. An election precinct may be a township or a city ward.

Precinct caucuses offer voters their first opportunity to express a preference concerning candidates who will be elected in November. By participating in the caucuses, voters may influence the issues of campaigns and party platforms.

Each precinct is allotted delegates according to the number of votes cast in that precinct for the party's candidates in the last general election. Each precinct nominates and elects delegates to the next level (county or legislative district) convention. Candidates seek endorsement by delegates at state, congressional district and county or legislative district party conventions. Delegates are elected to the national convention at the district and state level.

Anyone participating in a precinct caucus may offer a resolution for consideration, Mrs. Stromberg points out. Resolutions which are approved will be presented for approval at the county convention. If approved there, the same process will continue through district and state conventions and may become a plank of the national party platform.

"Everyone interested in having a voice in government is encouraged to attend one of the precinct caucus sessions," Mrs. Stromberg said. "Often a single voice can serve as a catalyst to stimulate action."

Region 8A Tournament Field

Region 8A high school basketball tournament will be played at the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) this weekend, with the Lake of the Woods vs. Warren Friday night semifinal winner expected to be the favorite in the Saturday night finals.

It's a new cast of characters in Region 8A this time around. Akeley won its first ever District 29 crown last week, giving District 29 a different Region 8A entry in each of the past five years. The Anglers face Twin Valley in the tournament opener Friday. Twin Valley is representing District 30 for the first time since 1977, and that title was preceded only by regional appearances in 1940 and 1934.

Warren returns as District 31 champion, a title the Ponies last won in 1981. Argyle was the District 31 titlist the past two years, but switched to District 32 this year when East Grand Forks and Crookston dropped from Class AA to Class A status and joined District 31.

Lake of the Woods was last a District 32 winner in 1980 when the Bears went on to a Class A state tournament runner-up finish.

Miscellaneous

+ 1984 Minnesota Amateur Hockey Association (MAHA) state Pee-Wee tournament will be played in Warroad this weekend, an eight-team, two-division, round-robin tournament featuring Blaine, Roseau, Edina, Proctor, Eden Prairie, Warroad, Rochester and the Duluth Stewarts. Games start Friday with Roseau playing Blaine at 11 a.m. Competition winds up Sunday with the state championship game scheduled for 3 p.m. Roseau enters the tournament with the best record at 39-1, but Edina at 40-3-3 has the most wins. Also on tap this weekend is the state Bantam tournament in Bloomington, where Warroad and Crookston will be area representatives.

+ When Hibbing upset three-time defending champion Canton, N.Y. 7-6 in overtime Sunday in the finals of the 1984 National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) hockey tournament at Carol Stream, Ill., it represented the first national title for a Minnesota team since Rainy River turned the trick in 1977. Canton beat Minnesota state champion University of Minnesota-Crookston 10-5 in opening round play. UMC bounced back to repeat its third place finish of a year ago at Lake Placid, N.Y. with a 14-6 win over host College of DuPage. Hibbing finished the year at 22-4, with all four losses coming at the hands of UMC. The Trojans out-scored the Cardinals 13-10 in the two-game, total-goal Minnesota state championship playoff series. While Hibbing coach Frank Catani was guiding his Cardinals to a national title, his son, Antonio Catani, was helping lead Hibbing to a third place finish in the 1984 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament.

+ Fergus Falls, having already won the Northwest Division pennant, the Minnesota state tournament title and the Region 13 playoff crown, will face Northeast junior college of Sterling, Colorado Friday for a right to advance into the final 16 field for the NJCAA national basketball tournament later this month in Hutchinson, Kansas. The Spartans are 21-5. Northeast is 32-3.

+ Former Minnesota Twins and Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Dave Goltz has been named as the new baseball coach at Fergus Falls community college. The Spartans, of course, are a Northwest Division rival of Northland community college.

+ Ralph Anderson of Detroit Lakes reported on a recent District 22 high school basketball tournament semifinal game in which Sauk Centre's Byron Friederichs tossed in a shot with time running out to post a 44-43 victory over Starbuck. Unusual thing about the outcome was the fact that Starbuck appeared to have the game won with a 43-42 lead and had the ball out of bounds with just one second left. But the in-bounds pass went instead to Friedrichs, who caught the ball and shot it all in one motion. The Starbuck fans, said Anderson, just froze as the ball went in and it took the Sauk Centre people a couple of seconds to realize just what had happened. However, a couple of nights later it was Sauk Centre losing on a last second shot by …enwood's Steve Troen that gave the Lakers a 54- victory over the Mainstreets in the District 22 championship game.

+ Dr. Robert Baab of Crookston, a well-known figure in northwestern Minnesota amateur baseball circles, has accepted a position in …ster, Ohio, effective July 1. Baab has been anesthesiologist at Riverview Hospital in Crookston since 1962.

+ Bemidji State University hockey team, with Thief River Falls' Bob Fitzgerald and Dave Geatz in the line-up, swept the University of Alaska-Fairbanks 9-6 and 4-2 to win the NCAA Division II national tournament two-game, total-goal semifinal playoff series 13-8 over the weekend in Bemidji to run its record to 29-0 for the year. The Beavers will face Merrimack College of North Andover, Mass. (14-17) in the NCAA Division II finals this weekend, a two-game, total-goal series scheduled to be played at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday in Bemidji.

8A, 8AA Title Games Are Set For Saturday

Region 8A and 8AA high school basketball champions will be named this weekend.

+ 21 of the team's 31 members scored varsity points.

+ 10 individuals qualified for Section 8 competition 23 times.

+ 13 Prowlers competed in the Section 8 meet.

+ Thief River Falls placed fifth in the Section 8 standings, a climb of two spots over the previous season.

+ Three Prowlers — Dave Ose, Todd Wing and Jeff Rosetta — qualified for state meet competition.

+ Eighth place finish by Wing and a 12th place finish by Rosetta in the diving portion of the state meet gave the Prowlers state meet points for the first time in several years.

"It's been a good year for us," acknowledged Forney. "We hope we can build on it and have a successful swimming program here. The kids will have to work like heck, though, to match that next year. The seniors really contributed this year and we're going to sure miss their points next season."

Goodrich, Dave Ose and Jeff Rosetta will be keenly missed in the point-scoring department next winter, noted Forney. Wing, Eric Ose and Drevlow were the top-scoring underclassmen.

"We accomplished our goals this year. We're really pleased with the way the kids came along. They had some nice time drops," explained Forney, who gave special thanks to the parents, through whose efforts the swimming program has survived in Thief River Falls. He also issued an invitation to younger individuals at the middle school level to give the sport a try this summer in the U.S.S. program, or next year during the regular winter sports season.

NAMED TO serve as Lincoln high school swim team co-captains for the 1984-85 season at Tuesday's post-season banquet for the Prowlers were Paul Wefald (left) and Eric Ose. They'll succeed seniors Dave Ose and Jeff Rosetta as the Prowlers' captains.

State Tournament Starts On Thursday

Two new state champions will be crowned this week when the ninth annual Minnesota State High School League state girls Class AA and Class A basketball tournament unfolds Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Met Center in Bloomington and the Minneapolis Auditorium.

Defending champions Albany in Class AA and Henderson in Class A were sidelined in region playdowns, assuring new titlists. Albany, in fact, is now a Class A member school. Both schools lost in semifinal play. Henderson's setback was its first after 47 consecutive victories.

Two former champions, four undefeated teams, four first-timers, and six repeaters grace this year's tournament, which is expected to attract between 45,000-50,000 spectators during its three-day run, reports Larry Larson of the MSHSL.

State tournament games will be played once again at two sites — the Minneapolis Auditorium and Met Center in Bloomington. All of Thursday's Class A quarterfinal games are scheduled for the afternoon and evening at the Minneapolis Auditorium, while the Class AA quarterfinal contests are scheduled for the afternoon and evening that day at the

Say Wood Duck Houses Need Spring Fix-Up

Persons who have put up wood duck houses are reminded by area wildlife manager Gordon Forester that a little housecleaning and preparation will contribute greatly toward acceptance of the houses by nesting ducks.

"Woodies don't carry any materials into the nest boxes," Forester pointed out, "and won't nest in one that does not have some nest material, preferably three to four inches of coarse wood shavings. It's also necessary to clean out any debris or old nests of squirrels or other critters that moved in for the winter."

Forester said that the best time to do the cleaning and preparation is the first two weeks of April, just prior to the anticipated return of wood ducks to this area.

Section of wildlife personnel for the Minnesota department of natural resources will be conducting a nest box survey again this spring along the Thief and Red Lake rivers. Those who are interested in the survey or would like more information or plans for building wood duck boxes are asked to contact Forester at 681-7789.

IN PREPARATION for National Wildlife Week, March 18-24, assistant managers Ronald Bell (left) and Larry Lewis from the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge have set up a display at Northwest Regional Library in Thief River Falls. In keeping with this year's theme, "Water — We Can't Live Without It," the display includes a number of mounted wild birds and animals which are dependent on water, including this loon, an otter, a mink, a gull and a large variety of insects. Films, a slide-tape presentation, brochures and other materials are being made available for checkout from the library. Refuge personnel will also be giving programs in the schools and providing educational kits for the students.

Library Offers National Wildlife Week Features

In cooperation with the National Wildlife Federation (NWF), the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge is conducting activities in support of National Wildlife Week March 18-24. This year's theme, "Water — We Can't Live Without It" is very appropriate for the nation and the Thief River Falls area.

Activities include a display and checkout materials at Northwest Regional Library in Thief River Falls, distribution of education kits and a slide-tape presentation to area schools.

Library display features wildlife mounts, posters and information about water and the refuge. Checkout materials include a slide-tape and four 16mm movies.

Slide-tape program is a 15-minute show for all age groups consisting of 70 outstanding full-color photos depicting water and its uses, habitats, problems and conservation. Two of the four films are recommended for young school-age children. "Cry of the Marsh" is a 15-minute film describing the ecological damage done when a marsh is drained, burned and plowed. "Wild River" is a 13-minute film that shows a beautiful wild river and the communities of creatures that thrive along its banks before encroaching civilization begins to ruin it.

Juniors, seniors and adults can view "America's Wetlands", a 28-minute film showing various wetland types throughout the country. The film is a visual essay on the value of wetlands to man. "So Little Time" is a 28-minute film showing the life in a marsh and factors such as wetland drainage, contributing to the loss of waterfowl habitat.

Education kits which contain posters and class exercises for all ages, are also available. These materials are intended primarily for teachers and scout leaders, but could also be utilized by adult groups. The display and checkout materials will be at the library through March 30.

During National Wildlife Week, water will be brought to the attention of the nation's school age children in hopes they will learn to use, but not abuse, the water resource.

Quality water is a resource everyone depends upon, yet in many areas of the country, water is not suitable for human consumption. Abuses of water and watersheds are noticeable throughout the country. Drainage and land clearing continues unabated while grassed waterways and other water conservation practices are rare. Litter is accumulated along the rivers and streams and abuses from many towns and cities impact water quality.

Water from aquifers, wetlands, lakes and even rainwater is threatened by man's activities. Water is the life blood for many of the recreational activities which makes life worth living in Minnesota. It will take the efforts of a conscientious society to keep out wetlands, rivers, lakes and ground water potable for future generations. It truly can be said, "Man cannot live without water".

Facts about fresh water:

+Great Lakes contain 20 per cent of the world's fresh water.

+Half of the domestic water used is to water gardens and lawns.

+A person can live only two or three days without water.

+Seventy per cent of the fresh water on earth is frozen.

Sportshow Is Scheduled For Its 52nd Year

March 30 officially marks the arrival of the long-awaited spring when doors open for the 52nd annual Northwest Sportshow at the Minneapolis Auditorium.

Over 200,000 winter-weary fishermen and outdoor lovers are expected to attend the ten-day show March 30 through April 8. The auditorium will be transformed into a gigantic quarter-of-a-million square foot playground featuring the largest display of fishing, boating, camping and recreational equipment in the history of the show.

Over 250 vacation and travel booths representing 13 states and seven Canadian provinces will be at the show to help fishermen and their families plan their vacations and special trips.

Opening night, sponsors will present the first 2,000 children under 12, accompanied by an adult, a free spincast fishing rod and coupon for a 2-litre bottle of regular or caffeine-free Coke.

Each day the Sportshow presents a special "show within the show" featuring acts from the world over that will thrill and entertain the entire family. This year's all-new stage show features the Olympics of the Northwoods with the Lumberjacks; the Moon Shadow Cherokee Indian Dancers re-creating native American songs and dances; the tightrope act of the Thuranos; championship trick-casting with Shag Shahid; upland and water retrieving with Loral I Delaney and her champion dogs; and Moore's Madcap Mongrels.

In addition to the stage show, the Sportshow offers live wild animals, game birds, snake exhibits and the live trout fishing pond.

Monday, April 2 through Friday, April 6, nationally-recognized experts will conduct seminars from 7-8 p.m. upstairs in the auditorium arena on Canadian fishing, walleye fishing, Great Lakes fishing, bass fishing and wild turkey hunting.

Sportshow hours are 6-11 p.m., Friday, March 30; 11 a.m. - 11 p.m.; Saturday, March 31 and April 7; 12-noon-7 p.m., Sunday, April 1 and April 8; and 1 p.m.-11 p.m., Monday through Friday, April 2-6.

Stage show hours are 9:30 p.m., opening night, March 30; 3:30 and 9:30 p.m. daily except Sundays and 3:30 and 6:00 p.m. both Sundays.

One-time admission to all these attractions at the Sportshow is $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12. Tickets are available at the auditorium box offices during regular show hours.

AMONG THE wildlife benefiting from the nongame wildlife program in the Department of Natural Resources is the loon, the Minnesota state bird. Persons interested in helping preserve the wildlife programs are encouraged to look for the loon on their Minnesota tax forms, marking the line where they can donate funds to the nongame wildlife program.

Nongame Wildlife Funds Aiding Island Project In Warroad River

A new artificial island, located in Lake of the Woods at the mouth of the Warroad river, is a unique product of cooperation between governmental agencies. This island has proven to be of considerable value to migrating wildlife, say Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officials.

In 1981, the Army Corps of Engineers determined that siltation had filled up the Warroad river harbor, making the waterway nearly impassable for boat traffic. Dredging was necessary, and the Department of Natural Resources worked with the Army Corps to develop a plan which would allow for disposal of the dredge spoil material as well as benefit wildlife.

Department of Natural Resources suggested that an island be made out of the materials. Studies on other dredge spoil islands had shown that the islands are attractive to many species of shorebirds. This technique can only be used when the sediment is uncontaminated and unpolluted, as was the case in the Warroad river. Nongame wildlife program agreed to monitor wildlife use on the new island.

Dredging was performed by a barge-dredge operation, and was completed in July of 1983 with a resulting 2½ acre island being created which rises three feet above the water. This island is located 500 yards southeast of the boat launching ramp at Warroad. During the summer and fall of 1983, the island proved to be very attractive to migrating birds providing habitat for 34 species.

Shorebirds are attracted to sandy island habitat, and since the level of Lake of the Woods was raised many years ago by the construction of a dam at Kenora, many of the natural sand bars in the lake have disappeared. At times up to 700 gulls roosted on the island overnight. Franklin's Gulls, Common Terns, Herring Gulls and Ring-billed gulls were the most abundant visitors. Twelve shorebird species were sighted, including Piping Plovers, Black-bellied Plovers, Ruddy Turnstones and Dowitchers. Majestic White Pelicans, Bald Eagles, Great Blue Herons and five waterfowl species also rested on the island.

Although the island has turned out to be a haven for migrating birds and is an excellent bird watching spot, the question remains whether the island will be permanent. Ideally, the island should stabilize, and some vegetation should become established. Common Terns, (a state species of special concern), and Piping Plovers, (a state endangered species), could then colonize the island and raise their young there.

Unfortunately, the strong winds on Lake of the Woods, ice action, and wave action, have combined to cause significant erosion. Already one-third of the island has eroded away. Hopefully, the island haven will be present to greet birds as they return from their South American wintering grounds this spring.

Persons interested in helping preserve our wildlife are encouraged to look for the loon on their Minnesota tax forms. The loon marks the line where they can help preserve wildlife like the shorebirds in Lake of the Woods. Further questions can be directed to Katie Hirsch, Nongame Wildlife Specialist, 2115 Birchmont Beach Rd. N.E., Bemidji, MN 56601, telephone 755-2976.

Games Start Thursday For Girls In State

Met Center. Semifinal and championship games on Friday and Saturday will take place at the Met Center.

Pairings in Class AA Thursday at the Met Center will find Region 6AA — Edina (17-6) meeting Region 2AA — Willmar (19-5) at 1:05 p.m., followed by Region 3AA — Derham Hall (24-0) opposing Region 1AA — Burnsville (22-1).

In the other Class AA bracket starting at 7:05 p.m., Region 7AA — Duluth Central (19-2) meets Region 5AA — Minneapolis Washburn (18-6), followed by the game between Region 8AA — Little Falls (23-0) and Region 4AA — Stillwater (19-4).

Undefeateds Derham Hall and Little Falls, plus Burnsville, whose only loss was in overtime to Derham Hall, are favored to emerge as finalists. Derham Hall and Burnsville meet in the opening round, while Little Falls is in the opposite bracket, which provides the opportunity for a final game between two undefeated teams.

Class AA field includes, in addition to Derham Hall, two other repeaters from last year's tournament. They are Edina, who is making a fourth consecutive state tournament trip, and Minneapolis Washburn, who also is back for a fourth straight time.

Two first-time entrants in Class AA are Willmar and Stillwater. Former champions have been Burnsville in 1977, under current head coach Judy Johnson, and Little Falls, under current head coach Jerry Cool, won in 1980.

Meanwhile, in Class A two schools — Chisholm and Eden Valley-Watkins — boast unbeaten records and are paired in opposite brackets, thus giving Class A, like Class AA, a probable final between two unbeatens. Chisholm finished fourth in last year's state tournament, and Eden Valley-Watkins was in fifth place. Both teams return good teams, including outstanding performers Judy McDonald of Chisholm and Janice Streit of Eden Valley-Watkins.

Class A state tournament first round games at the Minneapolis Auditorium on Thursday look like this: Upper bracket — Region 1A — Lake City (22-3) against Region 4A — Glencoe (20-3) at 1:15 p.m., followed by Region 6A — Staples (23-1) versus Region 7A — Chisholm (24-0). Staples' lone loss was by 52-45 to Chisholm.

In the lower bracket starting at 7:15 p.m. Region 2A — Southwest Minnesota Christian of Edgerton (21-2) will face Region 3A — Tracy (18-6), followed by Region 5A — Eden Valley-Watkins (23-0) against Region 8A — Cass Lake (24-1).

Class A semifinal and championship games will be played Friday and Saturday afternoon at the Met Center, while Class AA will play its semifinal and title games during the evening sessions of those two days.

Chisholm, Eden Valley-Watkins, and Lake City, who was last year's state runner-up Henderson, are repeaters in Class A, while Staples and Cass Lake are the two first-timers. None of the eight schools entered in this division has ever won a state girls basketball championship.

Water Access Sites Built By State DNR

Region I Trails & Waterways Unit of the Department of Natural Resources developed or rehabilitated 16 public water access sites during the period of January 1, 1983 to December 31, 1983. These accesses are now open (except where noted) for public use and will provide improved access to the affected lakes.

Those sixteen accesses are as follows:

Becker county — Lake Sallie, Lake Ida;

Beltrami county — Big Bass Lake;

Hubbard county — Long Lake (nearly complete), Potato Lake;

Otter Trail county — Ottertail Lake-Sportsmans Club, Ottertail Lake-Riviera Ranch, Big McDonald Lake, Stuart Lake, Swan Lake, Long Lake, Heilberger Lake, Long Lake (near Dalton), Johnson Lake;

Polk county — Sarah Lake (nearly complete);

Traverse county — Mustinka River fishing access.

Department was also instrumental in the development of accesses on Height of Land Lake (Becker county); Blackduck Lake (Beltrami county); and the Red Lake River in Crookston (Polk county) through the cooperative agreement program. This program is designed to aid local units of government in providing or upgrading public water access sites within their jurisdiction.

Depending on fund availability during 1984, Region I, Trails & Waterways has plans to develop or rehabilitate approximately 20 access sites. If questions arise, please contact Dick Kimball, Water Access Specialist, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road N.E., Bemidji, MN 56601; phone 755-3972.

DNR NEWS

Fishing License Law

You might be entitled to a free Minnesota fishing license, says the Department of Natural Resources. It all depends upon whether you fit into one of the following categories:

1. Residents of Minnesota under the age of 16 are not required to have a angling, spearing or netting license.

2. A citizen of Minnesota receiving supplemental security income for the aged, blind or disabled will be issued a permanent fishing license without charge.

3. Minnesota residents serving in U.S. military or naval forces or Reserves, stationed outside the state, may fish without a license when in Minnesota on leave provided they have their leave or furlough papers on their person.

4. A permanent license to take fish will be issued without charge to any citizen of Minnesota 16 years or older whose parent or legal guardian furnishes proof of mentally retarded disability to the county auditor. A permanent license is valid for the life of the holder.

5. A permanent license to take fish will be issued without charge to Minnesota veterans having a 100 per cent service connected disability.

6. Residents of Minnesota who have attained the age of 65 may take fish by angling or spearing without a license, but must carry proof of age and residence on their person.

7. Residents receiving aid under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 or who are former employees of the U.S. Postal Service and receiving disability pay may take fish by angling or spearing without a license, but must carry proof of such disability.

8. Patients of a U.S. Veterans Administration hospital may fish without a license so long as they are patients — subject to written consent of the superintendent of the hospital.

9. Patients or inmates of a state mental or correctional institution may fish without a license subject to written consent of the superintendent of the institution.

Fishing licenses for 1984 became valid on March 1 and are good through February 28, 1985.

Fish Spearing Rules

Department of Natural Resources reminded sportsmen that it is illegal to have possession of a fish spear near any waters of the state between Feb. 16 and April 30.

Purpose of the regulation is to prevent the unlawful spearing of game fish during the spring spawning season. During the spring the fish move into shallow water and into streams where they are vulnerable to spearing activity.

After April 30, resident Minnesota fishermen may spear rough fish — as defined on page 15 of the 1984 fishing regulations. Enforcement officials called attention to the fact that there is a limit on the number of suckers, redhorse and bullheads, as spelled out in the regulations.

They also pointed out spearing may only be done during daylight hours.

Rough fish spearers who are 16 years of age or older are required to have a fishing license.

State Forest Boundaries

Acreage within the Richard J. Dorer Memorial Hardwood State Forest in southeastern Minnesota would be reduced by one-half under a proposal by the Department of Natural Resources forestry division.

Area proposed for withdrawal comprises 972,000 acres. However, only 330 acres are currently in state ownership.

Proposal is included in a "state forest boundary realignment plan." The plan results from a 1982 legislative act calling for an assessment of state forest boundaries to determine if lands currently in state forests were suited for long term forest management, or if there are additional lands that might be given state forest status.

Forestry officials said the withdrawal of acreage from the Dorer Memorial Forest would bring the boundaries in line with a plan for land acquisition prepared in 1979.

At the same time, the DNR proposes to increase the acreage within the Fond du Lac, Koochiching and Lost River state forests.

Acid Rain Project

Department of Natural Resources reports that the Super America Corporation has donated four instruments that will be used by the DNR to determine the susceptibility of certain lakes to the effects of acid rain.

Department is concerned with any potential acid rain problems because of the documented destruction of fish and other aquatic life in European, Canadian and American lakes.

Four "digital pH meter kits" will be distributed to fisheries area headquarters in International Falls, Bemidji, Detroit Lakes and Park Rapids.

DNR Fisheries Chief Richard Hassinger said the gift from Super America "makes a valuable contribution towards the DNR's efforts to inventory Minnesota waters relative to the effects of acid rain."

1984 Bear Season

Minnesota bear hunters will have until April 16 to sign up for a computerized drawing that will allocate 3,880 licenses for the 1984 season.

Wildlife officials at the Department of Natural Resources said application blanks for the drawing are available at license agents.

Season will run from Sept. 1 to Oct. 14 and the limit will be one adult bear per licensed hunter.

Either firearms or bow and arrow may be used and bait stations may be set out starting August 17.

License fee will be $15 for residents and $100 for nonresidents, plus an issuing fee of 75 cents.

This will be the third year that a limit has been placed on the number of persons allowed to hunt bear.

For the drawing, applicants must apply for one of the five permit areas that will be open to hunting this fall. Those who wish to hunt as a party must place all the applications in one envelope and it will be treated as one application for purposes of the drawing. No more than four persons may apply in any one party.

Preference in the drawing will be given to those who applied unsuccessfully in previous years — providing they have submitted their driver's license number or Public Safety ID number.

Officials explained that the use of the numbering system is the only means the DNR has of keeping a record of those who applied in past years.

Loan Advocate Network Being Developed

Cooperative establishment of a farm loan advocate network to cope with a developing farm credit emergency in Minnesota has been announced jointly by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols and Attorney General Hubert H. Humphrey III.

The program named FARM (FmHA Advocacy for Rural Minnesota) will utilize 25 farm loan advocates strategically located throughout the state and a direct, toll free "hotline" into the attorney general's office, to help farmers fill out loan applications.

Farmers with any questions regarding their loan status are urged to call the toll free FARM hotline, 1-800-652-9747, to contact the loan advocate in their area.

Commissioner Nichols said that a recent federal FmHA task force found a backlog of some 1,700 farm loan applications in Minnesota, and confirmed farmer complaints of loan staff deficiencies and irregularities.

While the national and Minnesota FmHA administrators have taken action to expedite processing of the heaviest backlog in northwestern Minnesota counties hit by five straight weather disasters, the unrelenting volume of phoned and written appeals from all sections of the state indicates that the farmers and the FmHA need more help than has been available in breaking the loan processing logjam.

State FmHA director Russ Bjorhus has obtained federal authority to add 68 new loan officers in Minnesota during the past year and a half, when the agency loan demand nearly doubled due to economic and natural disasters. In the past two weeks 15 loan officers from other parts of Minnesota have been shifted to the disaster loan processing speedup in the northwestern counties.

"Some of these loan applications have been in process since last fall. With the spring seeding and planting season now only weeks away, farmers desperately need cash to line up production supplies. For many, the FmHA is really the lender of last resort," Nichols explained.

The 25 farm loan advocates have been recruited from among the experienced volunteers who have been helping fellow farmers cope with farm credit problems and the complex FmHA regulations for the past year, entirely at their own expense in time, travel and telephone bills. They will attend a special training seminar today and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, sponsored by the Minnesota department of agriculture and conducted by legal specialists in farm credit problem solving. Assistant Commissioner Anne Kanten is in charge of the advocate recruiting and training program.

Approval Given To Five Farm Security Loans

February approvals of five privately negotiated Minnesota family farm security farm ownership loans raised to 391 the cumulative total of new farm owners established by this national model program, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

All five of the new family farm security real estate transfers are seller sponsored loans for livestock farming enterprises in Douglas, Morrison, Kanabec and Stearns counties. The loans total $729,166 on the 988 acres of agricultural land.

Last month's approvals completed seven years of actual implementation of the Minnesota family farm security program. Loans at original issue for the 391 currently active cooperators totaled nearly $68 million on 62,039 acres of farm land in 66 Minnesota counties.

The new family farm security cooperators approved by the advisory council and the commissioner of agriculture for the state guaranteed loans are:

Donald and Marlys Eikmeier, St. Cloud, $150,000 loan on a 155-acre beef cattle and crop farm in Stearns county;

Tim and Marcia Jurek, Avon, $111,500 loan on a 121-acre dairy farm in Stearns county;

Herbert and Ronda Froehlich, Eagle Bend, $127,666 loan on a 160-acre dairy and hog farm in Douglas county;

Roger and Julie Lanners, Royalton, $125,000 loan on a 236-acre dairy and hog farm in Morrison county; and

Bernard and Wendy Miedema, Ogilvie, $215,000 loan on a 316-acre dairy farm in Kanabec county.

COPYCATS

Kathy and Kevin celebrate St. Patrick's Day... Kathy wears her green plaid dress, and Kevin his sweater with the emerald stripe. The hats are those we brought home from last night's party!

They don't really know what the day is all about. But they heard Dan singing in the shower, "the wearin' o' the green," and saw the color of the tie he placed on the door knob.

They don't miss a thing! That old saying that actions speak louder than words is certainly true around our children. They are regular little copycats.

That's why Dan and I make it a habit to go to church every Sunday with them. We want God and His Church to be a real part of their lives, not just something they have heard about.

Give your children a chance to know God. Go to church and take them with you.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

A long-time friend called and let me know that he had just "kicked his son out of the house." The young man, whom I had known since his birth, had twice been arrested as a drug pusher and user. After the first arrest, his dad had warned him that this behavior could not be tolerated. With the second arrest, that was it!

This kid, at 17, lived in a beautiful and expensive home with two loving parents, two younger brothers and a sister. He had his own car and a good allowance. During vacations he worked in his dad's business, which was very successful. He claimed to be into drugs for the thrills because life was such a bore.

Regularly in this fine community you read about teenagers attempting suicide or being involved in serious accidents while under the influence of alcohol, marijuana, cocaine, heroin and quaaludes.

The national statistics confirm that we have a "chemical" epidemic responsible for more than 60 per cent of the suicides, 70 per cent of the drownings, 80 to 90 per cent of the murders, 70 per cent of robberies, 80 per cent of the fires, 70 per cent of all assaults and more than 50 per cent of all family violence.

It has been estimated that more than 200,000 deaths each year are alcohol and drug related. We got very excited when more than 250 of our soldiers were lost in fighting in Lebanon and Grenada. We lose more than twice that number every day all year long and no one seems to be upset about this alcohol and drug epidemic.

Remember all of our citizens who line up to participate in not-so-peaceful demonstrations on pollution, nuclear power and defense preparation? They seem to take no interest in the hundreds of thousands of our people who are dying, right now, from alcohol and drugs.

I was visiting a high school recently where the addict son of a prominent citizen had stabbed another student, during the school day, while under the influence of drugs. This very prominent citizen was so active in civic affairs and demonstrations that she didn't have time for her son and was shocked to find that he was an addict who could kill.

This drug and alcohol addiction problem is horrendous. It afflicts just about every community, and everyone in the community, showing no respect for money, influence or ethnic-religious-racial factors. It kills. Many try to deny that the drug and alcohol problem exists, but it does!

Drugs have become a big business. I have been told that the largest cash crop in California is marijuna. One federal "bust" (raid) in Miami, FL, brought in one billion dollars (street value) in drugs. The Miami police claim that more than 300 of their reported murders each year are drug and alcohol related.

Drugs and alcohol mean big profits. For example, one 28-year-old drug dealer had an estate in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, and a townhouse in Manhattan (New York City), both worth more than two million dollars. He had a fleet of Rolls Royce and other expensive classic cars. His income grossed $100,000,000 each year, with a $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 "tax free" profit.

Knowing all of this, what can we do to help solve the problem?

A good many parents, like old Pontius Pilate, don't want to get "involved," whatever that means. These parents do not want to assume responsibility for their children. They say, "Let the city or the state do something. Let the schools do something. Let the police take care of this." They look for "easy out" answers and "specialists."

The specialists do have a place in this program to control the drug-alcohol epidemic. But they do not supplant the need for parental involvement with their children. Parents need to do more hugging, caring, communicating (including listening), knowing what's happening, and exerting some control. That control includes knowing who your kids plan to be with, and being sufficiently interested to say no to situations for which our kids are not prepared.

That control also includes taking "sick" sons and daughters to appropriate doctors when symptoms arise, including changes in personality and attitude that make no sense.

There are no simple solutions to this problem. But the problem would not be so massive if each of us did our share to help in its solution. I'm not opposed to civic concern and programs, but isn't the caring for our kids a responsibility we accepted with parenthood that deserves our priority attention. If we aren't doing something to solve the problem, maybe we are a part of the problem!

That's Straight Talk!

Each week I receive at least 10 pieces of junk mail with investment suggestions. This mail is usually followed up with a phone call from an eager "investment adviser" calling from Florida, California or some other major metropolitan area, anxious to help me make a million the easy way. I am amazed at the number of selfless individuals who have taken on the vocation of making me rich.

As a skeptic, I like to examine these opportunities to see whether they are fact or fancy. Since each of us should be interested in understanding investments, I think that a week or two devoted to this subject would certainly be a worthwhile effort. Let's glance at those "make a million" deals in this week's mail. Then, in future weeks, without gobbly-de-gook and in just plain talk, I will give you a brief picture of both the risks and rewards that investment alternatives provide.

One letter and call was from an expert on precious metals, advocating the buying of gold and silver as the best and most secure opportunity for quick big profits. Looking at the facts on gold over the past four years gave me the information that for each dollar invested in gold in 1980 you would now have about 68 cents. With the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar from 1980, you would have the equivalent of 53 cents in purchasing power for every dollar that you "saved" in gold.

That isn't the whole story. One problem with precious metals investments is that you must either store the metal or take possession. If you store it, there is a rental charge. If you take possession, you will have a charge for reweighing and rechecking the quality of your gold at the time you try to sell it.

Incidentally, one reader tells me that he took possession and "planted" his gold on his farm. He did not want a map of the gold location because he felt that might fall into the wrong individual's hands. After much digging, he now finds that he can not locate his gold cache.

Gold has gone from $34 an ounce to a high of $850 in 1980, and at this writing is about $373. That's a loss, for those who bought at the high, of almost 60 per cent in absolute dollars and much more in purchasing power. Since gold pays no interest, understanding the risks in a precious metals investment is significant. Literally hundreds of writers, advisers and "experts" were suggesting the purchase of gold. It appears that they were wrong!

If precious metals aren't secure investments, what about gems, including diamonds (long known as a girl's best friend, according to a popular song)?

Just like the salesmen who peddled the precious metals, droves of agents were selling diamonds and other gems. Diamonds not only are used for industrial purposes, but also have had a controlled marketing program by DeBeers Consolidated Mines, Ltd., that has promoted the significance of diamonds as both an investment and in jewelry. There is a continuous advertising campaign that has even promoted diamonds as something equally acceptable with both jeans and banquet formal attire.

How secure are diamond investments? In 1970, for example, a one carat high quality diamond could be purchased, without a setting, for about $1,700 to $1,900. In 1980, the same stone was selling for $52,000. By 1982, even with controlled supplies of diamonds, the price had declined to about $15,000. Colored gems, including rubies, emeralds, sapphires, opals and the rest, all have shown the same roller coaster price patterns.

Then there are the so-called collectibles, including paintings, ceramics, silver, furniture and other antiques, also promoted as good investments. The collectibles experts, Sotheby, Parke Bernet have an index which averages all of these collectibles, price-wise. It is interesting that the index was at 253 in 1980 and now is somewhere in the 250 range, showing no movement. No movement, with inflation, means that these non-earning investments produced a significant loss.

In future weeks, we will discuss all of the other investment alternatives, and try to determine if there are any sound "get rich quick" ideas that offer a minimum risk. Knowing the truth about different investment opportunities is important.

That's Straight Talk!

The Eyes Have It

What Is Light Sensitivity?

by Susan Dana
Consumer Advisor,
Corning Medical Optics

Dana

Q. I suffer great discomfort from bright light, even indoors. Is there a cure for this problem? What causes it?

A. More than 15 million Americans have light-sensitive eyes.

There are different causes, including developing cataracts, glaucoma, retinitis pigmentosa and some eye surgery. High energy blue light can cause uncomfortable glare and reduced vision for many of these people.

Now, many are finding one answer to this problem with new eyeglass lenses that offer greater comfort and improved functional vision. These unique lenses, developed by Corning Glass Works, filter out discomforting blue light while allowing longer wavelengths of light to pass through. The lenses also filter out or eliminate ultraviolet energy. They improve vision by improving contrast and reducing glare.

The experts who developed these lenses (called CPF™ for Corning Photochromic Filter) emphasize that they're not a cure for conditions that cause light sensitivity. They can bring relief from symptoms.

Trial lenses are available to eye care professionals so that people can test the lenses before making a purchase decision.

If you think you have an eye problem, you should see your eye care professional.

For more information about CPF™ lenses, write to Corning Medical Optics, MP 21-2, Corning, New York 14831.

THE SHAPE OF TOMORROW

Observatory To Receive Space Messages

In this artist's rendering, the Gamma Ray Observatory unfolds its solar arrays, which measure 70 feet from tip to tip and provide electrical power.

If gamma rays are indeed "messengers of creation," as they are called by scientists, then the Gamma Ray Observatory will be the perceptive receiver of the messages that those rays carry.

The 16-ton observatory, being built by the TRW Space & Technology Group in Redondo Beach, California, is designed to collect far more and better information of its kind than was ever before possible.

Gamma rays, emitted from matter in space, can offer clues about the creation of the universe—hence the "messengers of creation" label. The Gamma Ray Observatory will observe and measure the entire range of gamma ray energy (over 10,000 times the range of energy in visible light).

"The Gamma Ray Observatory is being heralded by the scientific community as opening up a new era in understanding the stars and the universe," says Donald C. Stager, project manager. Among other things, the observatory should help increase knowledge of our galaxy, the expansion rate of the universe, and the composition of quasars, pulsars, and black holes.

The observatory, to be carried aloft by the Space Shuttle in 1988, will gather and transmit data about 280 miles above the Earth.

Out Of This World Birthday Parties

It's time once again for your child's birthday. Hard to believe a year has passed already! You'd like to be able to give a fun birthday party and invite all the friends. Yet you need to watch the budget, too.

The answer to this dilemma? Just a little wise menu planning including a punch made from a base of instant tea. At only 2 1/2¢ per serving, instant tea gives a perfect flavor base on which to build a punch.

The punch pictured here, Star Burst Birthday Punch, contains a zippy blend of pineapple juice, orange juice and ginger ale on top of an instant tea base. Simply add a star-shaped ice mold and serve with frosted cut-out sugar cookies for a party menu that's out of this world.

Hint: To get even more mileage out of this economical punch, make it into the centerpiece. Simply slip a styrofoam ring around the middle of the bowl to create a "Saturn" effect. It's sure to set your punch and party into orbit!

STAR BURST BIRTHDAY PUNCH

1/3 cup Lipton® 100% Instant Tea
2 cups water
1 can (46 oz.) red tropical fruit punch
1 can (12 oz.) lemon-lime soda, chilled
Star Ice Mold*

In punch bowl, combine 100% instant tea powder, water and punch; chill. Just before serving, add soda and Star Ice Mold. Makes about 16 (6 oz.) servings.

Star Ice Mold:* In star-shaped mold, add water to cover bottom and freeze until partially frozen. Arrange orange slices and maraschino cherries on ice and freeze until fixed in place. Fill mold 1/2 full with water and repeat procedure. Freeze until solid.

Junket Fever

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

The legendary House Speaker Sam Rayburn used to boast that he had never set foot outside the United States and saw no need to do so. Let it be said that too few of the present members of Congress suffer such quaint reluctance to wander the globe at the taxpayers' expense.

A four-month investigation by United Press International and the Better Government Association turned up enough examples of shameless junketing to establish a deplorable pattern that is only getting worse. Congressional abuses of travel privileges are rampant. And the taxpayers are footing the bill to the tune of more than $21 billion per year.

Among the champion junketeers: Rep. Robert Badham, R-Calif. House records show that Rep. Badham spent at least 82 days on eight trips to 24 countries just during the 11-month period that ended last October. Most of these trips were made aboard Air Force planes rather than via less expensive commercial airliners. And Rep. Badham's wife flew free of charge.

Badham may be one of the more flagrant junketeers, but he hardly deserves to be stood up alone in the dock of public opinion. Scores if not hundreds of members of Congress travel for fun on the taxpayers while pretending, if not very convincingly, to be working.

In an effort to save junketeers from just the sort of attention brought by the UPI investigation, the House and Senate wink at unreported costs and incomplete accounting. UPI and the Better Government Association had to file suit under the Freedom of Information Act to discover what they did.

Many members of Congress will react to the latest spate of media reporting on junketing with resentment. Non-junketeers will resent being tarred with the same brush, at least in the public mind. And those who only rarely waste public time and money on frivolous travel may also feel wrongly accused. Their course is clear. Vote for proper accounting procedures and for enforceable guidelines on what is acceptable travel and what is not.

Until this is done, citizens are entitled to assume that too many in Congress are giving themselves paid vacations in exotic locales and then covering up the evidence. Anybody for "junketgate?"

Union Busting?

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

Continental Airlines is competing aggressively these days, offering consumers reduced air fares, helping to drive down the fares of its competitors, and providing employment to about 6,000 persons who might otherwise be on the street. This is no mean accomplishment given the airline, once the eighth largest in the United States, declared bankruptcy last September after losing $521.9 million in five years.

But what Continental did next made all the difference. Faced with a choice between going out of business altogether or tearing up its high-cost union contracts, Continental chose the latter. That led to accusations of illegal union-busting by embittered Continental employees, but it also no doubt saved the company and thousands of jobs. More importantly, Continental's action suggested a feasible route to survival for other companies facing collapse unless labor costs could be reduced.

It was inevitable that the complex and emotion-charged issues of law, equity, and economics bound up in Continental's action last year would end up being decided by the courts. And so they have been, although the case in question involved not the airline, but a small building supply company in New Jersey.

By a 9-0 margin, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the right of a company in bankruptcy proceedings to abrogate its labor contracts in question were an excessive "burden" on the company. That requirement should help discourage companies from exploiting the court ruling, and the bankruptcy statutes, to break their employees' unions.

Organized labor is reacting angrily to the Supreme Court decision, just as it vehemently condemned what Continental did last September. Labor lobbyists on Capitol Hill have already begun to push for legislation effectively repealing the Supreme Court's decision. But unions cannot repeal the economic realities forcing many companies, and indeed whole industries, to choose between uncompetitive labor costs and survival. And no one's interests are served by the corporation that pays wages and salaries it cannot afford right up until the day it goes out of business.

So, welcome back Continental. And kudos to the U.S. Supreme Court for a unanimous decision that made eminently good sense, and ought not to be nullified by Congress.

Loaded Questions

If you think you know all the answers, here are some seemingly simple questions for you to think about twice before you answer:

(1) Adam and Eve were banished from the Garden of Eden for eating what fruit?

(2) Who said, "Everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it"?

(3) In what year was Christ born?

(4) How much more reflected light do we get from a full moon than from a half-moon: Twice as much? The same amount? Four times as much? Seven times as much?

(5) Boris Karloff gained his greatest success playing a weird character in the movies. Who was the character?

(6) Which of the following rid Ireland of snakes? a) The Royal Zoological Society. b) Nobody — there were never any snakes there. c) Irish terriers. d) St. Patrick.

(7) What was the highest title that Julius Caesar acquired: king, emperor, dictator or consul?

(8) Where was the Battle of Bunker Hill fought?

(9) Was Charles Lindbergh the first person to cross the Atlantic Ocean by air? Or the third, fifth, fourteenth, or what?

Answers:

(1) "Fruit of knowledge." The Bible merely refers to the fruit of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil." There is no evidence to suggest it was an apple.

(2) Charles Dudley Warner. This comment, generally attributed to Mark Twain, was actually made by Warner, a friend of Twain's.

(3) Between the years 8 and 4 B.C. The monk Dionysius, in the sixth century, first calculated Jesus' birth date, but later examination proved Dionysius wrong.

(4) About seven times as much. At full moon the sun's rays shine straight down on the part we see so that none of the surface is in shadow. At half-moon the sun strikes obliquely on the part we see so that the tall mountains shadow much of the surface.

(5) Frankenstein's monster; Frankenstein was the name of the scientist who created the monster.

(6) Nobody; there were never any snakes in Ireland.

(7) Dictator; Caesar was never emperor — the empire was not formed until some years after his death, but he was made dictator for life.

(8) On Breeds Hill; Bunker Hill is nearby.

(9) The 11th; nine planes and two dirigibles (one of which made two flights) preceded Lindbergh. He made the first nonstop solo flight.

Rumination Time

Following poem in the Ortonville Independent is credited to Lowell Danielson of Ortonville:

My cows in the pasture softly mooing,
On their cuds are usually chewing.
Constantly activating their rumens.
They remind me of some humans
Who, plus other things they're doing,
On either snuff or gum are chewing.

I really can not see much use
Of chewing either gum or snoose.
Both to me seem rather dumb,
Chewing snoose and chewing gum.
Chewing gum is probably better
'Cause snoose produce is so much wetter.

Also, those who chew on snoose
Usually spit out all the juice,
So I still can't see the why or how
Of a person acting like a cow.
Anyone with much acumen
Should know there is no human rumen.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Visiting at her grandmother's house, the youngster was introduced to a kitten for the first time. As it began to purr the youngster exclaimed, "Grandma! Come here quick! Your kitty is starting to boil!"

The salesman's doorbell ring was answered by a nine-year-old boy puffing on a big cigar. Somewhat startled, the salesman blurted out, "Hellow, there, sonny. Is your mother in?"

The youngster plucked the cigar from his mouth, flicked off the ash, grinned and asked, "What do you think?"

REPORT

From The

Minnesota House of Representatives

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

The words to an old song proclaim "What a difference a day makes." At the Capitol, as the 1984 session began last week, many of us were thinking "What a difference a year makes."

In January of 1983 we came to the Capitol with the lingering despair that had pervaded state government since the day financial calamity struck during the previous administration. There had been unexpected deficits, tiring special sessions, budget cuts that in each case hurt someone, and tax increases that impacted on all of us.

Today, we can face the future with a degree of optimism. Our improving economy and an austere 1983 budget have set us on course again. Indeed, state revenue returns look so good that the most discussed item on the agenda is a tax cut.

The Legislature will repeal the 10 per cent surcharge which was put in place to get us over the rough times. In addition, we are fortunate to be able to maintain a reasonable and safe "rainy day fund" to protect against the awful consequences of another recession. I believe we have all learned the lesson of preparedness. We have returned fiscal stability to state government, and we want to keep it that way.

While the session is expected to last only about seven weeks, there are a number of bills which have gone through the committee system during the interim and are ready for full House action.

Aside from the repeal of the surtax, not a great deal of changes are expected in tax laws. That is because the state budget is prepared on a biennial calendar and most of that was done last year. However, there could be a few adjustments made, including simplification of the state income tax filing form and possibly some additional targeting of property tax relief to areas of the state where property tax bills are coming in at a much higher level than last year. The governor has also proposed a tax amnesty plan to allow a three-month period during which back taxes could be paid without full penalty.

We do not expect a great deal of changes in property tax relief measures until we hear from the Latimer commission in December of this year. It is making an intensive study of taxation and will make some far reaching recommendations to the legislature and the governor for next year.

One issue which has captured the attention of the media is the state lottery. A bill is under discussion (still in committee) that would put this volatile issue to a vote of Minnesota citizens in next fall's election. You would be asked to just vote "yes" or "no" to the question: "Shall the Minnesota Constitution be amended to repeal the prohibition against lotteries?"

Education issues include proposals to lower the mill levy which school districts must impose for education funding; to create statewide achievement tests; to strengthen the PER law through additional curriculum assessment requirements; and to return state funding for summer school with more academic emphasis.

The judiciary committee has been discussing sentencing guidelines during the interim and looking at a number of bills to strengthen the laws pertaining to driving while intoxicated, and a proposal mandating the use of seat belts. Already, the House has passed a bill to increase the penalty for the theft of firearms or the possession of stolen firearms.

Other proposals would raise the drinking age to 21, put a five-cent refundable deposit on beverage cans and bottles, revitalize the catastrophic health plan which was eliminated during the budget crisis, require party registration for voters, create a state high school for the arts, lessen the liability costs for companies which dumped hazardous waste years ago, abolish tip credit and provide a tax credit or income tax deduction for individuals or businesses who voluntarily contribute to a fund to provide low cost milk in schools.

Which of these issues will be addressed at all, which passed or defeated, it is hard to say this early in the session. But one thing I can promise is that there will be a tax cut — welcome news to all of us.

If you have any questions, please contact me at Room 263, State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155, phone (612) 296-9918.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q: Can you please explain the difference between a cancer cause and a cancer risk factor?

A: There are over 100 types of cancers and there appear to be many different causes. When a person gets cancer, a single "cause" can seldom be blamed for the disease. Probably the cancer results from a combination of heredity, the environment and personal health choices.

The things that are known to cause cancer are called "carcinogens." These cancer-causing agents include tobacco smoke, x-rays, sunlight and certain natural and man-made chemicals. There are approximately 30 agents known or strongly suspected to cause cancer in humans. One way to help prevent cancer is to stop or reduce a person's exposure to carcinogens, such as cigarette smoke.

Cancer "risk factors" are factors which increase a person's chances of getting a certain cancer. These include a person's family history, occupation (exposure to certain carcinogens at the workplace), and personal habits (such as smoking, drinking and eating).

Exposure to a risk factor doesn't necessarily mean that you will get cancer. It does mean that you should be aware that such exposure can increase your chances of developing cancer, and you should consult your doctor about what steps to take to protect yourself.

Some risk factors are avoidable. For example, an individual can control their exposure to cigarette smoke, alcohol, and the sun's rays.

Other risk factors are unavoidable. For instance, a family history of breast cancer is an unavoidable risk. But a woman at risk can protect herself by practicing the breast self examination (BSE) every month and having regular medical checkups.

Q: I was a heavy smoker for 10 years and finally kicked the habit six months ago. Now I can't stand to be in the same room when a friend is smoking. My friends think I am being inconsiderate when I complain, but isn't breathing their smoke bad for my health?

A: Breathing second-hand smoke definitely can be hazardous to your health.

Tobacco smoke is a complex mixture of gases, liquids and particles. Most of us are familiar with the effects of tar and nicotine, but there are hundreds of other chemical compounds in tobacco and hundreds more are created when tobacco burns.

Studies show that smoke from the burning end of a cigarette has higher concentrations of these noxious compounds than the "mainstream" smoke inhaled by the smoker. In fact, there is twice as much tar and nicotine in "sidestream" smoke; 50 times as much ammonia; and even more cadmium (a compound that damages the air sacs of the lungs and causes emphysema).

Other harmful compounds released by smoking include:

+ Carbon monoxide, a colorless, odorless gas which robs the blood of oxygen. The Federal Air Quality Standards say it may be unsafe to breath air containing more than 9 p.p.m. (parts per million) of carbon monoxide. Smoking 10 cigarettes in a car with the windows closed produces carbon monoxide levels of up to 90 p.p.m. It also doubles the level of carbon monoxide in the blood of the smoker and the nonsmoker in the next seat.

+ Hydrogen cyanide, a poison which attacks respiratory enzymes. Long-term exposure to levels above 10 p.p.m. is considered dangerous. The concentration in cigarette smoke is 1,600 p.p.m.

+ Nitrogen dioxide, a gas that irritates and damages the lungs. Levels of 5 p.p.m. in the air are considered dangerous — cigarette smoke contains 250 p.p.m.

+ Pyridine, a strong irritant that also produces distinctly unpleasant odors.

+ Aldehydes and ketones, which create the penetrating smell, and tars, which hold them to your skin and clothes. Smokers are not sensitive to these smells because of the destructive effects of smoke on the inner lining of the nose.

For more information on how to encourage your friends to quit or for a brochure on "second-hand smoke," call the Cancer Information Service toll free at 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q: My husband just found out that he has cancer of the colon. He is worried that he will need a colostomy. What exactly is a colostomy and how will it change his life?

A: Although most people who have colon cancer do not require colostomies, this operation is necessary for some. During surgery the diseased portion of the bowel and rectum is removed so the cancer will not spread to the rest of the body. The end of the bowel is then brought out through an opening in the abdominal wall called a stoma.

Patients are then taught how to manage elimination through the stoma — the opening through which the stool passes. This is done at regularly scheduled times with a technique called irrigation, which is like an enema administered through the stoma. Many people feel comfortable with just a small security pouch or a patch of gauze covering the opening between irrigations.

Since the first completely successful colostomy was performed in 1793, thousands of people now have this life-saving operation each year. If your husband gets a colostomy, no one outside his immediate family will ever need to know. It will not be visible under his clothes, and new products take away the worry about accidents or odor.

His work and social life should not change after a colostomy. Heavy lifting and rought sports might not be recommended, but each person is different, and your husband's physician would discuss any special precautions he needs to take. Most leisure activities are fine. A special waterproof covering can be placed over the stoma for water sports.

Usually a normal diet is possible. Some persons will have to adjust what they eat to prevent blockage or watery bowel movements and avoid foods that cause unpleasant odor or gas.

You may want to find out if there is an "ostomy" group nearby. These consist of people with ostomies who come together as friends to learn and share experiences. The Cancer Information Service can help you get in touch with ostomy groups in your area and provide you with more information about managing colostomies. Call toll free 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q: I've been hearing a lot about EDB lately. Is this a serious cancer risk?

A: The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) considers EDB (Ethylene Dibromide) a serious health risk to workers who are exposed to the chemical in large amounts or over a long period of time. EDB has been widely used for over 30 years to fumigate grains, fruits and vegetables against roundworms. It is also used in the production of dyes, antiknock fluids for engines and waterproofing agents, among other products.

In 1974, the National Cancer Institute linked EDB to cancer in laboratory animals. By 1977, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reported strong evidence that EDB could cause cancer and mutations in man.

When the pesticide was introduced it was thought to be safe for use on crops because it seemed to break down quickly and not linger in foods. However, advanced laboratory techniques have detected EDB residues in cereal and other grain-based products.

Although the potential risks of EDB residues in food are difficult to assess, the EPA recommends that it sould no longer be used as a pesticide.

Q: My sister had a mastectomy a year ago. She is 32 years old and would like to have a baby. Is it safe for her to get pregnant?

A: Your sister should carefully discuss this with her physician. If she is completely free of breast disease, it is possible that having a baby would cause no additional risks.

However, pregnancy may have an adverse effect on the growth and spread of some breast cancers. This is because certain types of tumors feed on the high levels of estrogen hormones that are produced in a woman's body when she is pregnant. Your sister's doctor will know which kind of tumor she had and will be able to advice her in this decision.

The type of treatment she had is also an important factor. Sometimes the high doses of chemotherapy (drugs) or hormones used to treat breast cancer patients will affect their ability to bear children.

Since only two per cent of the women who get breast cancers are of childbearing age, doctors have not been able to study this matter in depth. Of the breast cancer patients who have later become pregnant, there is little evidence to suggest that having a baby increases the likelihood that their tumor will grow back.

It is reassuring to note that a mother's cancer rarely spreads to the placenta or fetus. A 1973 review of over 100 years of medical literature found only six cases of mothers whose breast cancer had spread to the placenta, and no cases where it had spread to the fetus.

We voted to have a bake and white elephant sale at the meal site Friday, May 11. We have been asked to serve barbecue and other goodies at the meal site for the Marsh Grove and Newfolden townships 100 year celebration on July 4. Motion was made and passed that we do that and that we also have a float in the parade that day. We voted and passed the motion that we serve a dinner for the public on Sunday, Apr. 15. We will try to get the civic center and serve it there and a free will offering will be taken. We will also sponsor the essay contest for the Newfolden 6th graders again this year. We will be awarding first, second and third prizes. Next meeting will be April 2. Meeting was adjourned.

Starvation Diets Can Be Safe With Good Nutrition

by Lynette Lamb
'U' M News Service

Semi-starvation diets — those with very few calories and no carbohydrates — can be safe and are useful in treating extremely obese people, says University of Minnesota nutritionist Stephen Phinney.

Phinney, who has a joint appointment in nutrition and medicine, has done several carefully controlled studies of subjects on these semi-starvation diets and has concluded that they can be safe if subjects are carefully monitored and given appropriate levels of vitamins, minerals and liquids.

Problem with most similar semi-starvation diets, such as the liquid protein diet, is not their lack of calories or carbohydrates, which causes a condition called ketosis, but rather their lack of vitamins and minerals. Without adequate amounts of certain vitamins and minerals, people on these diets feel weak, fatigued and dizzy, Phinney said. Even more dangerous is that the liquid protein diet has been implicated in heart thythm abnormalities apparently brought about because of sudden shifts in body salts and water when dieting is suspended.

"It's hard to judge nutritional adequacy with these very low-calorie diets because the RDA )recommended daily allowance) standards we use are estimated on the basis of a 2,000 calorie per day diet," said Phinney. "If a person is consuming only 500 to 700 calories per day, we're still left with asking what adequate vitamin and mineral supplements are. Does a dieting person need more or fewer?"

In their studies Phinney and his colleagues played it safe by providing subjects with potassium plus the RDA levels of vitamins and minerals and found that, given this precaution, subjects were able to maintain their physical endurance as well as their health on the ketogenic diet. Surprisingly, an important supplementary mineral for people on this diet is sodium, which is required to counter increased sodium losses caused by ketosis.

In fact, obese subjects on this diet — given these recommended levels of vitamins and minerals, three quarts of water and just 500 to 700 calories a day of meat, fish and poultry — not only maintained their endurance levels, but increased them as the study went on.

This finding gratified the researchers, but they realized that because weight loss and physical training might be occurring simultaneously with ketosis, it was difficult to determine just what caused the maintained or increased endurance levels.

Therefore, trained, lean bicylists were the next subjects studied, and they underwent a low-carbohydrate diet with a twist: calories were not reduced. Nevertheless, the bicylists still experienced ketosis, the metabolic state in which a lack of carbohydrates brings about a breakdown of body fats, which leads to production of ketone bodies in the blood.

Ketosis has traditionally been considered a sign of serious illness, but the bicylists, like the obese subjects, showed no change in their ability to perform endurance exercise after four weeks of a ketogenic diet. "The lack of carbohydrate itself does not cause any obvious ill effects in a short time period," said Phinney, pointing out that Innuits (Eskimos) and Indian tribes lived for years on very low-carbohydrate diets with no known negative consequences. "Our findings run against what most nutritionists and physicians believe and recommend," Phinney said.

Exploring the safety of this diet is important, Phinney believes, because it can give extremely overweight people — those with 30 or more pounds to lose — a running start on their weight loss. "I look on our very low-calorie diets as a useful tool to use within the context of a six-month to one-year weight loss-maintenance program," said Phinney.

Physicians need to recognize that dieters crave results, Phinney said. "Most of us are too impatient to stick with the monotony of a diet for a year, and yet this is the amount of time it would take a person to lose 100 pounds on the typical moderate diet recommended by most nutritionists, in which a person loses one to two pounds per week," Phinney said.

Semi-starvation diets, like conventional ones, are only successful when they can keep the weight off. To do this requires more than just a diet, Phinney emphasized. "To take people to their goal weight and abandon them is only going part of the way," he said, adding that it is important to teach dieters the new skills like exercise, food choices, maintenance diets and behavior modification techniques that will help them to successfully keep off their weight.

Although people on low-carbohydrate diets can keep up endurance exercise such as running and biking, anaerobic exercise like climbing stairs, playing tennis and lifting weights — all of which require great bursts of energy — will be difficult or impossible, said Phinney. These forms of exercise require muscle glycogen, a product of dietary carbohydrates, which ketogenic dieters just aren't getting.

But a worse disadvantage of the low-carbohydrate diet, said Phinney, is a more intangible one. "This diet takes away the social and sensual pleasures of eating," said Phinney. "An important part of any behavior modification program is to help people find pleasures that don't focus on food. This is difficult in our society, which often does focus on food."

Fifteen ounces of protein — the equivalent of a good-sized steak — and three quarts of non-caloric beverages a day is not a fun diet, and Phinney doesn't try to pretend that it is. "It takes a lot of motivation to stick to this diet," he admitted, "but then seriously overweight people should have all the motivation they need — losing weight can get them off insulin or high blood pressure medication, help them avoid having a heart attack or back problems, and can restore their self-esteem."

Phinney stresses that people should not consider this diet unless they have at least 30 pounds to lose and that they should be monitored closely by a physician at all times, but with these caveats he feels the low-carbohydrate diet could be the answer for many overweight people.

"The statistics are harsh," he said. "Eighty per cent of people who join diet programs will drop out within the first two months, probably because for them it failed. This program is hard, but people are actually very flexible," he said. "After the first month they make their peace with the deprivation."

Sex Diseases Are Becoming An Epidemic

Herpes, gonorrhea, NSU-NSV and syphilis are all sexually transmitted diseases. They affect people regardless of age, income, sex or education. They represent a serious public health concern — an "old" problem with a new name.

Previously referred to as "venereal disease," sexually transmitted diseases profoundly influence the physical, social and emotional lives of individuals, particularly adolescents who are exposed to them.

"Each year more than 15,000,000 people contract sexually transmitted diseases. Three million of these are adolescents," said David Brownell, director of the VD control program in the Minnesota department of health.

"In 1980, 58 per cent of all reported cases of sexually transmitted diseases in Minnesota were among adolescents. Serious health consequences, including sterility, can result from an untreated infection."

To assist individuals who are concerned about sexually transmitted diseases, the Minnesota department of health operates a free confidential hotline. Information is available on a 24-hour-a-day basis by calling the Minnesota family planning-STD hotline at 1-800-752-4281.

"Young people need to understand how to prevent exposure and spread of sexually transmitted diseases, how to recognize early warning signs and what to do if they suspect they have been infected," said Joan Nephew, assistant director of the Minnesota institute of public health. "Schools, as well as parents, health agencies and religious organizations have a role in educating young people regarding health issues."

Because of this serious concern, the Minnesota institute of public health, together with the Minnesota department of health, has developed health education materials about sexually transmitted diseases. Several workshops will be held for school instructors and other interested individuals in five regional half-day workshops.

Date and location of the workshop in this area is March 20 at Moorhead.

For further information or registration materials contact "The Minnesota Institute of Public Health," 2829 Verndale Avenue, Anoka, 55303, phone (612) 427-5310.

Simplicity vs. Snapper

ASK ABOUT OUR RETAIL FINANCING PROGRAM!

ASK ABOUT OUR RETAIL FINANCING PROGRAM!

Call Us
for a complete feature-by-feature comparison of our 3108 Rear Engine Rider with other leading brands.
(Unless a phone is only a reach away, keep reading. The following are a few of the reasons why we feel a Simplicity is a better buy.)

The Cut
Is it strictly a matter of personal taste? Not really. For example, Snapper hangs the rear of its mower deck from the frame. Our axle-pivoting deck rides over the contours of your lawn on rollers mounted left, center and right on the rear of the mower.
And its deep housing creates maximum uplift. Grass dispersion is excellent (fewer of those clumps we call "windrows").

The Ride
A heavy-duty, welded and reinforced frame is separate from the driver's platform. Only Simplicity features all steel ISO-BODY® construction that isolates the operator from engine vibrations.

Wide Turf-Tread Tires.
Wider tires have a bigger "footprint" to distribute vehicle weight. And when the ground's wet, there's less chance of leaving tire marks.

Super Trade-In Days

All models are taken in trade, regardless of the condition. Call any participating dealer today for a free home demonstration of a Simplicity Rear Engine Rider and a no obligation trade-in evaluation

And remember to call us for a free feature by feature comparison. Or stop in at one of the dealers listed below.

A Tighter Turning Radius.
A compact 25" for trimming around trees and flower beds. Handling is responsive. Light and precise geared steering vs. Snapper's direct mechanical linkage? No contest.

The Engine.
A 4-cycle, air-cooled, 8 hp. Briggs & Stratton. Electric key start is standard. In-line shifting. 5-forward speeds, 1 reverse.

A Tractor-Type Front Axle.
Up front, a solid steel front axle with heavy duty ¾" spindles. Farther back, an automotive-type differential prevents turf damage on turns, because the outside wheel rotates faster.

Maintenance.
The engine hood props up for easy access to engine, fuel tank and battery. Checking and adding oil is easy: top mounted oil fill with dipstick.

The Seat.
Snapper offers a lower back, thinner seat cushion and lighter cover material. Ours is a hi-backed, molded, thicker cushion seat for a more comfortable ride.

Braking and Clutching.
All in one step. Single foot action declutches, then brakes. We feature V-belt clutching for smoother starts.

Precinct Caucuses Scheduled Tuesday

Precinct caucuses in Pennington county will be conducted Tuesday with registration at 7:30 p.m. and caucuses convening at 8 p.m. Four locations will be used for the caucuses with the county Independent - Republicans meeting in the basement meeting room of the city auditorium and the Democrat-Farmer-Labor party meeting at the Lincoln high school cafeteria in Thief River Falls, library in St. Hilaire and senior center in Goodridge.

Caucuses are open to all residents of voting age. While state law prohibits school boards, county boards, township boards, city councils and public elementary or secondary schools from having meetings or activities after 6 p.m. on caucus day, only four per cent of Minnesota voters usually attend caucuses.

"Precinct caucuses offer a unique opportunity for everyone to be involved in the political process," state Richard Sather, chairman and Diane Freeman, chairwoman of the Pennington county Independent - Republicans. "Caucus activity includes electing delegates to the county convention in April and drafting resolutions that ultimately may be adopted at the national level as part of the 1984 Republican party platform."

"A precinct caucus is a meeting of neighbors who share a common concern for the operation and policies of local, state and federal government," says Fran Stromberg, who chairs the Pennington county DFL party.

"State law requires each major political party to hold a caucus for every election precinct each general election year to elect officers and conduct business. An election precinct may be a township or city ward. Precinct caucuses offer voters their first opportunity to express a preference concerning candidates who will be elected in November."

All precincts in Pennington county — including townships, Thief River Falls city wards and the cities of Goodridge and St. Hilaire — will attend the I-R caucus at the city auditorium. Refreshments will be served following the business sessions. Charlie Oakes will convene the caucus.

For the DFL, Cornelius Appelman will convene the caucus at the Goodridge senior center which is intended for party members and others from the townships of Goodridge, Deer Park, Hickory, Highlanding, Kratka, Mayfield, Reiner, Smiley and Star and the city of Goodridge.

James Dalager will convene the caucus at the library in St. Hilaire for Bray, Black River, River Falls, Polk Centre, Sanders and Wyandotte townships and the city of St. Hilaire.

APPRECIATED GIFT to the Occupational Development center in Thief River Falls is the TRS-80 microcomputer donated by Norwest bank of Thief River Falls. Roger Reuter, president of the local bank, watches while Charlie Oakes of the ODC experiments with the unit. Oakes says that gifts of useable equipment, tools or other items can often be helpful for the workshop's program.

Bank Donates Computer To ODC In City

Norwest Bank of Thief River Falls has donated a TRS-80 microcomputer to the Occupational Development center, a sheltered workshop providing work, training and placement to handicapped adults in Thief River Falls. The computer is complete with a table, monitor, printer, memory expansion unit and two disc drives.

For several years it has been recognized that the ODC could benefit from computerization, but the high cost of purchasing a system has prevented any action, according to Charlie Oakes, business manager.

Initial plans include using the computer to maintain payroll records, sales information and as a teaching tool for some of the ODC's clients.

"Norwest Bank's contribution is unusual for the ODC," Oakes said. "We are a non-profit United Way agency and all contributions are tax deductible but most people don't think of us when they have a tangible item, they only consider donations of money. This example, the bank donated equipment, shows clearly how a contribution of goods or services can often fit the ODC's needs beautifully."

In the past, noncash donations have included woodworking tools no longer needed, volunteer typing and several years ago the Jaycees came in and painted the interior walls.

Roger Reuter, president of Norwest bank, said that they have upgraded their computer system to be compatible with other Norwest Banks and that they were pleased that they could help the occupational development center by providing it with this equipment.

Final Agreement On Teacher Pact May Come Today

Tentative agreement reached in contract negotiations between School District 564 board of education and the district's teachers may be formally finalized tonight.

Members of the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) will meet today at 4 p.m. to vote on the proposal. The board of education is also in session tonight and has advanced its meeting time to 6:30 p.m. to take care of additional business.

Terms of the settlement have not been announced as yet, pending arrangement of the total increase into salary schedule, extra-curricular and hourly wage costs.

The tentative agreement was reached Thursday following mediation session from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Murray Perry, assigned here by the state board of mediation services, served as the mediator in bringing the compromise agreement to a conclusion. It was the second mediation session and two negotiating meetings have been held since the first mediation.

Participating in the mediation were all members of the board of education, Supt. Robert Block, assistant superintendent Leo Ruberto and chief negotiator John Roszak. The TRFEA bargaining group was led by Edith Etter and James Cuppett.

Supt. Block said that the compromise is not likely to put the school district into deficit financing.

LOCAL FOOD SHELF located in the Falls Mall in Thief River Falls received a check for $100 late last week from the Pennington county Independent-Republican committee. The gift was part of the community service emphasis entitled "Working Partners" which was established as a division of the Republican national committee. "President Reagan has asked Americans to demonstrate by actions rather than words their concern for those who might be needy or hungry," states Gordon P. Reierson, vice chairman of the county I-R party. "Thief River Falls food pantry is a community effort and those who care about the less fortunate are urged to contribute. People, not government, can provide solutions to many human service needs." Pictured with Reierson above is Arlene Swenson, food pantry coordinator.

"BETWEEN SKY AND SOIL" is the title of the award presented by Production Credit association of Thief River Falls to two area recipients at its 50th anniversary meeting Friday. The specially-cast eagle was made in limited edition and used by farm credit cooperatives in recognizing outstanding service by area people. Honored Friday were Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director at Thief River Falls for 18 years, and Delores Andol, Roseau county extension agent for 38 years. At left is Harlow Johnson, president of the PCA of Thief River Falls, and at right is Dean Carlson, Roseau branch manager of the cooperative. Courneya and Andol were recognized for their community service and assistance to cooperatives as well as their county extension work. About 275 people attended the 50th anniversary meeting of PCA.

AAUW Week Will Be Observed By Local Branch

Thief River Falls branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) is observing AAUW week, March 18-24.

Special event planned for this week is the March meeting, scheduled for tonight (Monday) at 7:30 at the Franklin Middle school library. Guest speaker will be Lee Dyrud Furman of the social work department at the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks. Her topic will be "Friendship Among Women in Mid-Life." Program coordinator is Carol Tranby. The meeting is open to the public.

In a recent proclamation Governor Rudy Perpich cited AAUW for its work towards equity for women, education and self-development over life span, and positive social change.

"AAUW is becoming known for identifying, analyzing and acting on issues," noted Gretchen Beito, president of the local branch. "Our projects this year impact Thief River Falls."

The AAUW is involved in numerous local activities. During March the group is displaying prints by women artists at Northwest Regional library. Mary Morken is in charge of that project.

On April 17, the AAUW, together with School District 564 and Northland Community college will be co-sponsoring a workshop "Broaden Your Career Horizon," at Northland college. Also working on that committee are the Business and Professional Women's club, Minnesota Gifted and Talented children, and Chamber of Commerce.

The workshop, designed for girls 11-14 years, is planned to increase young students' interests in math and other academics before planning their high school schedules. Thirty local professional women have been contacted and will be working at the workshop with small groups of girls. Among the women will be licensed pilot Barbara Berggren, who will demonstrate the use of microcomputers in checking wind volicity and speed.

A parent workshop, "Preparing Your Child for the Ninties, what you need to know now," is scheduled for the same day, from 10:00 a.m., to 12:00 noon. Carol Tranby and Linda Wallerich are in charge of the parents' session.

Registrations for the workshops must be in by March 27. For further information, students, parents and educators may call Northland college.

In their effort to promote education, the local AAUW branch will be awarding $900 in college scholarships this year. The money was raised through the "Movies on Saturday," project with Janice Upham, chairman. Scholarship co-chairmen are Robert Weigand and May Isaacson.

Other issues in which the AAUW is concerned are: providing jobs for women, peace and nation security, and public support for public education. In providing jobs for women, the branch is working with Project Heritage Design, which employs 38 women in their homes. Several AAUW members are serving on that board. Linda Bentson, chairman of the Peace and National Security issue, stated that current goals are to define national security and to find ways to work for peace in families and the community by learning to resolve conflicts. Public support for public education is a new issue just getting underway.

In addition to the issues, AAUW has five areas of interest. They, together with the chairmen are: Community, Deb. Matero; Education, Lori Gibson; Cultural interests, Melvine Dagg; International relations, Margaret Saetre; and Legislation, Shelly Steva. Branch meeting programs on those topics, always open to the public; are coordinated by Judy Dimich, vice-president for program development.

Branch officers, in addition to Mrs. Beito and Mrs. Dimich, are Barbara Jauquet Kalinoski, secretary; Glenna Moen, treasurer; and Ruth Legvold, public information chairman. Nancy Lund is newsletter editor and Jan Hoff, bylaws chairman.

Membership in AAUW is open to all women graduates of accredited four year colleges and universities. Anyone desiring further information may contact Elaine Larson, vice-president for membership, 681-7575.

American Legion 65th Anniversary Is Observed

At the American Legion birthday supper held March 10, in observance of the organization's 65th anniversary auxiliary president Karen Fredrickson presented the post with a $100 check from the unit.

Mrs. Fredrickson also presented a check for the Kidney House fund to Mrs. Conard Erickson of Austin, who is Department chairman of that fund. In accepting the check, Mrs. Erickson stated that a total of $2,334.76 had been donated to the project by the Ecklund-Holmstrom post and its auxiliary.

Mrs. Erickson attended the anniversary celebration, together with her husband, Department Commander, Conrad Erickson, who was guest speaker.

In speaking to the group, Erickson paid tribute to the World War I veterans for their patriotism during World War I, for organizing the American Legion 65 years ago, and for their continued support. He also gave an emblem presentation, stating that the Legion emblem symbolizes all the programs of the organization.

A turkey supper for all Legion and unit members preceded the meeting. Honor guests were the past commanders and past presidents. They were introduced by announcing the year served. Also honored and introduced were the World War I veterans: Dr. M.G. Johnson, Carl Gulrud, Joe Rinowski, John Maney and Myles Jackson.

Post Commander Fred Dallmann presided at the meeting and presented the auxiliary with a $200 birthday gift to purchase a picture frame for all past presidents. Dallmann and Fredrickson welcomed the guests and Post Chaplain Ellsworth Jorgenson gave the invocation.

'U'M Regents Offered Budget For Next Year

A proposed 1984-85 budget of $381.51 million in state money was presented to the University of Minnesota board of regents recently, along with a list of internal adjustments that will add to certain programs and subtract from others.

The budget plan presented covers only the operations and maintenance fund, which is made up of state legislative appropriations and tuition. Although the university's comprehensive budget is much larger and includes private and federal money, state money pays for most of the cost of educating students, as well as for administering and maintaining the physical plant.

President C. Peter Magrath described the proposal as a budget that continues internal shifts of money based on carefully laid out plans designed to strengthen or maintain certain programs.

Under the plan, the institute of technology would receive an increase of $650,000, primarily for teaching assistantships and new faculty. Institute of technology needs are dramatic because enrollment in that college has doubled in the past 10 years while the college's resources have remained the same, said Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs.

An additional $549,000 would go to support new technology programs, $329,848 would be used for library acquisitions, $206,356 would go to support veterinary medicine and $250,000 would go to the veterinary teaching hospital.

Through internal shifts, the institute of agriculture, forestry and home economics would be cut by $175,000, continuing education and extension by $200,000 and the college of liberal arts by $175,000.

"Budgeting this time is harder than it was last year because it would have been so easy to fall away from our careful planning process," said Keller. Previous internal cuts were the result of mid-year losses in state appropriations. This time, however, colleges are being asked to shift money based on the university's own needs and priorities. "This is a budget that follows planning rather than planning that follows the budget."

The proposed budget is based on the projection that system-wide enrollment next year will drop by about 1,700 students from last fall, and that tuition income available to the university will rise about 9.1 per cent. Exact tuition proposals for next year have not been presented yet, but will be part of the comprehensive budget that the regents will approve in June or July.

The budget also includes plans for a six per cent salary increase for faculty, based entirely on merit, and a six per cent salary increase for staff. Magrath said raising faculty salaries is the highest university-wide priority, and that the goal is to restore faculty buying power to 1972 levels by 1991.

The budget also includes $300,000 to support new efforts to attract high-ability students to the University. Magrath told the board that Julleann Carson, associate dean in the college of liberal arts, has been appointed "project manager" of the high-ability student recruitment effort. Carson, whose promotion to the CLA spot was approved today, will spend up to half her time for as long as a year organizing a new student recruitment program for the university system. Magrath said the project manager concept is being used because student recruitment invoies all university colleges and campuses.

A controversial proposal to lower pay rates for student jobs on all five campuses was discussed further this month. Last month, more than 100 students packed the boardroom to express unhappiness with the possibility of lowered pay rates on the Twin Cities campus. The proposal was originally presented by students on the coordinate campuses as a way to increase the number of jobs available on those campuses. Magrath told the board he would not recommend lowering pay rates on the Twin Cities campus, and suggested that the issue should be decided campus by campus.

Cindy Solem Is State Food And Fitness Winner

Cindy Solem, 18, Thief River Falls, has won first place in the senior division of the state food and fitness essay contest. Theme of the contest was "Food: America's Growth Industry."

Solem, a senior at Lincoln high school, placed first at the local level which then qualified her to compete at the state level March 9. University of Minnesota judges ranked her essay above some 30 entries. She is now eligible to compete in the national contest with a top prize of a trip to Washington, D.C.

Cindy and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Solem, raise beef cattle and small grains on their rural Thief River Falls farm. Cindy is active in 4-H, serving as treasurer of the City View club, and will attend a citizenship short course in Washington, D.C., this summer.

U.S. department of agriculture, through cooperation with state and local agriculture extension agencies, sponsored the contest, along with the Minnesota chapter of Women In Agriculture, Marigold Foods Inc., Farm Credit Services, St. Paul Union Stockyards and Control Data.

Contest is held in conjunction with national Ag Week March 15-22. It is designed to promote awareness of the American food and agriculture system.

THE TAX PICTURE

Tax Tips For Self-Employed Small Business Owners

Following some helpful hints can help make tax time much easier for the small business owner, experts say.

Today's small business people exemplify the entrepreneurial spirit which helped build America. They take risks, work hard and forgo the apparent security of a nine-to-five, salaried job for the opportunity to build a small business of their own, in many cases right at home. The ranks of these independent business people include realtors, truckers, home-based business people, construction workers, insurance salespeople and direct sellers, among others. Like other Americans, the self-employed support our system of government and do their part to keep the American system operating through the payment of income taxes.

Unlike those who are employed by someone else, however, America's independent, self-employed small business owners do not have federal income taxes withheld from the money they make. Instead, they are responsible for handling all aspects of tax preparation, filing and payment themselves.

Here are some tax tips, suggested by the Direct Selling Association, to help independent, small business owners prepare this year's federal income tax returns:

- Keep permanent, accurate and complete records;
- File the proper forms. Take care to file a Schedule C (Form 1040), "Profit (or Loss) From Business or Profession," even if you have another, salaried job;
- Compile all business income before computing deductions;
- A specific part of the home must be used both regularly and exclusively for business in order to be deductible;
- Travel is deductible when it's for business purposes;
- Entertainment expenses are deductible only when business is the primary intent;
- Personal use of a car is not a deductible business expense.

Small business owners should always keep permanent, accurate and complete records for tax purposes.

Sparby Meets With Speaker Of N.D. House

Representative Wally Sparby, District 1B, met last week with the Speaker of the North Dakota House of Representatives to discuss mutual concerns.

Rep. Sparby and Speaker of the North Dakota House Tish Kelly of Fargo, said that cooperation on mutual concerns can make a big difference in creating effective legislation and policy.

"As border states, Minnesota and North Dakota must recognize our interdependency on issues such as agriculture, education and transportation," Rep. Sparby said.

Kelly said that the overall poor national economy has had a tremendous impact on farmers, many of whom have no ability to borrow money for their farms.

The economic impact of that situation extends beyond the farm community because the border area of the two states is heavily dependent on agriculture, Rep. Sparby said.

On another common concern, Sparby and Kelly agreed that the educational reciprocity agreement retained between the states is very important for the area.

"Reciprocity allows many students in our area a greater choice of educational institutions; in many cases it provided them with the opportunity to attend universities near their homes — when their only alternative was not to seek higher education at all," Rep. Sparby said.

Sparby and Kelly both stressed the importance of repairing the highways and roadways to improve the economy through increased commerce, tourism and additional jobs.

Cy Carpenter Heads National Farmers Union

Delegates to the National Farmers Union convention in New Orleans, LA, March 11 through 14 elected Minnesotan Cy Carpenter as president. Carpenter, who lived in Thief River Falls while a fieldman for Farmers Union, had served as chairman of the national general farm organization's executive committee for three years and had been a member of its board of directors since 1971. He currently serves as president of the Minnesota Farmers Union.

In accepting the position of NFU president, Carpenter said agriculture as a whole and the organization face many challenges. To meet them, he said a strong coalition must be forged between farmers, seniors, workers, consumers and cooperatives.

Carpenter grew up on a family farm near Sauk Centre, and worked first on the family farm, then with a farmer owned livestock cooperative before joining the MFU staff.

In addition to working with MFU and NFU, Carpenter was instrumental in starting several other rural oriented service organizations. He is a founder and chairman of the board of KIDS, Inc., a non-profit fund raising group to sponsor rural children with learning disabilities to summer development camps; a founder and chairman of Green View, Inc., a state organization providing rural elderly people with meaningful employment in state parks and roadside rest stops as well as many other jobs; a member of the University of Minnesota college of agriculture advisory council; and secretary of Farmers Union Enterprises, a multi-state organization pursuing cooperative development.

Previously, Carpenter served as a member of the federal council on aging; the advisory committee to the 1981 White House conference on aging; a member of the Minnesota department of agriculture's advisory council; and a member of the food advisory committee of Congress' office of technology assessment (OTA).

National Farmers Union is a general family farm organization serving more than 325,000 farm families in 24 states.

Council Meets Tuesday Over Zoning, Streets

Lawsuits have been threatened by adjoining property owners if the action is not rescinded, while Gunderson has said he will sue if the action is reversed.

Also to be discussed will be plans for major street resurfacing projects in 1984, and setting of a hearing date on those projects. Council will also consider a request from Gerald Mundt for an extension on his option to purchase the old Carnegie Library building for remodeling as an office building.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Many years ago, in the community where I then lived, our school superintendent requested time at our joint service club meeting to pass on the results of studies made by his staff and consultants. These studies proved that we needed a second high school and additions to all of our other schools.

We asked where all of these kids were going to come from since little or no development was comtemplated in our area, family size was down, and many of us were stying in our homes after our kids were grown and gone. This superintendent looked at us as though we were stupid intruders. He forgot that the new bond issues meant increases in our real estate taxes that would effect us for decades until those bonds were paid off. He also forgot that we were his employer.

A few years later, after our citizens had accepted his need studies and approved bond issues and tax increases, we all discovered that the school population never rose. We were stuck with a second high school and lots of school additions that would never be needed. That superintendent became a clerk at a small savings and loan.

I mention this episode because we have all been hearing much about our kids and their educations in studies being released and discussed. These studies claim that our kids are not as well educated as we were and that they are not being taught the basics so that our nation can continue to progress while our young people learn to live.

I have read through these studies and spoken to educators around the country.

Let's get a few facts on the table and cut through some of the "hot air."

Fact One: We are spending more on education today than we have ever spent before in our history, in dollars and as a percentage of gross national product.

Fact Two: This massive spending is being devoted to a smaller number of students so that the average spending per student is up.

Fact Three: While it is true that Scholastic Aptitude Test scores declined for years, they leveled off in 1981 and have been rising over the last two years. This test is supposed to measure aptitude and predict success in college. It is not an intelligence or basic understanding test. It does not measure the effectiveness of our school system. Using the SAT scores to check how our kids are doing would be like using a thermometer (instead of an odometer) to measure mileage.

Those who are pushing for something to be done say that we need better teachers and a back to basics formula. I believe that our kids are doing fine, that they are much further ahead than we were at the same point in their development, and that we have an amazingly good teacher corps with a lot more dedication than you will find in many other professions.

Youngsters from all over the country have been exposed to computers in their first 12 years of education. Many get into calculus in high school, today. I could give lots of details to prove that the achivements of today are far superior to what was occurring when I was an elementary or secondary school student. If there is a failure anywhere, it isn't in the first 12 years, but occurs after high school graduation.

If what I have just said is true, then why all of these studies and reports?

First, it is possible that many who have worked on these reports, may actually believe what they have said.

Second, it is also possible that they may have an ulterior motive. They may want us to spend more than we have been spending. Many may even be the potential recipients of that increased spending. They know that as parents, we will do anything for our kids.

As the individuals who will eventually pay all of the bills, I think we have a responsibility to ask and to evaluate the answers of those who try to prove their answers are honest and true before we decide on the true facts and the action to be taken.

In the rush of reports, studies and comments, just remember that we are spending, deflated, more than five times the amount committed for educating today's grandparents and more than two times the amount committed for educating today's parents. Our schools have twice the number of employees per student than they had 20 years ago. On the other hand, we have allowed the school administrators to build up bureaucracies, so that where teacher salaries once consumed more than half the school budgets, they are now down below forty per cent. If anything is wrong, it obviously isn't because we haven't provided the money, but rather because of the way the money is being spent.

More on higher education in a future column.

REFLECTI NS
A child's eagerness to learn should be nurtured and encouraged. You must find the patience and time to fan the fires of their curiosity . . . answer their questions and search for knowledge together. If you do not have the answers at hand don't be afraid to admit you don't know, but together seek, learn and discover. You can always raise another flower garden or lawn, you can raise that child only once.

'U'M Alzheimer's Clinic Copes With The Incurable

by Ralph Heussner
'U' M News Service

Arthur Sands was once a successful scientist for a Minnesota computer manufacturer. His life revolved around his research and his wife. His future seemed full of promise.

Today, he can't remember computations of simple arithmetic and often stares at his wife as though she were a stranger. Though only 58, he soon may be confined to a nursing home because of a disease that stole his memory and deadened his mind.

Sands (a fictitious name) suffers from dementia, a devastating brain disorder. Doctors have diagnosed the cause of his mental impairment as Alzheimer's disease. Some 50 to 60 per cent of persons with dementia have Alzheimer's.

A team of nurses, physicians and social workers at the University of Minnesota Hospitals Alzheimer's and related disorders clinic is trying to keep Sands out of that nursing home. Right now, they can't offer him a cure, but they are helping his family continue to keep him at home.

"Aging and dementia are not synonymous, although dementia occurs more commonly with advancing age," said university neurologist David Knopman. "Someone who is demented just can't be passed off as being old. It is also incorrect to use the terms dementia and senility synonymously."

Alzheimer's, named after a German neurologist who first described the disease in 1906, is an insidious disease that strikes both men and women without warning or reason. Though most victims are in their 50s and 60s, Alzheimer's frequently appears in people in their 40s and, on rare occasion, even younger. Patients suffer steady deterioration, usually over a period of five to 10 years.

An estimated 10 to 15 per cent of people 65 years of age and older in the United States suffer from dementia, according to a government report. As many as one to two million people in this age group have Alzheimer's.

Cause of Alzheimer's disease is unknown, though two general theories have been put forth. Some scientists believe the disorder may result from the brain's response to injury. Others think a specific agent — virus, toxin, genetic trait or environmental substance — causes the illness, a more widely held theory.

Autopsies of victims reveal senile plaque, or masses of degenerating nerve material surrounding cores of an abnormal protein. The disease is also characterized by neurofibrillary tangles, or strangely twisted bundless of fibers in the nerve cells.

Alzheimer's develops gradually, usually over a period of several years. Symptoms include memory loss, impaired judgment, disorientation and loss of language skills. Personality changes also are common. Some patients become very anxious and depressed whereas others turn hyperactive. As intellectual abilities slowly decline, other problems, such as difficulty in walking, surface.

At University hospitals, persons suspected of having Alzheimer's disease complete a three-day evaluation that includes a series of physical, neurological and psychologist tests. While the patient undergoes examination by a neurologist and a psychologist, the family meets with a nurse-clinician and a social worker. When the evaluation is completed, the team members meet to discuss and share their findings.

In making the diagnosis, the health care team must rule out diseases that have symptoms similar to those of Alzheimer's. Every patient undergoes an electroencephalogram, blood tests and a CAT scan to turn up tumors or diseases causing mental dysfunction. An examination may reveal signs of hematomas, minor strokes or Parkinson's disease. Because depression can mimic Alzheimer's disease, patients are also evaluated by a psychiatrist.

"A thorough evaluation, looking at the patient independent of age, is vital to uncover one of those treatable causes such as depression, brain tumors or thyroid deficiencies," said Knopman. Between 15 and 20 per cent of all cases seen in the clinic are not Alzheimer's disease and have a potentially treatable cause.

Patients at first may successfully mask the problem. For example, if father regularly goes for long walks along familiar streets but finds himself disoriented, he may shorten the excursion, justifying the change by saying: "I'm getting older and just can't walk as far."

As the disease advances, memory loss becomes obvious. The victim can recall names of only a few people and may retain new information only 10 to 15 minutes. Behavior changes become acute. Some patients are depressed and irritable whereas others turn apathetic. A few become physically threatening.

"All family members are told right off the bat that we're treating families as opposed to offering any sort of cure. Hopefully, we will have a cure in the future, but right now we don't. Our goal is to keep families together and the patients at home," said Sue Deinard, a nurse-clinician.

Common sense, reducing stress and lots of patience are the keys to successful management of an Alzheimer's patient, according to the Minnesota health care team.

University hospitals Alzheimer's and related disorders clinic, established in May 1982, offers both evaluation and patient management services. In the majority of cases, Alzheimer's disease has been diagnosed previously and patients have advanced to the middle or later stages of illness. More than 100 patients were evaluated during the program's first 18 months.

Initial contact with the university clinic usually results from a crisis at home, according to Deinard. A spouse or parent may be missing for many hours and feared hurt or a father may fail to recognize a daughter who visits home several times a week.

In most cases, family members can recall problems that occurred years before the formal medical diagnosis of the disease. They may remember dad continually misplacing his keys or mom, once an accomplished chef, serving the same meal two or three evenings in a row.

One of the goals of the Alzheimer's clinic is to help families better manage a patient at home. By offering families ideas on stress reduction and behavioral intervention, clinic staff may be able to help families handle care themselves and avoid or delay institutionalizing the patient.

A carefully structured environment can ease the impact of memory loss on both patient and family. For example, if the patient has a tendency to wander away from the house, indoor locks may help. Placing commonly used food items in the front of the cupboard can help avoid chaos in the kitchen. "Most of these suggestions come from other patients and relatives," said Deinard.

"Some patients who are quite disoriented can function quite well at home," Knopman said. "It is usually when disruptive behavior becomes a significant problem that the family can no longer care for the patient themselves."

Court Rules ERA Requires Abortion Funds

On Friday, March 9, a Pennsylvania court ruled that the state's equal rights amendment (ERA) requires medicaid funding of abortion on demand, according to Jackie Schwietz, formerly of Thief River Falls and now legislative director of Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life (MCCL).

The MCCL had already concluded, on the basis of analyses by prominent constitutional scholars, that an unamended ERA would likely be used as a tool by abortion advocates as part of their arguments before state courts that state constitutions contain some right to abortion or abortion funding, Schwietz said.

"The Pennsylvania decision proves what MCCL has been telling Congress and legislature. The ERA must be amended with an abortion neutralizing amendment or the courts will use it to mandate abortion funding," she stated.

MCCL supports adding an abortion neutralization amendment to both the state and federal ERAs. The abortion neutralization amendment reads: "Nothing in this Article (the ERA) shall be construed to grant or secure any right relating to abortion or the funding thereof."

Schwietz announced that more than a majority of the members of both houses of the Minnesota Legislature have told MCCL that they will support the abortion neutralization amendment. However, she urged pro-lifers to continue their efforts to gain the support of both state legislators and congressmen for the amendment.

Winter Shows At Crookston Well Attended

Total attendance at the 1984 Red River Valley winter shows was 39,285 which places the figure about the same as 1983 and only slightly less than the 1982 show. Attendance for the first week of the show, not including the winter shows horse show, was 36,608 and a new record for that period.

Dates for the 1985 show will be February 15-24 and the show will mark the 75th anniversary of the annual event. A planning committee has begun work for appropriate recognition of the diamond anniversary.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I'm writing in opposition to the amendment to allow prayer in public schools. We already have voluntary prayer in public schools; it has never been taken away.

This is just an election year attempt to impose religious creeds and life styles on vulnerable public school children. Who will decide how, when and what kind of prayer will be imposed? What about non-Christian students and their families? We should not have government directed prayers in public schools or anywhere else.

Contrary to President Reagan's claim, God has not been removed from the public schools. The supreme court did not forbid school prayer; it merely forbade the government from conducting prayers. To amend the Constitution to again allow organized prayer would return to America's classrooms the coercive atmosphere which teaches impressionable children that there is a religion approved by the government.

I would feel more comfortable about President Reagan's professions of faith in God if he went to church himself. By careful count, Reagan has attended church less than a dozen times in the three years he has been president.

Taxpayers May Save Money, Announces IRS

Many taxpayers whose income increased substantially in 1983 can save tax when filing their federal tax returns by using the income averaging methods to compute tax, the internal revenue service said.

Under the income averaging method, part of an unusually large amount of taxable income is taxed at a lower rate, according to the IRS.

Taxpayers must have been U.S. citizens or residents for at least the last five tax years to qualify. Taxpayers usually must have provided more than 50 per cent of their own support during the four years prior to 1983 and have an averageable income of more than $3,000 to be eligible for income averaging.

The easiest way to determine averageable income is to complete schedule G, "Income Averaging." Complete instructions on how to compute the tax by income averaging appear in IRS publication 506, "Income Averaging." Schedule G and publication 506 are available free from the IRS and can be ordered by using the handy order form in the tax forms package.

Taxpayers who use the income averaging method must have copies of their tax returns for the four years prior to 1983, the IRS noted. Copies of prior year tax returns can be ordered by completing form 4506, "Request for Copy of Tax For or Individual Income Tax Account Information," available by calling or writing the IRS.

Taxpayers will be charged $5 per return for copies of prior year tax returns. Payments must accompany the order. Allow at least 45 days.

Disorders May Be Inherited From Veterans

Between 1945 and 1962 over 220,000 military personnel took part in atmospheric nuclear testing in the Pacific and in Nevada. Another 30,000 veterans participated in the occupation and clean-up of Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the end of World War II.

Many of these men were exposed to radiation and may now suffered delayed effects of radiation-related diseases. Children of these veterans also may be suffering from genetic disorders inherited from their fathers.

20 Per Cent Of Nation's GNP From Farming

Amount of money spent on U.S. agricultural products, including exports, accounts for about 20 per cent of the nation's gross national product and more than 22 per cent of its jobs, says Janet McGrath, president of national agri-marketing association's (NAMA) north central chapter and a local supporter of the annual agriculture day observance on March 20.

McGrath said that those calculations have been made by the agriculture department and other government economists and statisticians. They are being given greater exposure in the educational materials for agriculture day developed by the agriculture council of American education foundation.

Gross national product, or GNP, is a commonly used statistic that measures the flow of goods and services in the economy. The flow of agricultural products — including food, clothing, tobacco, shoes, cut flowers, seeds, and potted plants — generates more than $156 billion in production agriculture and $765 billion in the economy off the farm, the studies show.

Likewise, McGrath said, 85 per cent of the 23 million jobs in the "food chain" — from farm suppliers to consumers — are off the farm. Food and clothing manufacturing alone accounts for 4.8 million, with transportation, trade and retailing providing 7.2 million.

Farm exports alone are a major source of new jobs, with an estimated 31,600 created by each additional $1 billion in increased exports. The value of those exports fell in 1982 by about $4 billion, from the 1981 peak of $43.3 billion, however. That was the first significant drop in 13 years and was followed by a similar decline in 1983, due largely to the worldwide recession and changes in world trade patterns as a result of four selective embargoes in the last decade, McGrath stated.

"The point we want to make is that the futures of two million farm operators are not the only futures at stake when farm income falls below costs. All those jobs and all that business activity depend on an agriculture that is as prosperous as it is efficient, productive and top-quality."

Agriculture day is a nationwide tribute to the entire food and agricultural system and an opportunity for the public to focus on its central importance to the economy.

Further information about agriculture day can be had by contacting Nancy Reese at 612-378-1621 or by writing the ACA education foundation, suite 708, 1625 Eye street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Minn. Artists' Work Featured In NCC Exhibit

Young Minnesota Artists, a touring exhibit of 37 works by the state's emerging artists, will be on display in the fine arts building at Northland community college from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, until April 13.

In addition, at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, April 3, a special slide-lecture presentation entitled "Minnesota Art Today" will be given by art consultant Julie Yanson, in the Northland theater.

This presentation consists of over 700 slides, representing the work of 374 artists. Artistic achievements of the men and women represented in this exhibit demonstrate the variety and vitality of work by Minnesota's emerging artists.

The first states to have equal pay legislation for women were Michigan and Montana, in 1919, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Criticism A Low Blow

There's nothing wrong with being concerned about the cost of government, but the recent release by the Minnesota Conservative Union is a little out of bounds. The organization — if it is indeed an organization — criticized a dozen Minnesota legislators for their individual spending.

Among the so-called "dirty dozen" cited by the Conservative Union was Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls. The news release said Rep. Sparby was the 10th biggest spender in the Minnesota House of Representatives, collecting $36,509 in salary, per diem, lodging, mileage, telephone credit card, postage and miscellaneous expenses.

If our state representative had a habit of junketing, or of being away from his district and therefore unavailable, or neglecting to respond to requests, perhaps some validity could be given to the MCU complaint. But we believe that none of those circumstances exist.

What must be realized first of all is that the legislative salary goes to all legislators and no individuals should be singled out. Deduct that $18,500 and the remainder is $18,009 — just a shade over $1,500 per month.

Next it must be realized that northwestern Minnesota is a long way from St. Paul, and that, whether we like it or not, St. Paul is where the legislative action is. To properly represent the constituency in this corner of the state, it is essential to be present in St. Paul. This requires both travel and lodging — virtually the maintaining of separate dwelling places.

Further, it must be realized that maintaining contact with the home district while in St. Paul requires communication — Sometimes by mail but most often by telephone. This is particularly true in response to requests for information or assistance. Even within the district itself, telephone contact with many constituents requires a toll call.

People who have not had close association with public officials can't imagine the demand upon their time to attend functions, listen to information, resolve complaints or differences. Simply attending meetings requires a great deal of travel.

Rather than being critical of the amount spent in Representative Sparby's situation, we should be pleased he has made the representative efforts which have resulted in the expenditures. If he wasn't being responsive and doing a conscientious job of representation it might be another matter. There is no doubt he could spend less as a result of doing less.

The population of Legislative District 1B must be somewhere around 25,000 people. When they can gain full representation in the state legislature for an average of $1.46 per year per person, that's a pretty good bargain. We think the MCU's flurry of punches at the legislators — and our own representative in particular — were some low blows.

Farmers Are Consumers, Too

Minnesota Agri-View, issued by the Minnesota Agricultural Statistics service, included the following article:

The American farmer is a consumer and a taxpayer, too. Farmers pay about $3.9 billion in farm real estate taxes each year. They also pay about $600 million in personal property taxes, $3.8 billion in federal and state income taxes, and about $344 million in sales taxes.

It costs America's farmers about $140 billion for goods and services to produce crops and livestock. Some of their annual purchases include:

— $10 billion for tractors and other machinery. About 150,000 U.S. workers are needed to produce this equipment.

— $15.4 billion for fuel, lubricants, and maintenance for machinery and motor vehicles used in farming. Farming uses more petroleum than any other single industry.

— $21.4 billion for feed and seed; $9.0 billion for fertilizer and lime.

— Farmers use products containing 360 million pounds of rubber — or enough to put tires on nearly seven million automobilles.

— They use 33 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity a year. That's more than the annual residential use in all the New England states, plus Maryland, Kentucky and Washington, D.C.

— They use six and one-half million tons of steel in the form of machinery, trucks, cars, fencing and building materials. Farm use of steel accounts for 40,000 jobs in the steel industry.

Like everybody else, farmers have felt the pinch of inflation. They saw wage rates for their hired help go up 125 per cent; they watched prices of tractors and other machinery soar 200 per cent; they paid 75 cents more in taxes.

The average cost of what farmers paid for commodities, interest, taxes and farm wage rates climbed 152 per cent in the last 10 years.

Women Gain Politically

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

Perhaps the recent poll conducted by the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Company explains, in part, Rudy Perpich's gubernatorial victory in the last Minnesota election.

Perpich reckoned with a significant voting block, women, with a female running mate, Lt. Gov. Marlene Johnson.

It may also indicate that Minnesota is in step with other progress states in politics as well as other areas such as education.

The results of the poll, published Friday, March 9, indicate that 25 per cent of those questioned in the Feb. 10-27 survey of more than 1,200 Minnesotans would more likely vote for a presidential ticket that included a qualified female candidate for vice president.

At first it might appear that women responded that they would more likely vote if a female's name was on the ballot but that appeared not to be the case. The poll produced the result that men, as well as women, would be equally likely to cast an assenting ballot for a male and female president-vice president ticket.

In terms of numbers, 26 per cent of those polled said they would more likely vote for a ticket if it included a qualified female candidate while 66 per cent responded that the option would not change their vote. They remainder, eight per cent, said they didn't know.

In September the national Gallup Poll conducted a similar poll which produced semilar results.

Democratic Farmer Labor party voters responded more favorably to a mixed sex ticket than Independent-Republicans and independents.

The matter of a woman as a vice presidential running mate has been discussed openly since the beginning of the current presidential race, perhaps more often in the Democratic camp than on the Republican side. Walter Mondale, Gary Hart, John Glenn, Jesse Jackson and George McGovern have indicated they will consider that option. President Reagan has said he expects that Vice President George Bush will remain on the ticket.

In recent years there has been a more vocal women's movement in politics and women have been recognized as a voting segment worth serious consideration. While women have not been totally ignored in the past in terms of a significant voting populace, they haven't been treated with as much attention as they deserved until recently.

In the past, parties and candidates were concerned about labor groups, minority groups, groups of voters from a particular section of the country and large urban or rural areas. Not much serious attention has been given women as politicians and significantly influential in the voting outcome.

In an attempt to assist male presidential candidates, the National Women's Political Caucus has named eight women it considers qualified to run as Democratic nominees.

Women serve as governors, as in Kentucky; as U.S. representatives to Congress; as lieutenant governors in such states as Minnesota and Michigan; and as mayors in such large areas as Houston, TX and San Francisco, CA.

Women have served admirably and will continue to do so. They have proven they are as qualified as men to serve in high positions and they should be considered candidates for the highest offices in the land.

REPORT

From The

Minnesota House of Representatives

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

When national education reports released last year concluded American schools needed a shot of adrenaline, Minnesota lawmakers were not surprised. For a couple of years already, House and Senate education leaders were conducting intensive studies into our traditional school systems and trying to determine what changes were necessary to bring them into the 1980's.

By the time the national reports surfaced, the Minnesota Legislature had already begun passing legislation geared toward upgrading curriculum, improving teacher training and implementing greater use of technology in our schools.

And when the 1984 session convened March 6, our education leaders were prepared with an extensive program to increase learning, excellence, assessment and development in the public school system.

In short, the program recognizes Minnesota's long-standing commitment to quality education and sets three goals to improve on what is already recognized nationally as a progressive school system. The goals are: first, to provide a system to consistently evaluate the effectiveness of Minnesota's schools in providing educational services; second, to provide a means to test methods of improving our educational institutions; and third, to strengthen and increase the number and range of opportunities for furthering academic excellence in Minnesota public schools.

These goals come with extensive recommendations which will go under debate in the education committees. The first bills presented to lawmakers addressed goal one and more specifically, curriculum assessment.

Based on the premise that students, parents and taxpayers have a right to know they are getting the best education possible with the tax dollars available, lawmakers will consider strengthening the planning, evaluation, and reporting act (PER) which originated in 1975.

As an annual evaluation conducted by school district personnel and community representatives, PER has aided greatly in past education development. But it can go a step further through a requirement that school districts conduct a local assessment program in at least one curriculum area each year across at least three grade levels.

The evaluation tests would be designed to measure a school district's strengths and weaknesses within certain curriculum areas, and the progress of a districts' students could be compared with those in other districts or states.

Each school complying with the new PER requirement and receiving approval from the commissioner of education would be eligible to receive state aid of $1 per pupil or a minimum of $1,500 per district.

PER and the other proposals promoted by our education leaders will continue debate in the education committee over the next few weeks. I anticipate some lively discussions on the subject as we are delving into innovative, yet experimental areas.

As new bills come before the education committee, I will report them back to you. In the meantime, I would appreciate your comments and suggestions on the direction you believe we should take with state schools. You can contact me at Room 263 State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155; phone (612) 296-9918.

Home Finance Loan Funds To Be Available

Approximately $60 million in below-market interest rate loans is available to Minnesotans for home financing, reports State Representative Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls.

Coordinated by the Minnesota Housing Finance agency, the program is aimed at families with low to moderate incomes who might not otherwise be able to afford a home of their own or improve an existing one, Sparby said.

Eligible home buyers can apply for long-term mortgage loans at initial interest rates of 11⅞ per cent. After March 1, 1993, the rate will be 13¾ per cent. While most of the funds are targeted to families buying their first home, some money is available to other qualified applicants, Sparby said.

"In our area of the state, eligible applicants can not have an adjusted household income of more than $30,000 if they are buying a new home," Sparby said. "Their income can not exceed $25,000 if they intend to buy an existing home."

To receive home improvement loans, which carry interest rates from three per cent to 11 per cent depending on income, an applicant can not have an adjusted household income of more than $24,000, according to MHFA guidelines. Eligible borrowers can receive as much as $15,000 for improvements ranging from installing energy saving measures to improving electrical, plumbing or heating systems. Borrowers will have as long as 15 years to repay home improvement loans, Sparby said.

"Applying for these loans is relatively easy," Sparby said, "since the paperwork is processed through local lending institutions. Applications in this area can be made to: First American Bank, Crookston and American State Bank, Grygla.

"Economically speaking," Sparby said, "it seems like now is a good time to apply for these low-interest rate loans so that Minnesotans can take advantage of fairly stable prices, as well as the spring construction season."

Crime Report Shows Decline In Minnesota

Reported Minnesota crime statistics from the Bureau of Criminal Apprehensions (BCA) for 1983 show that all crime is down from the previous year. While the population has increased only six per cent in Minnesota since 1973, crime is up over 22 per cent during that period.

A recap of 1983 crimes show violent crime — murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault — was down over 12 per cent. Property crime — burglary, larceny, theft and arson — was off nine per cent.

In the rural areas of the state an eight per cent decline was reported while urban areas experienced a nine per cent drop in crime. The statistics are compiled and furnished by the BCA as part of its annual uniform crime reports.

The state's three biggest cities, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, all reported significant decreases in the number of crimes in 1983. Other information gleaned from the BCA's report shows most murder victims were killed by a family member or friend. Half the robberies in the state take place on the street (highway, alley, etc.). Over two-thirds of the aggravated assaults involve some type of weapon. And, over half the burglaries reported were of the "forcible entry" variety.

There were a total of 168,265 criminal offenses reported in Minnesota in 1983 compared to 185,224 in 1982. They include the following, with 1983 figures listed first and comparative 1982 figures in parentheses: Murder, 66 (95); robbery, 3,299 (4,190); rape, 932 (938); burglaries, 44,585 (48,899); assaults, 3,625 (3,844); larceny, 106,106 (116,425); vehicle theft, 8,674 (9,819); and arson, 978 (1,109).

Why the reported decrease in the state's crime statistics last year? Commissioner Tschida believes improved law enforcement and an older population are the principal reasons behind the over all drop in crime around the country and Minnesota. Most crimes are committed by persons in the 18 to 24 age group and as that group's numbers decrease in the population so does the crime rate.

Section 8 Tournament Figures

Attendance figures, and subsequently gate receipts, were down this year for the 1984 Section 8 high school hockey tournament games played at the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Total attendance for the seven-game, five-session tournament was 10,588, according to information made available through Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith, the Section 8 tournament manager. That amounted to gate receipts of $21,962 in ticket sales.

Those figures are impressive, but still represent a drop from the last Section 8 tournament played here in 1982 when a record 13,352 fans attended the event, producing a record $27,850 in gate receipts.

In 1983 the tournament was played in East Grand Forks, attracting 12,630 fans and producing $26,664 in gate receipts. A record 3,974 fans attended the Section 8 championship game that year when Roseau edged Thief River Falls 1-0. That topped the then-record crowd of 3,341 who watched the 1982 championship game here when East Grand Forks tripped Bemidji 3-1 — getting an open net goal in the final six seconds to expand upon a narrow 2-1 lead.

Championship game once again attracted in excess of 3,000 fans this year as 3,122 watched the Fri., March 2, title game when Roseau shaded Bemidji 4-3.

There were 2,563 tickets sold for the opening night Fri., Feb. 24, quarterfinal doubleheader when Roseau beat Moorhead 8-3 and Crookston shut out Thief River Falls 3-0 — padding a 1-0 lead with two goals in the final minute of play, one of them into an open net.

A crowd of 1,347 was on hand for the Sat., Feb. 25, quarterfinal doubleheader as Bemidji eliminated Warroad 4-1 and Fergus Falls decked Alexandria 9-2.

That was the smallest crowd of the 1984 tournament. There were 2,006 on hand for the Mon., Feb. 27, semifinal game in which Roseau doubled Crookston 6-3, while 1,550 showed up for the Tues., Feb. 28, semifinal game when Bemidji defeated Fergus Falls 6-2.

Smith said the tournament went off without a hitch. "It was super; the best ever," he exclaimed. "It was the smoothest yet. We have so many groups who have worked the tournament so many years that they just take charge and get their jobs done. And the fans were just great, too."

Reason for the drop in attendance, according to Smith, was the tournament draw. When East Grand Forks, normally a Section 8 contender, was eliminated in first round sub-section play, a large delegation of Green Wave supporters was taken out of the tournament ticket-buying picture. Meanwhile, Moorhead and Alexandria teams just don't have the large backing that, say, an East Grand Forks would have. And the long trips facing potential ticket buyers in Alexandria, Fergus Falls and Moorhead also likely influenced the size of the crowds.

Over the past seven years the Section 8 tournament crowd figures include 9,275 in 1978 at Thief River Falls; 6,797 in 1979 at East Grand Forks when the weather raised havoc with the tournament; 11,623 in 1980 at Thief River Falls; 10,823 in 1981 at East Grand Forks; 13,352 in 1982 at Thief River Falls; 12,630 in 1983 at East Grand Forks; and 10,588 in 1984 at Thief River Falls.

Section 8 tournament has alternated on a yearly basis between Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks since 1976, but site of the 1985 event hasn't been selected yet. Section 8 coaches meeting will be held Wednesday, and their recommendation will be forwarded to the combined Region 8A-8AA committee for study. Tournament bids are expected from Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Moorhead. It may happen, too, that split sites will be suggested for the quarterfinals and semifinals, and then arenas in Fergus Falls, Alexandria and Bemidji could also be considered.

Shorthanded Northwomen Attain Success By Finishing Schedule

Shorthanded Northland community college women's basketball team gained a measure of satisfaction this winter by simply completing the 1983-84 schedule.

Injuries and defections reduced Northland's roster to the bare minimum, with the Northwomen playing a good portion of the season with just five players.

They finished 7-12, but struggled through the Northwest Division-counting portion of their schedule with a 2-9 record. Most of those games were played with the five-member squad.

Northland coach Deb Jacobson had nothing but praise for the players who stuck with the team and played some good basketball under a difficult situation.

"I've never had five people who gave more or worked harder," said Jacobson. "If we just had a few more people we would have been right in there."

It was just prior to Northland's first Northwest Division assignment of the season Jan. 25 at Fergus Falls that the roster, small to start with, finally dropped to five. Jacobson explained that a team vote was taken at that point to see if the Northwomen wanted to continue with the schedule, or fold up shop. It was a unanimous vote, she said, to keep playing.

"They wanted to play. They felt they had worked hard and deserved the chance to play," Jacobson pointed out. "They excepted the challenge."

While the Northwomen accomplished their goal of finishing the 1983-84 campaign, they lost six of their last seven games. Fatigue and foul trouble simply took their toll.

It was an all-freshman crew that was on hand at the end, headed by All-Northwest Division selections Karen Sovde, a 6-0 center from Greenbush, and Brenda Dahl, a 5-8 guard-forward from Newfolden. They both finished with 14-point scoring averages. Sovde led the team with 310 rebounds, averaging 16.3 per game, and also came up with a team-high 46 blocked shots. Dahl, meanwhile, led the team with 99 assists, averaging 5.2 per game, and 89 steals.

Kathy Pietruszewski, a 5-7 forward from East Grand Forks, Jenee Frolander, a 5-3 guard from Warroad, and Jenyne Beehler, a 5-10 forward from Finlayson, all made major contributions as well.

Freshman Kari Skoglund, a 5-7 guard-forward from Middle River, would have ranked as one of the leaders for the Northwomen, but was limited to a very spotting part-time playing role at the end after suffering a knee injury earlier in the season.

"It was a frustrating year," acknowledged Jacobson, "but it was a fun year, too. Hopefully they'll all be back next year. If they are, we'll be tough."

Northland wins this winter were recorded against Briercrest of Caran, Sask. 81-39; Seneca of Toronto 54-49; Red River of Winnipeg 79-48 and 71-27; Hibbing 53-49; and Rainy River 74-50.

Losses came at the hands of Winnipeg Express 86-40; Normandale 65-57; Itasca 61-49 and 48-47; Mesabi 79-75; Vermilion 97-52; Fergus Falls 91-53 and 90-67; Brainerd 62-54 and 73-28; and the University of Minnesota-Crookston 63-43 and 73-45.

Wildlife Week Being Observed March 18-24

National Wildlife Week is being observed March 18-24. This year the theme is "Water, We Can't Live Without It."

Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District gave wildlife week education kits to the schools to use for classroom exercises.

District also encourages landowners that are interested in developing a wildlife area to stop by the office on Highway 59 South in Thief River Falls for more information.

Some examples of projects include:

1 — Digging a shallow pond for waterfowl;

2 — Digging a deep pit for small and big game;

3 — Planting a variety of trees for food and cover, and planting food plots to leave over winter (corn, sunflowers, etc.).

Programs are available for cost-sharing assistance and the staff and the soil conservation office will help you work out a design.

Pheasant Emergency

"Sportsmen and other Minnesotans who value the state's rich wildlife heritage have shown their commitment to conservation during the winter pheasant feeding emergency," Commissioner of Natural Resources Joseph Alexander declared.

Thousands of citizen volunteers and DNR employees have distributed 2¼ million pounds of corn to Minnesota wildlife so far this winter, said Alexander.

"In fact, I am sure that we do not have an accurate tally of all the corn put out, since hundreds of persons purchased and distributed the feed at their own expense," he said.

Alexander emphasized that DNR employees alone could never have undertaken such a widespread program and he credited farmers, sportsmen, snowmobile clubs, 4-H groups, individuals and Future Farmers of America chapters with making it a success.

He expressed the DNR's gratitude to all those who have contributed their time, effort and funds and asked that they continue feeding until the emergency is officially declared over.

"We have another million pounds of corn that will be made available at previously established distribution centers until the end of March," said Alexander.

Baptism River Site

Development work is expected to begin late this summer on a combination highway rest area and entrace station to Tettegouche State Park in northeastern Minnesota, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

The project will be located just off of Highway 61 (North Shore Drive) on the Baptism river north of Silver Bay. Officials said the project will be a cooperative venture of the DNR and Department of Transportation.

Development will cost an estimated $854,000 and will be financed through the Legislative Commission on Minnesota Resources (LCMR) and highway trust funds. LCMR monies are derived from a tax on cigarettes and highway funds from a tax on gasoline.

Project will consist of a "Class I Rest Area" with parking for both cars and trucks, and a building that will serve the rest area and also serve as a contact station for the park.

The building will offer modern sanitation facilities, traveler information and office space for the park manager and staff, including a counter to register campers and sell motor vehicle state park entrance permits.

DNR and DOT have agreed that the building should be rustic in character.

Visitors entering the park will cross the river on a bridge that once served Highway 61 before the road was rerouted several years ago. The bridge will be upgraded to modern standards of safety and capacity, officials said.

When completed, the facility will be the only visitor vehicle entrance to the 4,000-acre Tettegouche-Baptism River State Park.

Most of the park will remain in a roadless condition with campgrounds and other intensive-use areas confined to lands adjacent to Highway 61.

Norway Pine Seedlings

Norway pine seedlings from nurseries operated by the Department of Natural Resources were taken to Norway this month by 88 men and women of the Minnesota National Guard as gifts for the families they were visiting. DNR Forestry officials said "these seedlings are a living gift that will continue through the years to symbolize the friendship between the American soldiers and the Norwegian families."

This is the 11th year that members of the state's National Guard have been sent to Norway for training with Norwegian troops. During February, 90 Norwegian soldiers trained with American troops at Camp Ripley.

Officials noted that Scandinavians have long practiced intensive forest management, including extensive tree planting programs.

States To Receive Fish, Wildlife Aid

An additional $37.2 million in federal aid funds have been apportioned to the 50 states, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands for fish and wildlife restoration programs, Interior Secretary William Clark has announced. This brings to $119.8 million the amount available to the states by the federal government in the 1984 fiscal year.

Money will be used by the states to finance sport fish and wildlife restoration and hunter education under programs popularly known as the "Dingell-Johnson" and "Pittman - Robertson" programs. Of the total funds available, $73 million are for wildlife restoration, $15.4 million are for hunter education, and $31.4 million are for sport fish restoration.

Federal aid funds are made available to the states in two apportionments annually as tax receipts become available at the Treasury Department. For this fiscal year, a preliminary apportionment of $82.6 million was made on October 21, 1983.

Funds for wildlife restoration and hunter education programs come from an 11 per cent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition, a 10 per cent tax on handguns, and an 11 per cent tax on archery equipment. Distribution of wildlife restoration funds is based on a formula which takes into account the number of hunting license holders and the land area of each state. The funds may be used for such activities as acquisition and development of wildlife habitat and research for improvement of wildlife management practices.

Hunter education funds, distributed according to the relative population of each state, may be used by the state wildlife agencies for conducting hunter education programs which include the construction, operation, and maintenance of public target ranges.

Fish restoration funds come from a 10 per cent tax on fishing rods, reels, creels, and artificial lures, baits, and flies. Distribution of funds is made according to a formula based on the number of fishing license holders and the land area of each state, including coastal and Great Lakes waters. The funds are used by the state agencies for such activities as purchasing land and water areas for development of access sites and fishing facilities and conducting research in fishery management.

Final apportionment for federal aid in wildlife restoration Fiscal Year 1984:

Alabama $1,587,402; Alaska $3,804,500; Arizona $1,955,539; Arkansas $1,545,608; California $3,395,108; Colorado $2,195,924; Connecticut $663,849; Delaware $519,500; Florida $1,675,794; Georgia $1,897,037; Hawaii $519,500; Idaho $1,627,212; Illinois $1,832,358 Indiana $1,611,952; Iowa $1,551,912; Kansas $1,671,686; Kentucky $1,463,691; Louisiana $1,786,844; Maine $1,014,236; Maryland $881,317; Massachusetts $828,500; Michigan $3,491,327; Minnesota $2,472,248; Mississippi $1,383,739; Missouri $2,237,129; Montana $2,304,286; Nebraska $1,427,541; Nevada $1,579,387; New Hampshire $519,500; New Jersey $830,687; New Mexico $1,868,157; New York $2,641,573; North Carolina $1,742,265; North Dakota $1,161,855; Ohio $1,911,576; Oklahoma $1,693,417; Oregon $2,201,018; Pennsylvania $3,675,794; Rhode Island $519,500; South Carolina $1,075,862; South Dakota $1,386,965; Tennessee $2,103,953; Texas $4,113,500; Utah $1,636,301; Vermont $549,950 Virginia $1,857,857; Washington $1,876,603; West Virginia $1,111,670; Wisconsin $2,648,463; Wyoming $1,648,410; Guam $121,666; N. # Loss Of Prairie Lands Concerns DNR Officials

Department of Natural Resources has recently developed a list of endangered and threatened wildlife species for Minnesota. These are wildlife species which have become rare within their range in Minnesota.

Many of these endangered species are native to prairie habitats, those priceless parcels of native grassland which remain in western Minnesota. Of the total number of birds, mammals, reptiles and amphibians that are endangered and threatened, 50 per cent are prairie inhabitants. Endangered species include the Burrowing Owl, Sprague's Pipit, Baird's sparrow, Chestnut-collared Longspur and Five-lined Skink. Threatened species include the Prairie Vole and the Loggerhead Shrike.

Reason these animals are becoming rare is that over 99 per cent of the original prairie in Minnesota has been eliminated. What remains is there because of public ownership or because of the concern of private landowners.

Department of Natural Resources owns 7,500 acres of prairie within wildlife management areas in northwest Minnesota's 22 counties. Nature Conservancy, a private nonprofit corporation, owns 6,300 acres of prairie. Private landowners own 4,400 acres. U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service owns another 7,500 acres. Still, this is less than 40 square miles of prairie.

People of Minnesota are fortunate to have so much prairie. Ownership, however, is not enough. The land must be managed to maintain the habitat. Historically, fires were common over the vast prairies, insuring that trees such as oak and aspen did not become established. Prescribed fire still needs to be used to maintain our prairies to insure the presence of beautiful prairie flowers such as Prairie Crocus, Scarlet Paintbrush and Blazing Star.

In 1983, the nongame wildlife program provided funds for prescribed burning in northwest Minnesota, resulting in over 2,000 acres of prairie habitat being burned. In 1984, the prairie management emphasis will continue.

Nongame wildlife program is funded by donations on the state income and property tax forms. For more information on this and other nongame projects in northwest Minnesota, contact Katie Hirsch, DNR nongame specialist, 2115 Birchmont Beach Rd. N.E., Bemidji, MN 56601.

Term "acid rain" was first coined more than 100 years ago by a British chemist, Robert Angus Smith, who observed that as skies over Manchester became increasingly dirty, the rain became increasingly acidic.

DNR Hotline

1. What are the regulations regarding burning leaves and debris and when can I obtain a burning permit?

Forest law requires a burning permit for any fire other than a campfire or a fire in an approved incinerator whenever the ground is not snow covered. However, Pollution Control Agency regulations require a burning permit all year round. Therefore, burning permits are required any time of the year for fires other than campfires or incinerators. For example, burning permits can be issued for trees, brush, grass, paper, and cardboard. Burning permits will not be issued for such things as rubber tires, oils, plastics, railroad ties, tar paper, and dumpground burning.

You can obtain a burning permit from DNR Forestry Office from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also obtain a burning permit from a Township Firewarden anytime but please use common courtesy on the hours. John Heimeman, Bemidji District Forester.

2. I noticed that the squirrels that are coming to my bird feeder are missing patches of fur from their chest area. Why is this?

Normally, squirrels do not pull fur in the spring, as do rabbits. Their nests are composed of leaves and twigs. Any fur which is missing would have been caused by abrasion, or by other natural causes. Katherine Hirsch, nongame wildlife specialist.

3. With the return of spring the crows come back to the area, is it legal to shoot them?

Crows are unprotected under the Minnesota laws, however they are protected by federal law. Basically crows can be taken if they are going to or are about to do depredation to crops under federal law.

4. Do you have a question, complaint, or a suggestion regarding how your natural resources are being managed?

DNR Hotline is your direct channel to a representative who will answer you, whether it concerns parks, fish, wildlife, forests, waters and minerals. Write DNR Hotline, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road NE, Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 755-3976.

National Wildlife Federation
News Release

Western Regional Environmental Education Council, representing 13 western states, was selected to receive a 1983 National Conservation Award by the National Wildlife Federation (NWF), and was honored at a ceremony at the group's Annual Meeting in Atlanta, Georgia, on Saturday, March 17.

Winning the Education Award, WREEC received a hand-crafted statuette of an endangered whooping crane at the annual meeting, attended by delegates of the NWF's affiliates in 51 states and territories.

Founded in 1970 by Rudy Schafer of the California State Department of Education with a federal grant, WREEC is an organization of representatives of state education and natural resource management agencies from Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

"As the nation's strongest and most effective regional environmental education network, WREEC has greatly enhanced environmental education in the 13 states it represents — and beyond," said Jay D. Hair, NWF Executive Vice President.

"It serves as a vital regional link-up of resource management professionals and educators, inspiring working relationships that provide solid conservation education for thousands of students."

In cooperation with the Western Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies, WREEC developed Project WILD, a conservation education program emphasizing wildlife which is now used in 22 states and such organizations as the NWF and its affiliates, the American Humane Association, and the Canadian Wildlife Federation. The program's goal is to "result in informed decisions, responsible behavior, and constructive actions concerning wildlife and the environment upon which all life depends."

With funding support and guidance from the American Forest Institute, WREEC developed Project Learning Tree, an educational program that has reached more than 60,000 teachers in 33 states. That joint effort has provided opportunities for young people to learn about the environment, forest resources and the decisions that must be made about the environment's management.

With these two programs, WREEC has succeeded in creating an education network that encompasses national, state and local level professionals, and provides quality environmental education across the country, Hair said.

WREEC has also played an important role in national conservation education through its leadership in the Alliance for Environmental Education, sponsoring and participating in four national leadership conferences, sharing information and materials, and spreading the conservation word through its educational programs, according to the award citation.

"As its successes mount, WREEC continues to be financed by member dues, state contributions, and grants," the award reads. "With the increasing recognition of Project Learning Tree and Project WILD, WREEC is on its way to assuming a role of national leadership in the field."

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — I went on active duty one year ago and I might get discharged soon. What Veterans Administration benefits could I receive?

A — The Congress passed a law three years ago that changed the service requirements for veterans' benefits. There is no entitlement to any benefit based on military service if the veteran does not serve out the original commitment to active duty or 24 months, whichever is less. The only exceptions will be made of those who leave the military because of a service-connected disability or because of a hardship in his or her family.

Q — I became disabled due to an injury on the job. Although I do receive workmens' compensation, I am having a difficult time making the premium payments on my National Service Life Insurance policy. Can the Veterans Administration help me?

A — If you are found to be totally disabled for insurance purposes for six months or more, you may be entitled to a waiver of premiums.

Q — Is it true that World War I veterans with "K" insurance policies no longer have to pay premiums?

A — Yes. As of January 1, 1983, premiums are no longer required on "K" insurance policies.

Q — Is there a new jobs training program for veterans?

A — Yes. The program is open to veterans who served on active duty for at least 180 days during the Korean Conflict or Vietnam-era, or received service-connected disabilities during those periods, and have been unemployed for at least 15 of the 20 weeks before application. Employers will be reimbursed up to half the veteran's starting wages, up to a maximum of $10,000 per veteran. Maximum training programs are nine months for most veterans and up to 15 months for those veterans with service-connected disabilities or serious employment handicaps.

Q — How much can I borrow on a Veterans Administration guaranty home loan?

A — The total amount of a loan is determined by the lending institution and by the borrower's ability to repay the loan. The VA will guarantee 60 per cent of the loan or $27,500, whichever is less provided that the loan does not exceed the reasonable value of the property.

Q — I own a manufactured home. Can I use my Veterans Administration home loan guaranty entitlement to purchase a lot and pay for site preparation?

A — Yes. An eligible veteran may use his or her VA loan guaranty entitlement to purchase a lot including the cost of site preparation when there is a current mortgage and the home is occupied by the veteran. The mortgage may be refinanced to include the cost of the lot, site preparation costs, and applicable fees and charges.

Remember how much fun wage and price controls were back in the early 1970s? Remember how successful they were in beating back inflation and providing for an inflation-free decade? And especially, remember how fair it was having our wages fixed, not by the cold, cruel free market, but by government edict from our friends, the bureaucrats in Washington?

You don't remember all that? Well, frankly, neither do I. What we do remember is the mess that the Nixon administration made of our economy when it saddled us with the straitjacket of wage and price controls. In truth, neither President Nixon nor the Democrat-controlled Congress, which egged him on, can take credit for coming up with this idea. It is actually a very old, very stupid idea. In Forty Centuries of Wage and Price Controls, authors Robert Schuettinger and Eamonn Butler chronicle government attempts to control the free market dating back to ancient Egypt, more than 2,000 years before the birth of Christ. History has added a third truism to the duet of taxes and death: Attempts by governments to fix wages or prices will always fail. Indeed, they will make things worse. The failure of wage and price controls was so complete in the early '70s that no one since has seriously suggested that the government should replace the free market in setting wages and prices. Until now.

Yes, the I-live-in-Washington-and - I-can-run-your-life-better - than-you-can crowd is at it again. The idea has a new name this time, just as taxes are now called "revenue enhancement" or "tax base erosion control," and Francois Mitterand's nationalization practices might be called "industrial policy."

The new name for bureaucratic control of the economy is called "comparable worth."

More than just the name has been changed. Government control of the economy is in such disrepute that "comparable worth" is being peddled as a women's issue. It is not. Civil rights laws in the 1960s made it a federal crime to pay men and women different salaries for the same job. Legislation also made it a federal crime to discriminate based on sex in hiring employees. Thus, it is illegal to tell a woman that she cannot become a plumber or electrician, although women often have to contend with restrictive union regulations, and it is illegal for a firm to pay a female plumber more or less than a male plumber. Wage and employment discrimination against women, as with minorities, is illegal. Case closed. Problem solved. On with progress.

Not so, say many liberal organizations, several of the Democratic candidates for the presidency, and a federal judge in Washington state. They wish the federal government to insist, not simply on equal pay for equal work, but on equal pay for "comparable work." They posit that some jobs held predominantly by women are "comparable" to other jobs held mostly by men. Any difference between the pay of a truck driver and, say, a guidance counselor, they argue, is due not to differences between the two occupations, but to hidden sex discrimination.

Anticipating the potential for added powers, bureaucrats have already argued that nurses and electricians and secretaries and carpenters are of comparable worth and ought to be paid the same.

The issue is heading to the Supreme Court. While it is not headline news today, it is a critical issue if freedom of contract is to be continued in the United States. Your freedom and Mine. If the Reagan administration is serious in its support for individual liberty and a free and growing economy, it will instruct the Justice Department to expose "comparable worth" for what it is — wage controls for the entire economy — and oppose the issue before the Supreme Court.

Writing bureaucratic control of our wages into the Constitution would be a disaster beyond comprehension. And changing the name has not improved an idea that has failed for the past four millennia.

Life Of Cowboy Wasn't Romantic

by Mary Combs
Smithsonian News Service

The "real" cowboy labored in the era of cattle ranching that began after the Civil war. He tended the cattle that grazed on vast, unfenced publice ranges and drove the beef, destined for the slaughterhouses of Chicago, hundreds of miles to the Kansas railheads.

"To the cowboy, his did not seem like a particularly romantic existence," states Lonn Taylor, co-author of "The American Cowboy"

In the 1920s, one former cowboy wrote of "going hungry, getting wet and cold, riding sorebacked horses, going to sleep on herd and losing cattle, getting cussed by the boss, scouting for graybacks (body lice). . . I always had the 'big time' when I arrived in San Antonio but I would soon be busted. . . The next spring I would have the same old trip. . . with the same old wind-up. I put in 18 or 20 years on the trail and all I had in the final outcome was a pair of high-heeled boots, a pair of striped pants, and about $4.80 worth of other clothes, so there you are."

Who were the real cowboys? They were young, mostly in their 20s; some were truly boys. Most of the white cowboys were southerners, with a sprinkling of midwesterners and a "conspicuous minority of Englishmen." Many were Indian and fully a third were either Mexican or black — a fact ignored by the mythmakers.

"In the myth," Taylor says, "the cowboy wears a pistol and spends most of his time chasing outlaws and attractive women. In real life, the cowboy spent a lot of time with cattle." He usually owned a gun but seldom carried one, and he wasn't very good at using it. As for romance, a life, like a horse, was a luxury few cowboys could afford.

"The daily reality of the cowboy," Taylor says, "was work. In the summertime, it was hot, dusty, bonebreaking work; in the wintertime, it was cold, wet, bonebreaking work, lasting always from 10 to 14 hours a day." The year was a cycle of spring roundup, summer trail drive, fall roundup and winter ranch work or a job in town — if that could be found.

Roundups involved several ranches. Up to 400 cowboys rode far out into the range and then headed back in an ever-tightening circle, gathering cattle as they went, for as long as a week. They "cut" branded animals from the huge herd, an exercise that "brought out the very best in cowboy skills and cooperation between man and horse." They castrated and dehorned the calves and branded them with their mothers' marks, "hot, noisy, bloody work." Then, it was on to the next range to go through it all again. The entire process might take a month and cover a hundred square miles.

"On a man-to-cow basis, the roundup at least provided a certain amount of excitement, and on a man-to-man basis it provided a few days of companionship and even sport," Taylor says. "The trail drive, by contrast, meant months of grueling monotony and hardship interspersed with hours of very real danger."

The herd traveled 12 to 15 miles a day, the pace broken only by dangerous and frustrating river crossings and stampedes. Some stampedes, Taylor adds, were started by locals, who then "slyly offered to help round up the strays — for 50 cents a head." Generally, "Indians were not as much a hazard as an interruption," demanding a steer or two from the herd. Other rigors of the trail included parching dust, bad weather, broken bones, "the blues" and the food — an endless round of "sowbelly," beans, biscuits and black coffee.

At drive's end, cowboys collected their pay and went their separate ways. For some, sleeping in a hotel, taking a bath in a bathhouse or traveling home by train would remain the high point of the entire experience.

Overproduction, homesteading, railroad expansion and the devastating winters of 1884-1886 virtually destroyed the cattle industry. When it recovered, cattle awaited market in barbed-wire-fenced pastures and were shipped at a local rail stop. "The day of the open-range cowboy was over," Taylor says, "but his existence as a mythological hero was just beginning."

"Curiously," he says, "the most fundamental charateristic of the open-range cowboy never entered the myth. . . the understanding of cattle that was the mark of the best cowboys." A modern western Texan "expressed it perfectly: 'Cowpunching is thinking enough about a dumb animal to go out in the rain or snow to try to save that cow. Not for the guy who owns the cow but for the poor old cow and her calf. . . This old cow: she don't know but what you're trying to kill her. But you drag her out, even if she's fighting you, and then you ride a mile yonder and find another danged old cow bogged down the same way.' "

Taylor concludes: "This is certainly not the stuff that myths are made of, but it was what enabled men to move millions of cattle across uncharted prairies, swimming them across rivers and staying with them during stampedes. It was what gave those men the attitude about themselves and their relationship to the rest of the world that created the myth."

FISH FACTS

Dinner For Two — In A Hurry

What to serve for dinner when your day has been hectic, everyone is hungry and you have a desire for fish? The thought of lengthy preparation and a fishy smell in the kitchen can be enough to dissuade anyone from even trying to have fish for dinner. But, if you have whole catfish on hand, you can satisfy your fish hunger without the complicated preparation and lingering odors.

The following recipe, developed by the Country Skillet Home Economists, even allows time to relax and read the paper while dinner bakes.

Individual Catfish Dinners

- 4 cups sliced mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 pear, pared and sliced
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon lemon-pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed rosemary leaves
- 2 cans (16 oz. ea.) whole potatoes, drained
- 4 pan-dressed Country Skillet Catfish (about 2 1/2 to 3 lb.)

In large skillet, saute mushrooms in butter until tender. Stir in pear, parsley, lemon-pepper, rosemary and potatoes. Place each catfish on an 18-inch piece of foil. Top with mushroom mixture. Fold together top edges and sides of foil dinner; place on cookie sheet. Bake in 400°F oven, 18 minutes, or until fish is flaky. Makes 4 servings.

TIP: This recipe can easily be halved, making it an ideal dinner for two.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

A father was describing his 18-year-old son, "He parks his car in the middle of the driveway close to our two-car garage door so that no one else can get their car out of the garage without moving his car. He never calls when he's delayed coming home from school so that his mother goes nuts with worry. When he does call, you can bet he needs money. He expects everyone to jump when he has a request, but he forgets to do what is asked of him. When he's home, I can be out shoveling snow, but he never helps unless he is pushed, and never thinks about doing this on his own if I am away. He's self-centered, self-serving, and interested only in number one. I love him but I sure don't like him."

This attitude reflected in this parent's comments is interesting. I couldn't help but think, "You created your own monster by never allowing you son to grow from a "me" person to a "we" person who thinks about someone other than himself." This "me" attitude is a contributing factor to many of the problems we confront every day.

Our very high rate of family breakup certainly is helped by two self-centered people whose number one concern is "me". Difficulties in getting employees to understand that their company must make wage and benefit adjustments based on the competition, or die, isn't helped by this "me" attitude, either.

It takes maturity to become a "we" person who thinks about more than just "me". So many problems being experienced today result from this lack of maturity and responsibility.

Recently I was in a large city industrial park. In noticed some people picketing around two factories, trying to keep the employees from getting to their places of work. There was no labor dispute. These employees had family obligations with bills to pay. Keeping them from their work meant that these employees could not fulfill their responsibilities.

The pickets were disturbed because these two companies had defense contracts, legally awarded by a government elected by the majority of our people. They intended keeping those defense contracts from being worked on. They were not concerned with their interference in the rights of others. These self-centered individuals could not believe in freedom or justice for everyone. They obviously believed in "me" and prevailing over all others without regard for the law or what is right or wrong.

The police finally escorted the workers through the picket line to their jobs. I then saw the pickets taking air caps off worker car tires and deflating those tires. It was winter and cold. Imagine the problems arising when the work day was completed, it was dark, and those workers came out to find their cars not able to move.

Now I am not opposed to someone walking up and down on public property with a sign saying anything that isn't libelous, defamatory or obscene. I just wonder about individuals who would keep others from earning a living, destroying other people's property and generally being malicious. I know these picketers claim to have had a "cause". But what cause justifies taking away the freedom and rights of others and violates the law?

In one community, the police chief's wife was one of the picketers, even violating parole from another illegal picketing effort. It was interesting to observe her husband and his police force providing coffee and more to the picketers, and only incidentally assisting the workers to their jobs, which was his obligation. These picketers, by their interference, at defense factories, nuclear power plants, construction sites for projects they may not like, and more, are lawbreakers. They are self-centered "me" people who think primarily of themselves, and forget all the rest of us, who are entitled to equal protection under the law.

Somewhere there are moms and dads who contributed to the creation of these monsters, and they paid part of the penalty in enduring them. You and I are paying the rest of the penalty for a crime we didn't commit, the creation of "me" people who will age in years but never mature to "we" people status where they think of someone other than themselves.

Incidentally, no one has yet explained to me how keeping fellow Americans from their jobs has any impact on the expansion of missile placements or weapons production by the Russians, which goes on continuously despite any protests in the United States.

That's Straight Talk!

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf
State Senator — District I

A Minnesota Senate agriculture and natural resources subcommittee Wednesday evening tentatively approved a measure I that would finance $30 million in industrial revenue bond (IRB) loans to farmers to be used exclusively for machinery and other capital expenditures.

This legislation is patterned after a similar and successful program used by over 400 farmers in North Dakota last year. This legislation will help farmers deal with the tight credit situation out there and provide them with low-interest loans for capital expenditures.

The bill, (S.F. 1457), would authorize the state's energy and economic development agency to issue, through public or private sale, $30 million in low-interest (eight to 10 per cent interest) loans to individual borrowers, utilizing local lending institutions for the administration and processing of the loans.

The last four years have witnessed the worst economic environment for Minnesota's agricultural and industrial producers since the Great Depression. A culmination of soft commodity prices, sustained high interest rates, and increased costs of production have resulted in reduced net income figures in agricultural production. As a result, farm businesses have been unable to make the necessary capital expenditures needed to stay in business."

Under current state and federal law, state legislatures can issue agricultural revenue bonds for equipment purchases and capital projects to eligible borrowers. However, due to present regulations governing the issuance of IRB bonds, such a program must be structured into separate lots of $1 million, each of which is free-standing and self-supporting.

A representative of the Piper, Jaffrey and Hopwood investors group told the committee that his agency has sold an $18 million IRB bond program for North Dakota farmers, which was loaned out to over 400 farmers through 40 different lending institutions. The average size of those loans was $45,000, with the six-year loans (at 8.7 per cent) and the 10-yeat loans (at 9.62 per cent) made available at much lower interest costs than the prevailing rates for competing loans (13-14 per cent) at the time.

Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols spoke in support of Stumpf's bill, saying "it is an excellent, affordable way of lending this much-needed funding to farmers when they need it the most, and it benefits both the farmer and main street businesses in the process."

The model loan program that I am presenting is best suited to the particular problems facing agriculture today. The important thing to understand is that it has already been used with widespread success in North Dakota, Alabama, Colorado, Louisiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Virginia.

Under the proposal, land purchases could not be made with the loans, which would be restricted to capital projects, equipment purchases and the purchase of other depreciable property, including livestock.

The taxing power and full faith and credit of the state of Minnesota could not be pledged for repayment of the bonds.

A. J. Volstead Inducted Into Hall Of Fame

Andrew J. Volstead, who was a Minnesota congressman early in this century and recognized as the father of the farm cooperative movement, will be officially inducted into the national agriculture hall of fame April 27, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Volstead was co-author and the prime mover of the federal Capper-Volstead act establishing the farm cooperatives that continue to be a supply, service, credit and marketing backbone of modern agriculture. The cooperative authorization has in more recent years been utilized by urban consumers to provide low cost food and financial services.

Induction into the national agricultural hall of fame is the second significant honor accorded to the late congressman Volstead's memory. In 1979, the Volstead home near Granite Falls was designated a national historic monument.

Sponsors of the national agricultural hall of fame have asked for assistance in locating relatives and surviving associates of the late Congressman Volstead, so that they may be extended official invitations to the induction ceremonies on April 27.

According to Edward Slettom of the Minnesota association of cooperatives, who is assisting in the search for relatives of the late congressman, surviving relatives may be either Volsteads, or the original family name from which the congressman departed, Varalstad.

Identification of any living relatives or associates of the late congressman Volstead may be directed to secretary Harland E. Priddle, Kansas state board of agriculture, 109 S.W. ninth street, Topeka, KS 66612-1280.

FARM ACTION COMMITTEE EXPLAINS SOME OF ITS GOALS and PURPOSES

Because of the controversial importance of farm issues that have been brought to the forefront in recent weeks and because this is National Agriculture Week, we the people involved as members of the Northwest Minnesota Emergency Action Committee feel our position must be stated and explained.

Our group was formed last summer after excessive rainfall once again washed our crops and hopes for our family farms away. At that time we felt that if something wasn't done a significant proportion of farmers would be forced out of business, which would have a disastrous affect on our Northwest business community as a whole.

We realize that at the present time farming is in as bad shape as it has ever been. It is tough to make it in any facet of agriculture.

Through input at meetings organized by the Action Committee and others, and through one-to-one meetings with farmers, a number of problems surfaced. The main one seemed to repeatedly point to the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA).

With the problem recognized, we tried to achieve a solution by working with our elected officials to get legislative action with the emphasis on a long-term, low-inerest legislative measure for everyone.

We emphasized this to our elected officials at every meeting from here to Washington because everyone, no matter what financial condition, had a disaster to some extent.

We felt then and now that immediate action was necessary. Because our legislative efforts never achieved the results we were hoping for, we felt compelled to try to achieve a solution through existing sources such as FmHA. That would, at least at the present, keep most people farming.

Through the efforts of many, we found that FmHA had programs designed to help problems such as farmers face here but was not implementing them.

We must point out that these lending policies that we worked to make available were already established FmHA procedure, but for some reason were not being implemented.

The culmination of our efforts was getting a Federal FmHA task force to investigate lending practices and personnel problems in our FmHA district. They verified that there was a problem with implementing some programs that would help individual farmers survive the financial crunch. The ensuing tractorcade publicized the issue on a national level and resulted in the large work force, headed by Maurice McLinn, that was sent in to straighten out the problem and process the backlog of loan applications.

Because we feel that there is a misunderstanding, we feel compelled to explain our objectives.

We feel that the community, as a whole, will benefit from our actions. We feel the strength of our community is in agriculture, specifically the family farm, and any financial help received by farmers will help our uptown business as well as our farmers.

Another point we must bring out is that FmHA does not freely hand out five per cent money. The loan procedure is closely followed and borrowers must conform to regulations. Also, five per cent is a variable rate that will go up when the financial condition of the farmer improves.

We must also stress that FmHA procedures state that to receive assistance, the application must be for a family farm. These FmHA loans are not going to bail out everyone, as everybody's financial condition is different. These loans will only truly help those who use good farm management practices.

With our depressed farm economy and our consecutive disaster years, we as a community are losing the good managers as well as the bad. This has a negative impact on the whole economy.

We have seen that by unified community effort of farmers and businessmen, we have called attention to and solved a small portion of our problems.

We look to the future with positive optimism and with the hope that we can affect future government policy that will benefit all farmers and businessmen.

In summary, we would like to quote from a statement drawn up by the Regional Catholic Bishops of the Heartland in their publication, Strangers and Guests.

"Besides its implications for personal values, the small and moderate-sized family farm is the basis for a humane, responsible and effective national food production system. The alternative to this system is one dominated by large investor-owned corporations and massive farms."

Realizing that the printed word sometimes confuses, please feel fee to call and question anyone on our committee. Ultimately we want a better America.

Town Meeting On Education Tuesday

Community input on public education in the Thief River Falls community is being requested for a town meeting scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Franklin middle school cafeteria. All taxpayers of the district, whether parents of students or not, are urged to participate.

An advertisement in the Times asking for public input has created some response but additional reactions are needed, according to Larry McDowell, chairman of the local excellence in education committee. "We would like very much to have people come to that meeting to discuss the issues of education that prevail in this school district," he said.

Ruth Randall, commissioner of education for the state of Minnesota, has asked each school district to participate in a town meeting. The reason for this is the need for better communication between public schools and the participants and taxpayers of that district.

School District 564 has gone through a series of cuts and reductions in programs over the past two years. The school board and administration need input from the community as to the kinds of areas that the district should be addressing in replacement of those cuts and also in improvement of programs.

To that end, the School District 564 board of education has appointed the excellence in education committee — to review where the district is at the present time, and where it should be.

The committee is chaired by Larry McDowell and includes Merle Lindberg, Rev. Curtis Anderson, Pat Johnson, Whitey Olson, Lisa Arnold,

Council Grants Zoning To Build Condominiums

With Mayor Bob Carlson casting a tie-breaking vote, Thief River Falls city council defeated a motion to rezone the Julian Gunderson property back to R1, thereby allowing Gunderson to proceed with plans to build two 12-family condominiums between Breezy Drive and the Red Lake River.

That action now opens the door for legal action against the city from adjoining property owners, who threatened to sue if the council did not reverse a February 14 decision which rezoned the Gunderson lots from R1 (low density residential) to R3, which allows apartment buildings and condominiums. That February 14 decision was made by a 7-0 vote of the council, with Alderman Don Goodrich abstaining.

Although the adjoining property owners had vocally opposed the rezoning request at two previous planning commission hearings, where it was unanimously defeated, they were not present when the council approved it, and claimed that the notification process had gotten "fouled up," after council had removed the topic from the agenda the first time it was scheduled. They also cited an inability to believe that council would vote to reverse a unanimous decision by the planning commission.

Last night's meeting was an adjourned session from the previous Tuesday, which was closed to the public so that council could consult with their attorney regarding the threatened litigation. In reintroducing the topic, last night, Mayor Carlson stated that he saw no need for further discussion from the sides involved in the controversy, but noted that since Gunderson had been asked if he could provide "additional assurances" that the project would remain as proposed, he would be allowed to present them.

Although council is forbidden by law to place discriminatory restrictions on housing, they had expressed concern that there was no guarantee that the project would remain "senior citizen housing" once it was built.

As an assurance, Ruth Jenny, attorney for Julian Gunderson, presented the

School Facilities Report Received

Official ratification of the 1983-84 and 1984-85 contract between School District 564 and its teachers' association has been set for a special meeting Monday at 7 a.m. in the school district service center board room. The action came at a regular meeting of the board Monday evening.

The tentative contract agreement was discussed and the board voted 4-3 to distribute salaries on an across-the-board percentage basis. Also scheduled for the special session Monday morning is continuation of the unrequested leave and termination process.

A good deal of board attention was directed to recommendations made by the facilities advisory committee regarding Lincoln high school and other district-wide facilities and program questions. The committee has recommended continuing use of the present Lincoln location and bonding for $5.5 to $6 million for an addition and remodeling.

The recommendation also included leaving the Northwest vocational center school where it is in the school district service center building, and retaining the class organization of kindergarten through fifth grade in the elementary schools, sixth through eighth grades in Franklin middle school and ninth through 12th grade at Lincoln. Idea of an overpass on Main avenue between Lincoln and the center school was rejected as being too expensive.

Board members accepted the recommendation of retaining the Lincoln site, favored retention of the class organization as it exists, expressed the opinion that a $5.5 to $6 million bond issue was reasonable and agreed that a pedestrian overpass was too costly to consider.

But they expressed concern at keeping the center school where it is and suggested that the committee further study the costs of bringing the center school into the Lincoln complex. A board subcommittee consisting of Archie Cameron, Hank Hallstrom and Arnt Aune was established to further consider the possibility of acquiring property around Lincoln high school.

Board negotiating committees were appointed as follows: Harry Sjulson, Hank Hallstrom and Myrle Carlson with Dr. Leo Ruberto as advisor and spokesman and Arnt

MCC Teacher Of Year Is Step-By-Step Advocate

TEACHER OF THE YEAR at Marshall county central school in Newfolden for 1984 is Mark Jorgenson who teaches seventh and eighth grade mathematics, first year algebra, computer science, and geometry or second year algebra on alternating years. He is pictured during an eighth grade mathematics class which was reviewing for a test the following day.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

When Mark Jorgenson was attending high school in his home town of Rothsay, his physics teacher was Leon Elseth from Newfolden. Now Jorgenson is not only a mathematics teacher at Elseth's home school but the 1984 Marshall county central teacher of the year.

"I had several good high school instructors in the math field," Jorgenson said about his motivation to enter the field of mathematics education. "I think they helped develop my interest in mathematics. Steve Zimmerman and Ron Wilner, along with Leon Elseth, provided me with a good foundation. And Leon helped me toward joining the MCC faculty when I graduated from Moorhead state university in 1977."

Jorgenson presently teaches seventh and eighth grade mathematics, first year algebra for ninth graders, computer science, and second year algebra or geometry on alternating years. He says he is pleased with the math students he has had in his classes at Newfolden over the years. Joe Riesen of Viking is completing a BA degree in mathematics at Moorhead state this year and expects to transfer out of state to pursue a doctorate in the field. Dave Kragness, an MCC graduate two years ago, is also working toward a math major in college.

It is not difficult for Jorgenson to adapt to the instructional program of a school district like Marshall county central which has a complement of about 14 full-time teachers. His home town of Rothsay is also small and the school he attended there did not have a large enrollment. He realizes the variety of interests and abilities in students of any community and tries to meet the challenge of guiding them through a complex field in an orderly manner.

"I stress daily the importance of step-by-step solution to all equations," he says in the statement of philosophy which was prepared for the teacher of the year competition. "At first the students may have difficulty understanding the full reason why they must do 'all that work', but in short order they start to see that this method does help them to understand the basics and the more complex problems are easier to solve.

"This method of solving problems, through step-by-step analysis, is a slow and time-consuming process but the benefits from it are great. Not only are they better organized in the class, but also as persons," he said.

In noting that he believes teaching is one of the most important fields a person can enter, he says that teachers "touch so many people and affect and influence so many lives that you must deeply care for who and what you teach. Having some of our future leaders, doctors and teachers sitting in front of you each day makes you want to try harder to make sure these students are prepared for what lies ahead of them."

Jorgenson recognizes that the field of mathematics is one which has become the subject of national concern. His

Conservation Essay Contest Set At Grygla

All students in grades seven through 12 and living in the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district are eligible to enter the 1984 conservation essay contest. Topic for the 1984 conservation essay contest is "Save Our Farmland."

The contest is open to students in two grade divisions, the junior division for grades 7-9 and the senior division is for grades 10-12. Junior division entries should be 400 to 500 words in length and senior division entries 600 to 800 words in length. Each essay should have a cover page listing contestant's name, age, grade, school and the name of the local soil and water conservation district.

District essay contest entries must be completed and turned in to the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district office by April 15. Judging will be on the following basis: Composition — 30 per cent, includes spelling, grammar, sentence structure, organization and legibility; subject matter — 70 per cent, includes accuracy of information, originality and relevance to the announced topic. Judges decision will be final.

District winners will be eligible to go on to the area and state competition. District prizes are $10 for first, $5 for second and two honorable mention prizes of $2.50 in each age division. # School District 441 Gets High Marks In Survey

Parents in School District 441, which includes elementary schools at Viking and Newfolden and Marshall county central high school in Newfolden, gave their schools high marks in a survey completed recently, according to a compilation of results released by Supt. Gene Busch.

Polled were parents of children in grades 2-12 and of graduating students in 1982 and 1983. Of 239 survey forms sent, 162 were returned for a 67.7 per cent return rate. School District 441 has a population of about 2,300 people and [illegible] students attend the two elementary schools and high school.

The 50-question form was developed by the superintendent of schools and revised through review by principals and a field test group of 12 parents and teachers.

"The poll was conducted to determine parent perceptions of the different programs and services of the local schools," Supt. Busch said. "Due to the wide variety of topics in the poll, different types of answers were requested. Letter grades were used for some questions while "favor" or "oppose" answers were requested on others. Still other questions required rating on an "important" to "not important" scale.

"Results of the parent poll indicate a very high level of satisfaction with the school program and services," Supt. Busch said. "In addition, parents did determine that some areas may need improvement."

Nineteen of the questions were answered by giving letter grades. The district rated averages of A and B-plus on buildings and facilities, books and instructional materials, transportation system, special programs (such as special

Andrew J. Volstead, who was a Minnesota congressman early in this century and recognized as the father of the farm cooperative movement, will be officially inducted into the national agriculture hall of fame April 27, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Volstead was co-author and the prime mover of the federal Capper-Volstead act establishing the farm cooperatives that continue to be a supply, service, credit and marketing backbone of modern agriculture. The cooperative authorization has in more recent years been utilized by urban consumers to provide low cost food and financial services.

Induction into the national agricultural hall of fame is the second significant honor accorded to the late congressman Volstead's memory. In 1979, the Volstead home near Granite Falls was designated a national historic monument.

According to Edward Slettom of the Minnesota association of cooperatives, who is assisting in the search for relatives of the late congressman, surviving relatives may be either Volsteads, or the original family name from which the congressman departed, Varalstad.

Identification of any living relatives or associates of the late congressman Volstead may be directed to secretary Harland E. Priddle, Kansas state board of agriculture, 109 S.W. ninth street, Topeka, KS 66612-1280.

FARM ACTION COMMITTEE EXPLAINS SOME OF ITS GOALS and PURPOSES

Because of the controversial importance of farm issues that have been brought to the forefront in recent weeks and because this is National Agriculture Week, we the people involved as members of the Northwest Minnesota Emergency Action Committee feel our position must be stated and explained.

Our group was formed last summer after excessive rainfall once again washed our crops and hopes for our family farms away. At that time we felt that if something wasn't done a significant proportion of farmers would be forced out of business, which would have a disastrous affect on our Northwest business community as a whole.

We realize that at the present time farming is in as bad shape as it has ever been. It is tough to make it in any facet of agriculture.

Through input at meetings organized by the Action Committee and others, and through one-to-one meetings with farmers, a number of problems surfaced. The main one seemed to repeatedly point to the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA).

With the problem recognized, we tried to achieve a solution by working with our elected officials to get legislative action with the emphasis on a long-term, low-inerest legislative measure for everyone.

We emphasized this to our elected officials at every meeting from here to Washington because everyone, no matter what financial condition, had a disaster to some extent.

We felt then and now that immediate action was necessary. Because our legislative efforts never achieved the results we were hoping for, we felt compelled to try to achieve a solution through existing sources such as FmHA. That would, at least at the present, keep most people farming.

Through the efforts of many, we found that FmHA had programs designed to help problems such as farmers face here but was not implementing them.

We must point out that these lending policies that we worked to make available were already established FmHA procedure, but for some reason were not being implemented.

The culmination of our efforts was getting a Federal FmHA task force to investigate lending practices and personnel problems in our FmHA district. They verified that there was a problem with implementing some programs that would help individual farmers survive the financial crunch. The ensuing tractorcade publicized the issue on a national level and resulted in the large work force, headed by Maurice McLinn, that was sent in to straighten out the problem and process the backlog of loan applications.

Because we feel that there is a misunderstanding, we feel compelled to explain our objectives.

We feel that the community, as a whole, will benefit from our actions. We feel the strength of our community is in agriculture, specifically the family farm, and any financial help received by farmers will help our uptown business as well as our farmers.

Another point we must bring out is that FmHA does not freely hand out five per cent money. The loan procedure is closely followed and borrowers must conform to regulations. Also, five per cent is a variable rate that will go up when the financial condition of the farmer improves.

We must also stress that FmHA' procedures state that to receive assistance, the application must be for a family farm. These FmHA loans are not going to bail out everyone, as everybody's financial condition is different. These loans will only truly help those who use good farm management practices.

With our depressed farm economy and our consecutive disaster years, we as a community are losing the good managers as well as the bad. This has a negative impact on the whole economy.

We have seen that by unified community effort of farmers and businessmen, we have called attention to and solved a small portion of our problems.

We look to the future with positive optimism and with the hope that we can affect future government policy that will benefit all farmers and businessmen.

In summary, we would like to quote from a statement drawn up by the Regional Catholic Bishops of the Heartland in their publication, Strangers and Guests.

"Besides its implications for personal values, the small and moderate-sized family farm is the basis for a humane, responsible and effective national food production system. The alternative to this system is one dominated by large investor-owned corporations and massive farms."

Realizing that the printed word sometimes confuses, please feel fee to call and question anyone on our committee. Ultimately we want a better America.

Town Meeting On Education Tuesday

Community input on public education in the Thief River Falls community is being requested for a town meeting scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Franklin middle school cafeteria. All taxpayers of the district, whether parents of students or not, are urged to participate.

An advertisement in the Times asking for public input has created some response but additional reactions are needed, according to Larry McDowell, chairman of the local excellence in education committee. "We would like very much to have people come to that meeting to discuss the issues of education that prevail in this school district," he said.

Ruth Randall, commissioner of education for the state of Minnesota, has asked each school district to participate in a town meeting. The reason for this is the need for better communication between public schools and the participants and taxpayers of that district.

School District 564 has gone through a series of cuts and reductions in programs over the past two years. The school board and administration need input from the community as to the kinds of areas that the district should be addressing in replacement of those cuts and also in improvement of programs.

To that end, the School District 564 board of education has appointed the excellence in education committee — to review where the district is at the present time, and where it should be.

The committee is chaired by Larry McDowell and includes Merle Lindberg, Rev. Curtis Anderson, Pat Johnson, Whitey Olson, Lisa Arnold,

Council Grants Zoning To Build Condominiums

With Mayor Bob Carlson casting a tie-breaking vote, Thief River Falls city council defeated a motion to rezone the Julian Gunderson property back to R1, thereby allowing Gunderson to proceed with plans to build two 12-family condominiums between Breezy Drive and the Red Lake River.

That action now opens the door for legal action against the city from adjoining property owners, who threatened to sue if the council did not reverse a February 14 decision which rezoned the Gunderson lots from R1 (low density residential) to R3, which allows apartment buildings and condominiums. That February 14 decision was made by a 7-0 vote of the council, with Alderman Don Goodrich abstaining.

Although the adjoining property owners had vocally opposed the rezoning request at two previous planning commission hearings, where it was unanimously defeated, they were not present when the council approved it, and claimed that the notification process had gotten "fouled up," after council had removed the topic from the agenda the first time it was scheduled. They also cited an inability to believe that council would vote to reverse a unanimous decision by the planning commission.

Last night's meeting was an adjourned session from the previous Tuesday, which was closed to the public so that council could consult with their attorney regarding the threatened litigation. In reintroducing the topic, last night, Mayor Carlson stated that he saw no need for further discussion from the sides involved in the controversy, but noted that since Gunderson had been asked if he could provide "additional assurances" that the project would remain as proposed, he would be allowed to present them.

Although council is forbidden by law to place discriminatory restrictions on housing, they had expressed concern that there was no guarantee that the project would remain "senior citizen housing" once it was built.

As an assurance, Ruth Jenny, attorney for Julian Gunderson, presented the

MCC Teacher Of Year Is Step-By-Step Advocate

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

When Mark Jorgenson was attending high school in his home town of Rothsay, his physics teacher was Leon Elseth from Newfolden. Now Jorgenson is not only a mathematics teacher at Elseth's home school but the 1984 Marshall county central teacher of the year.

"I had several good high school instructors in the math field," Jorgenson said about his motivation to enter the field of mathematics education. "I think they helped develop my interest in mathematics. Steve Zimmerman and Ron Wilner, along with Leon Elseth, provided me with a good foundation. And Leon helped me toward joining the MCC faculty when I graduated from Moorhead state university in 1977."

Jorgenson presently teaches seventh and eighth grade mathematics, first year algebra for ninth graders, computer science, and second year algebra or geometry on alternating years. He says he is pleased with the math students he has had in his classes at Newfolden over the years. Joe Riesen of Viking is completing a BA degree in mathematics at Moorhead state this year and expects to transfer out of state to pursue a doctorate in the field. Dave Kragness, an MCC graduate two years ago, is also working toward a math major in college.

It is not difficult for Jorgenson to adapt to the instructional program of a school district like Marshall county central which has a complement of about 14 full-time teachers. His home town of Rothsay is also small and the school he attended there did not have a large enrollment. He realizes the variety of interests and abilities in students of any community and tries to meet the challenge of guiding them through a complex field in an orderly manner.

"I stress daily the importance of step-by-step solution to all equations," he says in the statement of philosophy which was prepared for the teacher of the year competition. "At first the students may have difficulty understanding the full reason why they must do 'all that work', but in short order they start to see that this method does help them to understand the basics and thus the more complex problems are easier to solve.

"This method of solving problems, through step-by-step analysis, is a slow and time-consuming process but the benefits from it are great. Not only are they better organized in the class, but also as persons," he said.

In noting that he believes teaching is one of the most important fields a person can enter, he states that teachers "touch so many people and affect and influence so many lives that you must deeply care for who and what you teach. Having some of our future leaders, doctors and teachers sitting in front of you each day makes you want to try harder to make sure these students are prepared for what lies ahead of them."

Jorgenson recognizes that the field of mathematics is one which has become the subject of national concern. His

School Facilities Report Received

Official ratification of the 1983-84 and 1984-85 contract between School District 564 and its teachers' association has been set for a special meeting Monday at 7 a.m. in the school district service center board room. The action came at a regular meeting of the board Monday evening.

The tentative contract agreement was discussed and the board voted 4-3 to distribute salaries on an across-the-board percentage basis. Also scheduled for the special session Monday morning is continuation of the unrequested leave and termination process.

A good deal of board attention was directed to recommendations made by the facilities advisory committee regarding Lincoln high school and other district-wide facilities and program questions. The committee has recommended continuing use of the present Lincoln location and bonding for $5.5 to $6 million for an addition and remodeling.

The recommendation also included leaving the Northwest vocational center school where it is in the school district service center building, and retaining the class organization of kindergarten through fifth grade in the elementary schools, sixth through eighth grades in Franklin middle school and ninth through 12th grade at Lincoln. Idea of an overpass on Main avenue between Lincoln and the center school was rejected as being too expensive.

Board members accepted the recommendation of retaining the Lincoln site, favored retention of the class organization as it exists, expressed the opinion that a $5.5 to $6 million bond issue was reasonable and agreed that a pedestrian overpass was too costly to consider.

But they expressed concern at keeping the center school where it is and suggested that the committee further study the costs of bringing the center school into the Lincoln complex. A board subcommittee consisting of Archie Cameron, Hank Hallstrom and Arnt Aune was established to further consider the possibility of acquiring property around Lincoln high school.

School District 441 Gets High Marks In Survey

Parents in School District 441, which includes elementary schools at Viking and Newfolden and Marshall county central high school in Newfolden, gave their schools high marks in a survey completed recently, according to a compilation of results released by Supt. Gene Busch.

Polled were parents of children in grades 2-12 and of graduating students in 1982 and 1983. Of 239 survey forms sent, 162 were returned for a 67.7 per cent return rate. School District 441 has a population of about 2,300 people and 480 students attend the two elementary schools and high school.

The 50-question form was developed by the superintendent of schools and revised through review by principals and a field test group of 12 parents and teachers.

"The poll was conducted to determine parent perceptions of the different programs and services of the local schools," Supt. Busch said. "Due to the wide variety of topics in the poll, different types of answers were requested. Letter grades were used for some questions while "favor" or "oppose" answers were requested on others. Still other questions required rating on an "important" to "not important" scale.

"Results of the parent poll indicate a very high level of satisfaction with the school program and services," Supt. Busch said. "In addition, parents did determine that some areas may need improvement."

Nineteen of the questions were answered by giving letter grades. The district rated averages of A and B-plus on buildings and facilities, books, and instructional materials, transportation system, special programs (such as special

Jody Vacura-Roger Solem Marriage Vows Spoken

Marriage vows were exchanged recently at Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls by Jody Vacura, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Vacura of this city, and Roger Alan Solem, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger L. Solem, rural Thief River Falls.

Rev. Don Knutson officiated at the double ring ceremony. Joyce Halbasch was the organist, playing "Processional March," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. Vocalists were Mr. and Mrs. Jan Nordin, friends of the couple. They sang, "I Pledge My Love," "You and I," and "Up Where We Belong."

Forming the chancel setting were freestanding floral arrangements of rust mums, and yellow and peach carnations, surrounded by candelabra. Multi-rust colored bows marked the pews.

The bride was attired in a gown of white Point d'esprit lace over taffeta, featuring a fitted bodice fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline appliqued with Venise lace. The bishop sleeves of Point d'esprit lace and chiffon were appliqued with Venice lace and gathered into lace cuffs. Her bouffant skirt, featuring five tiers edged with Wedgewood lace, flowed into a semi-cathedral train. To compliment her gown, she wore a bridal picture hat with bridal illusion veiling caught in a pouf in the back. The hat was appliqued with lace and trimmed on one side with white organza roses. She carried a cascade of miniature yellow and white roses, accented by large yellow roses, peach and white carnations, babies' breath and greenery.

The bride's personal attendants were her aunts: Ann Haugen and Mary Brandt.

Maid of honor was Carla Swanson, a friend. Other attendants were Cindi Solem, sister of the groom, and Patty Stoltman, a friend of the bride. Their sleeveless gowns of yellow taffeta with a chiffon overlay, featured double ruffles on the bodice and a chiffon drape down the front. They carried bouquets of rust mums, yellow and peach carnations, babies' breath and greenery.

Miniature bride was Jana Vacura, sister of the bride. She wore a long white satin gown and carried a bouquet, similar to the bride's. Minature groom was Craig Solem, Spring Lake Park, a cousin of the groom. Like the groom he wore a white tuxedo and a yellow rose boutonniere accented with peach and white carnations.

Al Anderson, a friend of the couple, was best man. Groomsmen were Kent Ellingson and Gregg Ornquist, friends of the couple. They wore black tuxedos with white ruffled shirts tipped in yellow, and yellow carnation boutonnieres.

Ushers were Davy Burkel, Jon Ness, Gary Roisland and Dean Koropatnicki. Serving as acolytes were John Burkel, Bret Haugen and Dale Koropatnicki. With the exception of Roisland, all are cousins of the couple.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Vacura wore a rust-colored floor-length gown with a lace insert on the bodice matching the stand-up collar. Mrs. Solem wore a purple street-length dress with long, sheer sleeves, cowl collar and gray belt and shoes. Their identical corsages were yellow, white and peach carnations.

Honor guests were Mrs. Hilda Swenson, Mrs. Mary Koropatnicki, great-grandmothers of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Burkel, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vacura grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Solem and Mrs. Celia Koropatnicki, grandparents of the groom.

A reception in the church parlors followed for approximately 300 guests. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Larry Ness and Mr. and Mrs. Don Dyrdal, friends of the couple. Angie Burkel, a cousin of the bride, was at the guest book, as Tina Burkel and Kim Swanson, cousins of the couple, ladled the punch. At the gift table were Nicole Ness and Kelly Koropatnicki, also cousins of the couple. Jan Burkel and Geri Vacura, aunts of the bride, pinned the corsages.

The three-tiered wedding cake, baked by Margaret Rupprecht, was iced in white and decorated in the bride's chosen colors of yellow, rust and peach. Between the tall Roman pillars which supported the upper tiers was a lighted flowing water fountain. Stairways with miniature replicas of the bridal party extended to heart-shaped cakes inscribed with the names of the bride and groom. A bell ornament topped the cake.

Cutting and serving the cake were Dinah Burkel, aunt of the bride, and Lauretta Blomker, friend of the couple. Coffee was poured by Pearl Vacura, aunt of the bride, and Kathy Nelson, aunt of the groom.

Waitresses were Cindy Moser, Lisa Walseth, Dawn Joppru, Heidi Tangquist, Kristy Drydal and Koni Koropatnicki. The women of Redeemer church were in charge of serving.

He is also a graduate of the local AVTI and is currently enrolled in additional classes there. He is employed by Drydal Farms, rural Thief River Falls. Photo, Richard Kennedy.

Nancy Nelson-Ryan Turner Vows Exchanged At Zion

Miss Nancy Kay Nelson and Ryan Jon Turner were united in marriage recently at a double ring ceremony at Zion Lutheran church, Thief River Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray M. Nelson, route I. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turner, Waterloo, Iowa, and Kay Turner, Mason, Mich.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the seven o'clock ceremony. At the organ, playing the traditional wedding march was Phyllis Dalager, a friend of the bride's family. For tte prelude, she played the couple's favorite hymns as the guests were ushered in by Bob Nelson, Minneapolis, uncle of the bride, and Gary Peterson, Zimmerman, a friend of the couple. Mike Lehrer, a friend of the bride's family, was the soloist. Prior to the ceremony, and as the candles were lit by Julie Nelson, Minneapolis, a cousin of the bride, and Kristy Peterson, a friend of the bride, Lehrer sang "Gentle Shepherd." He also sang "God, a Woman and a Man," after the sermonette, and "And On This Day," as the couple lit the unity candle. During the ceremony, Mrs. Ruth Christensen, also a friend of the bride's family, joined Lehrer in singing "Endless Love," and "Gift of Love."

The wedding programs were distributed by Ross Nelson, Minneapolis, a cousin of the bride, and Kendra Johnson, a friend. Kim Peterson a friend of the bride, was at the guest book.

Forming the chancel setting were two 14-branch spiral candelabra graced with greenery and pink bows. On either side of the altar were large floral baskets, also in pink and white with pink bows. Lighted hurricane lamps accented with pink bows marked the pews. On the altar was a special floral arrangement in memory of the bride's godparents, Bob and Violet Jenkins, who were also her uncle and aunt, and Randall Erickson.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a Victorian gown of white polyester sheer over taffeta. The empire bodice was highlighted by stand-up Victorian lace collar, trimmed with ribbon, and an illusion yoke edged with a deep lace ruffle. The full bishop sleeves, appliqued with lace, were gathered into deep lace cuffs, also trimmed with ribbon. Her skirt was complemented by front lace panels, a deep lace underflounce, and a lace full-tiered chapel train. A Venice lace headpiece with miniature pearls centering the rose appliques, held a chapel veil of bridal illusion, edged with wide lace to match her gown. The veil was made by the bride's mother. To complete her attire, the bride wore pearl earrings and carried out the old, new, borrowed and blue tradition, which included the blue garter worn by her mother on her wedding, and a lace edged handkerchief which belonged to her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Russell (Signe) Nelson. She carried a lace backed colonial bouquet of pink roses and miniature carnations with white button ponpons and babies' breath with asparagus fern and white ribbon streamers.

Mary Jo Langlie attended her sister as matron of honor. Wendy Rae Nelson, Minneapolis, also a sister of the bride, was bridesmatron. Their identical Victorian gowns of a burgundy sheer, were styled like the bride's with full bishop sleeves, lace stand-up collars and illusion yokes, edged with wide lace. Cascading ruffled in bustle effect, added back interest. They carried colonial bouquets of small pink roses and miniature carnations, accented with white pompons, ferns and babies' breath. In their hair, they wore combs with a corresponding floral cluster.

Flower girl was Kathy Haskins, Minneapolis, a cousin of the bride. Her gown, bouquet and floral headpiece were miniature replicas of the bridesmaids. The rings were carried on a lace covered, heart-shaped pillow by Cory Jenkins, a cousin of the bride.

Mark Conklin, Waterloo, Iowa, a friend of the couple, was best man. Groomsman was Jeff Langlie, brother-in-law of the bride. They, together with the ushers and the fathers of the couple, wore gray tuxedos, white shirts with burgundy edged ruffles, gray ties and pink carnation boutonnieres with touches of babies' breath. The groom wore similar attire in all-white. His boutonniere featured three pink roses accented with babies' breath and greenery.

The mother of the bride was attired in a street-length dress of dusty rose sheer styled with long lace sleeves and a matching satin ribbon belt. Tiny pearls edged the neckline. Muted burgundy shoes and purse completed her attire.

The groom's step-mother wore a long-sleeved royal blue street length dress with softly flared skirt. Their identical corsages were of miniature carnations in shades of pink, white pompons, babies' breath and greenery.

Honored guests were Mrs. Marie Erickson, godmother of the bride; Mrs. Ella Nelson, paternal grandmother of the bride, and Russell Nelson, Newfolden, maternal grandfather of the bride. Sadly missed was the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Russell (Signe) Nelson, who died early that morning.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception for 225 guests. Caterers were Mrs. Lillian Rux and Mrs. Ida Brouse, friends of the family. Hosts and hostesses were Bob and Diane Nelson, Minneapolis, and Donald and Austa White, Plainfield, Iowa, uncles and aunts of the bride and groom, respectfully.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered strawberry and white cake, iced in white and decorated with pink and burgundy roses. Between the tall Grecian pillars separating the bottom tiers was a light fountain with pink flowing water. Heart-shaped caked inscribed with the names of the bride and groom, were at the base. Topping the cake was a wedding bell ornament. The cake, baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht, a friend of the family, was cut and served by Mrs. Barbara Nelson, Minneapolis, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Marie Erickson. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Dolores Knauf, Minneapolis, and Mrs. Mary Sabo, aunt and great-aunt of the bride, respectifully.

Gerry and Thelma Peterson, friends of the bride's family, ladled the punch. The bride's cousins Robyn, Kristen and Kara Jenkins carried wicker baskets and distributed pink and burgundy satin roses filled with rice. Waitresses were Shelly Sabo, a cousin of the bride, Karen Holmstrom, Crookston, and Nancy and Pam Pederson, Newfolden, friends of the bride.

Flower hostesses were Mrs. Karolyn Nelson, Minneapolis, aunt of the bride, and Anita Kasprowicz, Red Lake Falls, friend of the couple. Gift bearers were Brenda Pederson, Newfolden, and Lynn Kasprowicz, Red Lake Falls, friends of the couple.

The following day, the bride's parents hosted a dinner for 50 relatives and friends prior to the opening and viewing of the gifts.

Enroute to Waterloo, Iowa, where the bride and groom are making their home, the couple spent several days near McGregor, at the Bob Melson lake home.

The bride is a 1980 graduate of Lincoln high school. # Farm Accident Training To Be Given On Fri.

Agri-business committee of the Chamber of Commerce is inviting all farm families to participate in a "First Care" program on Friday, March 23 at Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls.

Morning session runs from 9 a.m. to noon, and an afternoon session is from 1:30-4:30 p.m. Farm families may attend either. Noon lunch will be served to all participants. Only cost is $3 for a first aid manual.

"First Care" program is designed to prepare families to respond to possible farm accidents.

Program was developed by Dr. Allen Van Beek, a plastic and reconstructive surgery specialist and assistant professor in plastic surgery at the University of Minnesota. He grew up on a farm in South Dakota and was a farm accident victim when young.

When a farm accident occurs, often a family member is the first person to respond. Therefore, it is that person who will initiate the call for help and render assistance to the victim. Since it may take up to an hour in some rural areas for professional care to arrive, it is critical that the person who first responds doesn't panic.

Participants in the course learn how to get an accident victim into the medical system, ABC's of emergency care, methods of controlling bleeding, splinting fractures and how to transport patients. They are also familiarized with an emergency care kit available to participants in the program.

Instructors for the "First Care" program are trained at regional meetings conducted by Dr. Van Beek. Program is sponsored by the Farm Bureau.

All reservations must be made in advance by calling the Chamber of Commerce office, 681-3720.

PIONEER TALES

from the Pennington County Historical Society

by Inga Geving

This morning looks more like the beginning of Christmas instead of Easter. So I will put on an extra sweater, sit near the window to watch the birds on the feeder, and daydream of the Christmas holidays.

I wish the Christmas season would not slip by so fast. I enjoy seeing the tree lights, the beautiful wrapped gifts, and the church and school programs with the singing of Carols. But most of all I like the warm hand shakes and the kindness and love shown during the Christmas season.

I kept my Christmas tree and decorations up until February this year. When friends came to my house, they were surprised to see this. I told them, "I wish I could leave them up 12 months, to remind me of the kindness and sharing I should do all year."

I am sure the pioneers were busy, too, making toys and doll clothes, knitting some mittens for the neighbor, preparing an extra large roast for the pastor or a sack of hay for his horse as he visited the neighborhood. Yet they took time to sit quietly and know what Christmas was all about. They found time to have neighborhood gatherings at the school and programs at the churches, the youngsters dressed in their Sunday best to give their recitations and sing carols. Even the simple games of hide and seek and blind man's bluff were so much fun.

I have always liked the story about the shepherds in the Christmas story. When I was a child, the children had to herd the cattle to different pastures for better grazing. In our case it was the south eighty. We would be out on the prairie all day. Our dog, Shep, would go with us. He would lay quietly and keep an eye on the cattle. If the cattle thought they could go to the neighbor's field, Shep was right there to chase them back to their own meadow. Even the cattle learned to have respect for the neighbor's field. Sometimes we imagined we were shepherds on the hillside and we wondered what they talked about. Maybe they were having their midnight lunch when the star appeared to them in the East.

We had to take our Confirmation books with us to study. They were the Catechism, Bible History, and Explanation Book. But sometimes we would day dream — listen to the birds, watch the rabbits scampering about, or just watch the clouds. When we returned home, our parents would always listen to our recitations. Sometimes we received a little extra lecture if they thought we should have studied more.

I remember some years ago, a special Christmas tree. Marie Cernousek (bless her memory) and I organized a junior garden club called the "Pixie Planters." It was a group of about 25 boys and girls between the ages of eight and 12. We formed this group to show them how much work and care goes into a beautiful garden and yard. This taught them respect for other people's property.

Anyway, one year we saved tin cans and cut the tops and bottoms out, put holes in the sides with a nail, and strung them on a string. At Christmas time we bought a 12-foot tree and the boys and girls trimmed the tree with the tin cans. We received permission to put the tree in front of the court house. Bob Kloubec, a former member of the "Sow and Hoe" garden club, helped us set it up.

When the street lights were turned on, the tree glistened and sparkled with the tin can trimming. The boys and girls were very proud of their project. As the children became teenagers, other interests began to take up their time, so the club was disbanded. I wonder if anyone remembers the "Pixie Planters"? I would like to hear from them.

I learned a long time ago that making elaborate "resolutions" for the New Year is not good. Too soon, they are put on the shelf and forgotten. So now I make a list of "considerations" — things that I hope to get around to doing. One of my collections is cookbooks. But have you noticed that you can never find the cookbook with the recipe you want. Or you can't find the correct lid for a container, although you have two dozen to pick from. Then there are the newspapers you cannot throw away because you know someone wants an article you have.

If I find time for these "considerations" — rearranging cookbooks, lids and papers — then I hope to bake cookies, make jelly, plant flowers, or just give someone a ride to go shopping. So many "considerations" to do. Have you noticed that just about the time you think you can make both ends meet, somebody moves the ends.

WIC Month Is Proclaimed By Governor

Governor Rudy Perpich has issued a proclamation recognizing the achievements of the special supplemental food program for women, infants and children in Minnesota, and setting aside March as "WIC Appreciation Month" in the state.

In his proclamation, Gov. Perpich cited the program for its role in drawing low income women into the health care system, reducing infant mortality, lowering the incidence of high risk births and "improving the health and nutritional status" of hundreds of thousands of women and children in Minnesota over the past 10 years.

WIC is a federally funded program, administered through the Minnesota department of health. Actual WIC services are provided by 54 local health agencies throughout the state.

WIC uses a voucher system to provide prescribed types of foods to persons who have been identified as "nutritionally at risk." Participants can include pregnant women, women who have recently given birth, nursing mothers, infants and children up to five years of age. The program also provides nutrition education and other health services to participants.

'83 Agriculture Yearbook Now Available

The 1983 "Yearbook of Agriculture" has been released under the title, "Using Our Natural Resources." Secretary of agriculture John Block has stated that using our nation's resources wisely is everyone's responsibility.

The book describes changes that have taken place in the stewardship of the country's vast resources, what the situation is today and what the future holds. Limited supplies of the book are available by writing Congress-Arlan Stangeland in Washington, DC.

Safety Tips For Cyclists Are Offered

You are driving your car on the highway just out of town. The weather is fair, the temperature mild. Up ahead you see what appears to be a bicycle rider. No, it's more than one. Your vehicle by this time has gained on the cyclists and you realize there are three of them, all peddling abreast in your lane.

The on-coming traffic, which you had only taken passing notice of now becomes critical. Do you pass these slower moving bicycles or stay behind them? The thought then occurs to you — do they have the right-of-way or do you? What is the law? More importantly, what is the safest action for you to take?

These and other safety questions and matters, such as pedestrian safety, what is defensive driving, does driving a car mean you can never take a drink, are effectively addressed as part of the Minnesota state patrol's safety education program. The heart of the program is the 11 safety education officers available to speak to school, civic and community groups.

One of the most popular programs, given in conjunction with the emphasis on bike safety, is "Mike the Talking Bike," just in time for discussion and learning as the weather improves and more of the population takes to cycling. To schedule a program, call safety education officer Clifton Mattson, (681-3741) at the state patrol office in Thief River Falls.

Under Minnesota law cyclists have the same rights and responsibilities as operators of other vehicles. Cyclists are never to ride more than two abreast. And, it is alright for you to pass them with your automobile after making certain you can do so safely.

Art Festival To Be Held In Grand Forks

A wide variety of free entertainment, unusual craft demonstrations and two talks make up the first "Winterthing" arts festival, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at the Grand Forks civic auditorium. The event is sponsored by the Grand Forks park district in cooperation with community arts groups and is an outgrowth of the "Summerthing" arts festivals.

Activities will last from 1 to 8 p.m. each day, and are scheduled in blocks of a half-hour or hour. All are free and open to the public.

Music is a major portion of the program. Bluegrass, gospel, ethnic and folk, Dixieland, jazz, pop and classic swing are all on the agenda. Saturday's festivities conclude with an hour of music by the Grand Forks Elks band. Sunday evening the sounds of Dick King and the classic swing band top off the event.

Saturday's schedule also includes a silent movie melodrama with live piano accompaniment, a square dance demonstration, and a half-hour humanities discussion.

Sunday includes a performance by the G.G.F. community theatre from its upcoming series of one-acts, and a presentation on North Dakota's first trade commodity-knife river flint.

While each event is going on there will be simultaneous demonstrations at several booths, plus the annual all-media exhibit of the community art association. Art to be demonstrated will include scrimshaw, violin building and repair, metal working, spinning, and much more.

4-H Animal Projects Help Develop Skills

Learning to care for animals is an excellent way for young people to learn responsibility while they learn about the importance of animals. One out of every six 4-H'ers is enrolled in one or more 4-H animal science projects in their community, according to Zurcher. 4-H youth development specialist with the university of Minnesota's agricultural extension service. Animal science projects help develop leadership and a sense of achievement for 4-H'ers.

4-H animal science programs give young people a chance to explore their individual interests. Many are involved to simply learn more about pet care and training. Others will go on to explore careers in the animal sciences, learn to make money by breeding, raising or training animals, or successfully market animals and animal products.

Communities need participants as well as volunteer project leaders. "We are very proud of the adult volunteer project leaders who provide the opportunity for 4-H'ers to develop both project and life skills," stated Zurcher. Project leaders have gained much support from local resource people involved in the American veterinary medical association and various breed associations and can provide credible leadership in giving 4-H members an outstanding educational experience.

Subject areas in 4-H animal science programs include agriculture, beef, swine, sheep, commodity marketing, dairy, dog care and training and horse and veterinary science. Each community may vary somewhat in the programs they offer, so consult the Pennington county extension office for more details.

REGISTRATION for the farmer-merchant mixer on Monday evening at the Legion Club was conducted with two tables, one for the farmers and one for the merchants. Attendance was just about equal, with 304 farmers and 301 merchants registering. Merchants picked up the tab as a gesture of appreciation to the farmers for their business throughout the year. Jim Lambert and Clem Gigstad (left) prepared to issue complimentary meal and drink tickets as George Pittman and Doug Cullen signed in at the farmers table.

Add Sanctity Of Contract To Export Act

Guarantee of delivery on export contracts for agricultural commodities has been secured due to legislation offered by Senator Rudy Boschwitz. This sanctity of contracts measure became part of the export administration act passed by the Senate late last week.

The Boschwitz amendment came as a relief to many people in the agricultural community. There was a fear that opponents of contract sanctity in Congress would try to abandon its commitment to securing export contracts when the export administration act came up for consideration.

"I felt it completely necessary to make the contract sanctity law secure once again. Farmers and grain trading companies had raised questions to me as to whether certain parts of the export administration act might lead the courts to decide that the Congress had intended to supercede the contract sanctity measures of the futures trading act of 1982. Clearly we did not want that to occur," Boschwitz said.

The contract sanctity provision was already contained in the futures trading act of 1982. The Boschwitz amendment clarifies and reaffirms that commitment.

"Contract sanctity for agricultural exports is one of the most important issues facing U.S. agriculture. This country's history of imposing agricultural embargoes makes it imperative that we defend the integrity of our export contracts in order to enhance our image as a reliable supplier," Boschwitz said.

"Clearly, farmers and other agriculturally-oriented workers would have lost a lot if trade were disrupted. Two out of five crop acres in this country goes for export. With contract sanctity secure, we can once again offer delivery assurances of American products."

Minnesota Milk Production In February Down

February milk production totaled 873 million pounds in Minnesota, down one per cent from the 882 million pounds for February of 1983. Production per cow averaged 975 pounds, down 15 pounds from a year earlier. Total milk cows averaged 895,000 head, up 4,000 from a year ago.

Milk production in the United States during February of 1984 totaled 10.9 billion pounds, two per cent more than February 1983 and five per cent above February of 1982. (February 1984 contained 29 days compared with 28 days a year earlier). The extra day increases rate per cow and total milk production about 3.5 per cent.

February production per cow averaged 995 pounds, 26 pounds above a year earlier and 52 pounds above February of 1982. Total milk cows averaged 11 million head, one per cent less than a year earlier.

Report Shows Increase In DWI Arrests

Further evidence that Minnesota is enforcing the law against drunk drivers comes from the state patrol's 1983 arrest report which shows that driving while intoxicated arrests increased 10.6 per cent to 7,925 from 7,166 in 1982.

"Undoubtedly, the record shows again that the state patrol is leading the way in enforcing the tougher DWI laws in Minnesota," Col. Roger Ledding, patrol chief, stated. "The statistics also indicate that we are just as busy on the highways helping motorists and providing a needed public service in times of emergencies such as the recent blizzards and snow storms."

The patrol made 183,396 arrests in 1983 including 112,724 for speeding.

Troopers logged 593,391 patrol hours and traveled more than 13 million miles. A total of 293,840 warning citations were issued, up 17 per cent from 1982 (251,047).

"We're again pleased to have played a significant part in helping reduce the 1983 traffic death toll to 556 compared to 581 in 1982," Ledding concluded.

Workshop On Veterans Law Changes Slated

Congressman Arlan Stangeland will sponsor two workshops to help veterans and their dependents understand major changes made in federal and state programs that affect veterans.

First meeting will be held in Moorhead at American Legion Post 21 (700 First Avenue North) from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 31. The second workshop will be held in St. Cloud.

"There have been many changes in veterans' programs and benefits," Congressman Stangeland said. "These workshops will bring veterans and dependents up to date on those benefits which they have earned."

The four-term House veteran also noted that these workshops present a good opportunity for solving individual problems with state and federal agencies.

"If you need a hand in cutting red tape for veterans programs, please attend one of these workshops," Congressman Stangeland said. "Bring as many records as possible and we will do whatever is possible."

The Congressman noted that federal changes include improvements in medical service for older and female veterans, jobs programs for Korea and Vietnam veterans, increases in disability compensations and pensions, studies on Agent Orange, and commitments to expanding health care facilities for Minnesota veterans.

Service officers from federal and state agencies will attend each workshop to give personal assistance in solving veterans' problems.

"If you want more information or cannot attend the workshops, please call toll-free number (1-800-432-3770) to get assistance," Congressman Stangeland said.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Letters in the Times from Stanley Hruby and Dennis McCullough have pretty well covered my thinking about farming — the — disaster programs, but beyond what has been said, what about the flagrant use of Chapters 11 and 7 of an ill-conceived bankruptcy law? Are these people entitled to cheap interest loans to start over?

A big wheeler North Dakota farmer filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy with an $11 million loss. His problem was not that his land was too wet, but greed, poor management and poor judgment. It is true that some area farmers who cry wolf the loudest were in financial trouble before the wet years. Protesters, like those recently in North Dakota, seem to want to protest in style, blockading with expensive 4-wheel drive tractors that realistic farmers realize they can't afford to buy.

I blame the FmHA, Production Credit and Federal Land Bank for getting most of the farmers in financial trouble by making big loans for overpriced land new and big machinery. They should be responsible now for helping the farmers that have had bad, wet years.

If loans are made beyond these to land speculators, legislators and poor managers at five per cent, what about the business people like farm suppliers, implement dealers and main street business that bankruptcies are helping put out of business? They too should be considered for long term loans at five per cent.

Our legislators need to spend their time in St. Paul instead of traveling all over the country trying to be something for everybody. High taxes, as we all know, are driving business out of Minnesota. Unless something is done about real estate taxes very soon, taxes will not be paid and land will revert to the counties and lenders as it did in the 1930's. Could be a great day for DNR expansion and more wolves. If you want to see what is already happening, look at the delinquent tax list in last week's issue of the Times.

In conclusion, my advice to the Bonanza big wheels that want to farm the world is that they should get their financing from the world bank.

Yours Truly,
Delmar Hagen

To The Editor:

I would like a little space to comment on a letter from Twyla Fore, Oklee, MN, objecting to the school prayer amendment.

First, we do not have voluntary prayer in public schools for groups, only for individuals who, of course, can pray silently anywhere he or she pleases. A group cannot have a vacant room in a school — homosexuals and like groups can — but a group of young people wanting to pray together cannot.

The new amendment specifically states that no state nor the Federal government can compose a prayer — it will only allow groups of individuals to meet together, which surely should not offend anyone else (except perhaps militant atheists).

As far as President Reagan's attending church so little, remember he was almost killed once, and no killer would mind using a church to try again. I am sure he and Nancy (his wife) worship together regularly.

Last, please read the letter from Rodney Smith, a professor of law at the University of North Dakota, on the editorial page of the March 21 issue of the Grand Forks Herald. He mentions that Madison (President), the chief sponsor of the First Amendment, did not believe in strict separation of church and state, and in fact believed all religions (as long as no one was preferred) should have equal access to public expression. Read the whole letter, please.

Thank you to the Times editor for the chance to express by views.

C.M. Isaacson

Space Telescope Offers Advances In Astronomy

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

Sometime in the summer of 1986, if all goes well, a space shuttle will make a long-awaited departure from the Kennedy space center in Florida, and the entire astronomical community will hold its collective breath. For riding in the shuttle's payload bay will be a very precious cargo indeed — the space telescope.

Even now, well before the telescope catches its first faint glimmer of light, the $1.1 billion orbiting astronomical observatory is being touted as "one of the most momentous advances" in astronomy since the Italian scientist Galileo first turned his telescope to the heavens in 1610.

The claim seems to be justified. From an orbit more than 300 miles high, well above the earth's turbulent, obscuring atmosphere, the telescope is expected to look seven times more deeply into space, detect celestial objects more than 50 times fainter and view them with at least 10 times better clarity than any ground-based telescope.

It is these design features that have officials at the national aeronautics and space administration (NASA), which has overall responsibility for the space telescope program, glowing with pride.

"The space telescope will be the most important optical astronomical telescope ever built by humankind," Dr. Edward J. Weiler, chief of NASA's astronomy and relativity branch, states. The telescope, he says, is expected to expand the volume of the universe clearly visible to astronomers by 350 times, in the process revealing better information about our own solar system and answering fundamental questions about the origin and nature of the universe.

Just for starters, the space telescope and its five instruments operating in the ultraviolet and optical range of the spectrum are expected to:

— Provide images of the planets as clear as those of Jupiter taken by the spacecraft Voyager. "The space telescope," Weller says, "should give us the first detailed images of Pluto and its newly detected moon," as well as new data on the characteristics of other planets. In addition, the telescope will study nearby stars and perturbations in their movements that might provide evidence of planetary systems similar to our own.

— Shed light on stellar birth and evolution. "We've only looked at the brightest stars so far," says Dr. Andrea K. Dupree, associate director for solar and stellar physics at the Harvard-Smithsonian center for astrophysics in Cambridge, MS. "That's not a very good sample if you're trying to construct a theory that applies to all stars. The space telescope will look at many, many stars of different ages."

— Reveal new understanding of the formation, dynamics and evolution of galaxies, the largest form of matter in the universe. Like the studies of stars, "Our studies of galaxies so far have been limited," Weller says. "It's like trying to explain the development of humans after only looking at people between the ages of 55 and 60. We've been looking at galaxies as they appeared 1 billion years ago. The space telescope will look at galaxies as they appeared 5 to 10 billion years ago."

— Make a fundamental contribution to the accurate determination of the "ladder of distance scales" of the universe, which in turn will answer questions related to the size and age of the universe. Estimates of this scale now vary by a factor of two.

The space telescope also will tackle one of the most perplexing and important topics in cosmology: the ultimate fate of the universe. Will the universe continue to expand forever (an "open" universe) or will enough "missing matter" — as yet undetected in space — be found so that gravity forces the universe to collapse back into its original primordial fireball state (a "closed" universe)? "The Space Telescope will probably answer that question during its first three or four years of operation," Weller believes.

FIRST DAY OF SPRING was celebrated with a picnic on Tuesday, by Cheryl Hinschberger's third grade class at Washington elementary school. Although there was still snow on the ground outside, the 26 kids put on their shorts, spread beach towels out on the floor of their classroom and proceeded to polish off some hotdogs, chips and Kool-Aid. Just to make sure that the picnic atmosphere was complete, paper bugs were suspended from the ceiling.

Time will tell whether the space telescope lives up to — or possibly exceeds — these and other expectations. Meanwhile, as the countdown to launch continues, James B. Odom of the Marshall space flight center in Huntsville, AL is overseeing the more earthly concerns of the space telescope — getting all the pieces together and ensuring that they work. "There has never been a space science project as complicated as the space telescope," Odom reports. It is the first telescope designed to be deployed by the space shuttle and repaired in orbit by shuttle astronauts, and "exceptional rigor has gone into every step."

Two critical milestones were passed in 1983. First, the telescope's 94.5-inch, 1,827-pound primary mirror, which took the Perkin-Elmer corporation four-and-one-half years to create, was installed in its main ring, which attached the telescope to the rest of the satellite. Tests of the assembly verified that the mirror's precise optical accuracy will be maintained in the zero-gravity conditions of space.

A second milestone involved demonstrating the ability of the fine guidance sensors — the heart of the telescope — to ensure accurate pointing and control. In astronomical parlance, the sensors are designed to point to a celestial target with an accuracy of 0.01 arc second and hold onto the target for extended periods, accurately to within 0.007 arc second. In plain English, this is the equivalent of a telescope in Washington, D.C., locking onto a dime-sized object in Boston.

"1984 is the year of hardware delivery," Odom says, with all five telescope instruments, satellite structures and computer systems due for completion. In 1985, engineers will be integrating and testing the components.

Astronomers at the space telescope science institute in Baltimore, MD, has been working equally hard to get ready. Formed in 1981, the institute is responsible for all the scientific use and science operations of the space telescope — selecting astronomers to use the telescope; developing observing schedules; processing, archiving and publicizing scientific data; providing technical support to observers before, during and after their observations, and carrying out research related to the telescope.

Dr. Neta A. Bahcall, chief of the general observer support branch, expects the institute to receive at least a thousand proposals a year from astronomers all over the world; only 400 to 500 proposals a year are likely to be accepted.

"Time on the space telescope will indeed be a dear commodity," she says. "The scientific merit of the proposal will be the main criterion for acceptance, and the merit will have to be very high. This will make astronomers think much harder about what they want to do, and science will gain from that."

After a proposal is accepted, the complex task of scheduling time begins. In orbit, the telescope will be instructed by remove control from the Goddard space flight center in Greenbelt, MD, acting on directions from the space telescope science institute. Because of operational constraints, most projects will be scheduled nearly six months in advance, although there will be flexibility to look at "targets of opportunity" on short notice and to interact in "real time" with the telescope. Institute scientists are now developing the computer programs for scheduling and for sending instructions to Goddard.

The institute is also developing the capability to find the "Guide stars" that are essential for keeping the telescope pointing accurately. For each target, astronomers must know the precise position and brightness of a pair of stars in the target's vicinity.

"It turns out that we need something like 20 million guide stars," Dr. Barry Lasker, chief of the guide star selection systems, says. "No existing star catalog begins to approach this size, so we're developing our own." Two laser-based machines are currently working nearly around the clock to scan some 1,477 glass plates, each of which contains images of thousands of stars and other celestial objects. The coordinates and other data on each object are being stored in a computer.

With a lifetime estimated at a minimum of 15 years, the space telescope will be the longest-lived astronomical telescope ever orbited; it will also be the largest and the first truly international permanent space-science facility.

Anticipation in the astronomical community is almost palpable. Says Dupree of the center for astrophysics, "The space telescope is an incredibly rich, powerful instrument that will be limited only by the intelligence and creativity of its users. There will be many unexpected discoveries, and these may be the most exciting. In addition, the space telescope will surely lead to a lot more work for ground-based astronomers."

Adds Dr. Riccardo Giacconi, director of the space telescope science institute, "Observations with the space telescope will be at the cutting edge of much of the astronomical research for the next century." But he balks at analogies to the revolution in astronomy brought about by Galileo. "I don't know whether the space telescope will have the same philosophical implications as Galileo's telescopes. Whether we will discover new classes of objects or new phenomena is unclear to me, but every time we've used a new instrument, we have been surprised."

New Survey To Update Farm Cost Estimate

U.S. farmers have been spending record amounts for many production inputs. The results are well known+ The highest levels of agricultural productivity of any nation. However, information on the costs of producing crops and their importance to farmers falls short of what is needed.

During late March and into April, enumerators from the Minnesota agricultural statistics service will interview a cross-section of Minnesota farmers as part of a nationwide program to determine 1983 production costs for a variety of field crops.

Carroll Rock, director of the service, points out that information is important in assessing the cost of producing various crops and the impact of alternative support levels on farm income. He adds that all responses will be confidential and only regional and national summaries will be published.

The Service also has available two publications on farm costs: "1982 Cost of Producing Crops" and "1982 Cost of Producing Livestock and Dairy." Both show information for the geographical region which includes Minnesota as well as U.S. cost estimates. Single copies are available free from the Minnesota Agricultural Statistics Service, P.O. Box 7068, St. Paul, MN 55107.

RIFLE IN HAND, farmer Andrew Carnes (played by Lee Genereux) and Aunt Eller (played by Dana Torkelson) visit in front of the farmhouse in a scene from Lincoln high school's production of the musical "Oklahoma." Performances will be given in the school auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. Advance sale tickets may be obtained from Larson Music for $3. Senior citizens may receive free tickets for the Friday night performance only.

Town Meeting On Education Next Tuesday

Recently Commissioner Randall has indicated areas that she has concerns and questions about and that all school districts should address. Some of these areas include changing the focus from teaching to actual learning; establishing statewide achievement tests that students would have to pass to earn a high school diploma; evaluating teachers either through self-assessment or peer-assessment; designing new management models for administrators that involve parents and citizens; and using summer as an opportunity to extend the school year for gifted and motivated students.

"Please let the school district know about your concerns by attending the public meeting Tuesday evening," McDowell said. "Study guides and response forms can be picked up at the superintendent's office, Northwest regional library, Northern state bank, Norwest bank, First Federal savings and loan, and Pete's family market in St. Hilaire. Fill out a response form and bring it to the meeting, or if unable to attend, send it to the superintendent's office or drop it off at your convenience. We want to hear from you."

MCC Teacher Of Year Teaches Step-By-Step

analysis of the problem leads him to believe that one of the biggest difficulties students have is not one of lack of fundamentals but of organization and self-motivation. This has led to his emphasis on step-by-step problem solving.

"I feel it is important that both the students and parents understand the structure of how your class is run," Jorgenson says. "I like to keep a strict but relaxed atmosphere for the students to learn in. I believe in daily assignments, along with at least one pop quiz a week over that week's material so that I can check on their progress more closely.

"I feel that the lectures should be kept short but informative along with use of many examples that will help them understand their daily assignment. I also try to have plenty of time at the end of the class period for students to begin their next day's assignment and to ask questions if they still have some."

In addition to his mathematics degree cum laude from Moorhead state university, Jorgenson has taken basic and advanced basic computer programming for a total of five quarter credits at Northland community college in Thief River Falls.

He was valedictorian of his graduating class at Rothsay high school in 1973 and was a Boys State delegate in 1972 and winner of the school's Arion award for music in 1973.

He continues his music interest as precussionist and vocalist with the "Spirit" band and in the choir at Bethlehem Lutheran church of Newfolden.

He is a charter member of the Newfolden Lions club and a past treasurer, as well as a past treasurer and current lay reader of Bethlehem Lutheran and current president of the Newfolden local of Aid Association for Lutherans.

He has been head track coach at the school since he joined the faculty in 1977 and was District 32 track coach of the year in 1983. He was also head wrestling coach for two years, has been junior high football coach since 1977 and assistant girls basketball coach since 1979, and serves as the sophomore class advisor.

"I feel it is very important that a teacher gets involved and participates in as many organizations and extra-curricular activities as possible so he or she will get to know what the community is like, who the parents are, and what the students are doing outside of the daily classroom setting," he said. "This means you are always doing something, but someone once said, 'If you want something to get done, ask a busy person'."

A member of the Marshall County Central Education association, Jorgenson has been president in 1981-82, negotiator in 1980-82 and chief negotiator in 1983, treasurer in 1980-1981 and chairman of the meet and confer committee in 1982-83. He also served on the continuing education committee in 1980-81.

Jorgenson is married and he and his wife Kathryn have two children, Eric Mark, age four and Melissa Jean, age 18 months. They live in Newfolden.

Council Grants Zoning To Build Condominiums

council with "proposed condominium bylaws", which included an age restriction limiting occupancy to persons 45 or older. Although she emphasized that the bylaws were "only proposed," and would have to be approved by the condominium association, Jenny noted that the units would be sold subject to acceptance of the bylaws, with Gunderson maintaining control of the association until 75 per cent of the units were sold.

Another major restriction noted in the proposed bylaws was required approval of the association before units could be sold or leased to anyone outside the association.

City Attorney Paul Ihle noted that the document was not a guarantee that could not be changed in six months or a year, but allowed that if Gunderson sold the units under an agreement limiting occupancy to people of a certain age, he could be subject to legal action from the purchasers if he attempted to change the rules.

In introducing a motion to have the planning commission initiate a rezoning action to declare the property R1, Alderman Jim Womack commented that he was reversing his earlier decision "because I have strong feelings of concern for all the parties concerned, and because it's easier to bend than be broken." Alderman Clayton Restad seconded the motion, commenting, "I thought we acted prematurely."

On a roll call vote, they voted for the motion, along with Alderman Goodrich, who commented "I would have to remain opposed unless Mr. Gunderson can provide some more definite guarantees."

Voting to leave the property zoned R3 were Aldermen Milan Borsheim, Ken Murphy and Bill Penning, with Penning commenting that he thought R1 was "too restrictive."

In casting his tie-breaking vote, Mayor Carlson commented that he recognized the dilemma which they faced, having known the parties involved on both sides for many years. "I also recognize the work Mr. Gunderson has put into this project, and I recognize the reasons we voted against the planning commissions recommendation. We were assured that the project would not be detrimental to the adjoining property values."

"I don't think there's been too much pressure put on by either side. There have been some phone calls, but I've thought it out and I'm going to vote with Mr. Gunderson on the subject matter."

Ken Wiebolt, one of the adjoining property owners questioned whether the proposals presented by Mr. Gunderson that evening would be legally part of the understanding since they were not in the motion as originally presented. Ihle stated that they would be part of the public record.

In other business, the council:

— Passed a resolution accepting the engineer's preliminary report for a proposed 1984 street and utility improvement project, ordering plans and specifications and establishing 8 p.m. April 10 for a public hearing on the matter. Total cost of the project is estimated at $490,912.

— Authorized purchase of an air compressor for the fire department at a cost of $6,400, with approximately $5,000 of the cost to be recovered in donations over three years.

— Passed a resolution requesting special legislation from area legislators to allow burning of leaves in Thief River Falls from April 1 to June 1.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

When you think about investing your spare cash, you want income and a profit. You wouldn't put your money into something that provides no income or loses value.

Looking at precious metals, gems and collectibles as investments in our last column, we saw that none provided either a sure profit or a guarantee of value. Their roller coaster values meant that an unexpected need for cash could cost you value. As an example, gold purchased in 1980 for $800 per ounce could have been sold in December of 1983 for $378, or a loss of $422. Since 1983 dollars had depreciated in value because of inflation, you would only be receiving $294 in 1980 purchasing power, losing $506 for each ounce of gold sold.

Looking at some other investment possibilities, stocks and bonds, let's see if the risk of loss of value can be reduced.

Stock is an ownership interest in a business evidenced by a piece of paper, a certificate. Some stock is listed on exchanges or special wire services. Some is privately held and very difficult to value and sell.

The Wall Street Journal tells the story of a man who had 15,000 shares of Genentech stock received while he was working for that company. It had no known market value when he got the stock. In one day, after the stock went public, he watched the price go from $35 to $89 in less than a half hour, and close at the end of the day at $71. In 1983 it hit a low of $26. This means that our stockholder, a man with a below average income, watched his stock have a market value of zero, rise to $525,000, then, within a half hour, go up to $1,335,000, down to $1,065,000 by the end of the same day, and hit $390,000 at one point last year.

This shows that stock is bought and sold based on perceptions as to where it is going, profit-wise, and that those perceptions can change quickly. Since stock evidences ownership, stockholders participate in the profits of their company in two ways: (1) You get dividends, payments from profits which are taxable, and (2) you get appreciation or growth of value if the company is profitable, or you get a reduction in value if the company is a loser. What adds to the confusion is that the company does not have to be a real winner or loser, but is dependent on whether the stock buying public believes it is a future winner or loser.

Stock is not a sure thing. There are no guarantees on dividends or appreciation. Even a well managed and respected company like IBM can watch its stock vary from a low of $94 to a high of about $135 in 1983, with a low price of almost $49 during the last four years. All during this period IBM products have been in great demand.

So-called stock market experts have no idea what will happen, price-wise. Each year they try to guess what will occur and much of that guessing falls flat. There are so many variables: (1) Will the company sales go up or down? (2) Will the company costs go up or down? (3) What impact will inflation, competition and innovation (new ideas) have on profits? (4) Will the stock market go up or down? (5) Where is the economy headed? (6) What will international affairs do to sales and profits? There is much more to consider! No one has a sure thing for you.

Bonds are another form of security. They are a debt obligation, a loan of your money in exchange for interest to be paid to you regularly, and a promise to pay back your money on a set day. The interest amount is a fixed percentage of the loan. This sounds like that "sure thing" we have been hunting, doesn't it?

If the company doesn't have adequate earnings to pay the interest, it will default on its obligation to you. First it may not pay the interest, and then it may not pay the principal. If interest rates in the marketplace go up, and you need to sell your bond, you may not get back 100 cents on the dollar. If interest rates go down below what you are receiving, you may be able to sell your bond for more than what you paid.

As an example, a friend bought $20,000 worth of bonds a few years ago, paying $20,000. In November of 1983, he needed some money and sold $10,000 worth of the bonds getting back $7,200. A month later he sold the other $10,000 in bonds and received $6,600. Interest rates on bonds had gone up. Furthermore, with inflation, his loss was even bigger because the $20,000 he paid for the bonds was worth more in purchasing power than the 1983 dollars he got from the sale of the bonds. Companies and governments have defaulted on bonds, which means that they sometimes do not pay their interest or their full principal.

Remember that stocks and bonds are sold by brokers who earn commissions when they buy and sell. They are not that "sure thing" we have been hunting as an investment.

The President had called to the White House leaders of both political parties in the Congress. He reported on his decision to participate with a coalition of eastern Caribbean nations in an invasion of Grenada. He decided to do this because of the 1,000 Americans in Grenada, multiple coups that had created instability, and the development of a Cuban and Russian base for the export of terrorism. Not one of these leaders, Democrat or Republican, disagreed with the President's decision, and the Democratic House Speaker even said, as he departed, "God Bless you, Mr. President."

When the President reported to the American people, after the invasion had commenced, he was able to show us pictures of warehouses, loaded floor to ceiling, with modern weapons and ammunition, enough to man an army of more than 10,000 men. He showed us an airport under construction with a two mile runway. There were fortifications and massive numbers of Cuban and Russian military men. He had gotten the Americans out, safely, eliminated a massive cache of weapons and ammunition, and rooted out those who would have terrorized the Caribbean. He achieved the objective. He also let a good many people know that the United States is not a doddering idiot to be pushed around and citizens abused overseas with no fear of retaliation.

Grenada was about one-eleventh of the size of Rhode Island. Its population is 112,000. A medical school offered enrollment to Americans, attracting hundreds of students who could not find space in continental medical schools. The country had been taken over by a few unconcerned with the rights of the people, and devoted to Russia and its Cuban stooges.

Over the years we watched Grenada developing into a terror-export base. Then the Prime Minister was arrested. Some of his people released him. Others decided to exterminate the Prime Minister and his key cabinet officials. The situation deteriorated. The Americans on Grenada were terrified.

Now that they are safe (many kissing the ground as they debarked from planes and lauding the American Rangers and marines who saved them), some of our politicians and peaceniks claim that we moved too fast. We should have waited until the terror began, as we have done when these politicians and peaceniks were in positions of power. They see no reason why we should not have left the Russians, Cubans, weapons, ammunition, political prisoners and problems alone until they were critical and costly to root out.

The President did act. The medical students and other Americans are here now and safe. The Grenadans have their country back. Their neighbors do not have to fear the export of terror. The Russians and Cubans are being sent back home. The President demonstrated that the Americans are no longer asleep and willing to tolerate any kind of abuse that the Russians and their stooges may want to dish out. He has set the world on notice that we are not cowards unwilling to protect ourselves so that the bullies of the world can play and torment with impunity.

By setting the record straight, the President has done more for peace because he has eliminated the miscalculation that nothing could cause the United States to react.

What surprises me is the reaction now of some of our politicians. Even though the American people understand that you do not need equipment for an army of 10,000 to protect an island as small as Grenada, and that the Russians and Cubans were there for no good, and our fellow Americans there are now safe, some politicians are now talking. Even those who agreed with the president when they were briefed now see some political hay to be made by saying that we should have waited until the troubles were critical and apparent. These are the same politicians who helped create the American reputation as a coward, mishandled the Iranian hostage situation, cost us 17 per cent inflation and interest rates of more than 21 per cent, and mismanaged our economy and government. Their judgement record is so faulty that I am surprised at their willingness to try to undermine the president with their hindsight criticism which is no better than their foresight judgements.

These politicians are counting on our having poor memories so that we will have forgotten their past failures and lousy advice.

I have not always agreed with this president, but I felt prouder of our nation because he did something positive for long term peace. In perspective, while I feel terrible about the soldiers we have lost in the fighting, I do realize that they approximate the number of traffic deaths we experience in 2 hours, deaths that achieved nothing.

DEMONSTRATION of the intricate patterns and delicate hand stitching involved in quilts sewn for Project Heritage Designs, Inc., took place Sunday at The Sue Line in Thief River Falls. Nina Halvorson, one of the quilters for the locally-organized and operated business, demonstrates for Linda Bentson of Project Heritage Designs and Sue Fredeen of The Sue Line. The hand sewn quilts require over 100 hours of work and marketing is being expanded beyond the Twin Cities area where outlets have been arranged. The Sue Line will be a local outlet for the company's products. Mrs. Bentson will be traveling to Chicago for the company in an effort to develop additional sales outlets. The quilt hanging on the wall in the background is one made by Mrs. Halvorson and is one of several patterns produced by the company. Well over 200 people attended the demonstration and exhibit Sunday.

Sodbuster Bill Clears House Subcommittee

U.S. House subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development has reported the so-called "sodbuster" bill. The legislation, H.R. 3457, is much more extensive than the Senate version (S. 663) passed late last year.

H.R. 3457 contains three main provisions. The first is the "sodbuster" language which would deny price supports and other federal subsidies to farmers for crops grown on newly plowed and highly erodible land. It is an attempt to stop subsidizing speculators who buy large parcels of arid grassland, plow under the natural vegetation, and expect to make quick profits by reselling the land at higher cropland prices. Meanwhile the soil erodes and taxpayers are saddled with disaster payments and other subsidies for the unwarranted venture.

Another provision of the bill would establish a "conservation reserve." This program would concentrate on erodible land nationwide. It provides for long-term contracts whereby a landowner would take the land out of crop production and plant something else that would hold the soil in place.

The third provision in H.R. 3457 authorizes a "voluntary set-aside." That program is aimed at taking any land out of crop production and devoting that acreage to conservation pruposes, such as wildlife habitat. The land put into this program would not be removed from the base acreage that a farmer uses to participate in other USDA programs now or in the future.

Subcommittee chairman Ed Jones of Tennessee reportedly wants to move the bill as rapidly as possible through the full House agriculture committee.

In the Senate, the subcommittee on soil and water conservation, forestry and environment held an oversight hearing on the agriculture department's budget for conservation programs in fiscal year 1985. Conservationists opposed the cuts in USDA conservation programs, including the water bank. They noted, however, that financing current efforts would not solve the massive losses of soil, clean water and wildlife habitat caused by agriculture. They said program and policy changes were necessary to reduce that waste.

Hazardous Waste Care Liability To Be Shared

Who should bear the liability for hazardous wastes deposited at the disposal or long-term storage facility to be sited by the waste management board: state government, the firms that produced the wastes, companies that transported the wastes, the operator of the facility, or a combination of these parties?

After a long, careful look at this complex and difficult issue, the board has recommended a system of "shared responsibility" in which the various parties involved in the generation and management of hazardous wastes, at different stages, would be liable for personal injury claims that might result if an accidental release of wastes were to occur at the facility, notes board chairman Robert Dunn.

The board issued its liability recommendations in late February; it was required to make recommendations on disposal facility liability by the state "superfund" law passed in 1983, which set up a fund to pay for the clean-up of problem waste sites in the state. The law also set standards that made generators, transporters and disposal facility operators jointly and strictly liable for personal injuries caused by releases of hazardous substances.

The legislature, however, did not resolve the issue of liability for wastes to be deposited at the facility to be sited by the board. Instead, it asked the board to address the issue in depth and make specific recommendations to the 1984 legislature, Dunn said.

Major portions of the board's proposed "shared responsibility" system are contained in legislation authored by Sen. Gene Merriam of Coon Rapids and Rep. Dee Long of Minneapolis that is currently being considered by the legislature.

The key provisions of the bill are:

— The disposal facility operator would indemnify — in other words pay the liability costs, but not assume the actual liability — individuals or companies that generated wastes deposited in the facility, as well as transporters who bring wastes to the facility. One possible means of indemnification would be the purchase by the facility operator of insurance coverage. The indemnification requirement would provide an incentive for the operator to ensure the safe and responsible operation of the facility.

— The disposal facility operator, however, would only be required to indemnify facility users up to a predetermined amount. The state would then pay the liability costs for claims in excess of the operator's indemnification coverage, up to a specified limit.

— Claims exceeding both the operator's indemnification, as well as the state's coverage, would be covered jointly by the original parties: generators, transporters and the facility operator.

— The facility operator would be liable for claims for damages for 30 years following "closure" of the facility, with that liability limited; claims beyond that limit would be covered by a special state "post-closure liability" fund financed by fees on facility users.

This allocation plan avoids assigning liability exclusively to private or state interests and reflects the cooperative public and private sector approach to waste management desired by the legislature and the board.

This shared method for indemnifying users of the disposal facility responds to the needs of business and industry in Minnesota by relieving them of some liability costs for wastes they deposit in a disposal facility sited by state government.

At the same time, charging hazardous waste generators a special fee to support the state's liability fund will force then to share in the costs of liability, and will provide them with an incentive toward hazardous waste reduction.

Under the shared liability plan the operator of the facility will be motivated to strive for proper, safe waste disposal.

For further information on the waste management board's policies and programs, write the board offices at 7323 58th Ave. No., Crystal, MN 55428; or call toll-free 1-800-652-9747.

Bill Increases Benefits For Disabled Vets

President Reagan has signed legislation approving a 3.5 per cent rate increase in compensation for service-connected disabled veterans and in dependency and indemnity compensation for widows and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes. The increase will be effective on April 1.

Disabled veterans and survivors affected by this legislation will receive their increased benefits for April in their May 1 checks.

The legislation also increases benefits for a few service-connected blinded veterans who also suffer from service-connected deafness. In addition, it increases the membership of the board of veterans appeals from 50 to 65 to ease an ever-increasing caseload and expedite appeals.

Also included in the bill signed by the president is a provision that removes a 73-year-old restriction of the nation's sole confederates-only cemetery in Springfield, MO. The cemetery had been limited to southern soldiers of the civil war and their direct dependents since it was deeded to the federal government in 1911. President's signature clears the way for any U.S. military veteran with an honorable discharge to be buried there.

In a related cemetery matter, the bill contains a five-year extension of the VA program which helps finance state veterans' cemeteries. Since its inception in 1980, the state cemetery grants program has awarded matching funds totalling $4.1 million to six states for establishment, expansion or improvement of state veterans' cemeteries.

Free Brochure Available To Asthma Victims

Asthma is one of the most common of severe lung diseases in childhood, and flareups are one of the leading causes of time lost from school.

According to the American lung association, there may be as many as six million people with asthma in the U.S., one-third of them under 17 years of age. All socio-economic classes are involved, and, before adolescence, more boys than girls are affected, by a ratio of two to one.

About half of all children with asthma outgrow the illness entirely as they reach the mid-teens, and many show improvement at age six, perhaps because airways widen at that time.

The disease is characterized by increased responsiveness of the trachea and bronchi, to various stimuli such as pollutants, allergens, and infectious agents. Sulfur dioxide, ozone, oxides of nitrogen and other components of polluted air all appear to be involved.

In an effort to help educate the public about asthma, the American lung association of Minnesota is offering several free pamphlets on asthma, and also publishes a free quarterly newsletter entitled "Asthma Update." "Asthma Alert" is a new program available for school personnel, which utilizes file folders full of information. Family asthma programs are available in several communities which help teach parents and children how to deal with the disease. Camp Superkids, a camp for children with asthma, will be held July 9-20.

For information on asthma or asthma programs of the American lung association of Minnesota, contact Pat Kasell, American lung association of Minnesota, 614 Portland avenue, St. Paul, 55102 or call toll free, 1-800-642-LUNG.

Upper Midwest Recovery Said Less Than Usual

Upper Midwest economy has been recovering from the last recession — though not quite as fast as usual — and it should continue to recover throughout 1984, according to economists at the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis. Their report in the bank's latest "Quarterly Review" says that, compared to previous postwar recoveries, this recovery has begun rather slowly in the Upper Midwest.

The Fed economists attribute this below-average growth, in part, to the fact that agriculture did not recover early in 1983 from its several years of extreme weakness. In good years, agribusiness generates a "significant amount of income" in the Upper Midwest, they say.

The economists report that the construction industry appears to have so far been contributing more than a historical average share to the regional recovery. Both building permits and housing starts rebounded at a faster pace than usual during the first few quarters of this recovery. Based on historical experience, some temporary setbacks are to be expected in this industry in 1984, but the general trend for 1984 construction should be upward.

Another strong industry in the Upper Midwest has been manufacturing, and it should also continue to grow in 1984. As measured by its employment, the manufacturing sector has also come back from recession at a faster-than-normal pace. Many plant expansions have been announced recently, and industry analysts expect capital equipment spending to pick up further in 1984.

Several natural resource-related industries were not strong like construction and manufacturing in most of 1983, but they turned up late in the year and now are also expected to continue to grow in 1984, according to the Fed report. Spurred by strong demand for pulp and paper, the forestry industry began to recover in 1983, the report says. The number of active oil rigs in the Williston Basin of North Dakota recently increased nearly 30 per cent. Some industry analysts think that the short-term outlook for iron pellet production is improving and that production will probably be higher in 1984 than in 1983.

Revised Farm Program Gets Committee OK

Wheat farmers will get a chance to reassess the 1984 government program if a new revised farm program passes the Congress.

The bill, which was worked out over months of behind-the-scenes maneuvering by Senator Rudy Boschwitz and other members of the senate agriculture committee, passed the committee with ease last week. It will probably be considered by the full senate next week.

Basically, the bill revises government programs for wheat, corn, cotton and rice. It also provides export assistance and drought and credit aid.

Boschwitz was the principal Republican author of the wheat program. He said a change was necessary in order to prevent even greater surpluses of wheat this fall. The new program looks like this:

— 1984 crop: $4.38 target price; 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; 20 per cent unpaid setaside; 10 to 20 per cent PIK with 85 per cent payment rate.

— 1985 crop: $4.45 target price; five per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; not more than 25 per cent unpaid setaside; early July announcement in accordance with current law.

"Sometimes it seems like a free ride for the farmer, but it isn't," Boschwitz said, "because the farmer gives up something by not planting.

"What the farmers gets back is lower production, raised prices and as a result, the farm programs cost less," he added. "It's a good deal less costly to pay for laying aside land than it is to pay for all the problems that arise when the wheat is grown."

The commodity programs for corn looks like this:

— 1984 crop: No change in 1984 program.

— 1985 crop: Freeze target price at $3.03; if carryover exceeds 1.1 billion bushels, total acreage cutbacks of 5 to 20 per cent (combination unpaid setaside and paid diversion) of which not less than five per cent is paid diversion and any reduction over 15 per cent to be equally proportioned between paid diversion and unpaid setaside; early September announcement in accordance with current law.

Stumpf Authors Bill Regarding Public Lands

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer is authoring legislation this session that would require the state department of natural resources (DNR) to prepare county land acquisition plans identifying where and why the DNR intends to acquire public lands.

The legislation is intended to give county boards more muscle when wrestling with the state department of natural resources over public lands issues.

"It is true that I would very much like to see some action taken that would require the DNR to work more closely with our county boards and local citizens in general in terms of public land acquisition and sales," Stumpf said.

Action on Stumpf's bill, which would require that all DNR public land acquisition proposals be submitted to county boards for prior approval, was delayed last week at the State Capitol in St. Paul when debate over the measure became heated and further action on the measure was laid over to the next meeting.

"The state law needs to be changed in the area of tax-forfeited, public land issues so that these land conflicts will not be further prolonged," Stumpf explained. "My intent is for local communities and counties to work hand-in-hand with the DNR in terms of land acquisition and in making the transfer or sale of this land more agreeable to all parties involved."

The DNR currently holds large acreage in Aitkin, Beltrami, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall and Roseau counties. Morris Anderson of the Association of Minnesota counties, speaking in support of Stumpf's bill at the recent hearing, said that county commissioners favor it because "it is a workable plan toward gaining more local influence" in the transfer and sale of public lands.

Sen. Stumpf said his bill would have three major effects:

First, it would offer a plan for the county and state to consider prior to any purchase or sale of public lands;

Second, it would require the DNR to set up some benefits criteria related to drainage, ditch-clearing issues, which are now determined entirely by the DNR, and

Finally, land located in consolidated, conservation districts that is tax delinquent would not revert back to public land status. It would instead be treated as other delinquent land and eventually could be offered for local resale if the land is found to be suitable as agricultural land by the county board, the land exchange board and the DNR commissioner.

Senior Citizen Day At Library Features Films

Two films will be presented at the senior citizen's day program at the Northwest regional library on Thursday from 3 to 4 p.m. The films "Cops" and "Martin the Cobbler" will be presented in the library meeting room and refreshments will be served.

"Cops" is a black and white Buster Keaton movie which is about 17 minutes long. Buster Keaton tries a new business venture to win his girl's hand. It results in one of the grandest chase sequences ever filmed. A music track is included.

"Martin the Cobbler" is a 28-minute film which is based on the Tolstoy folktale, "Where Love Is, God Is." It is a film for all seasons and for all ages, especially those who believe in miracles and dreams. This film is done in clay animation.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

When you think about investing your spare cash, you want income and a profit. You wouldn't put your money into something that provides no income or loses value.

Looking at precious metals, gems and collectibles as investments in our last column, we saw that none provided either a sure profit or a guarantee of value. Their roller coaster values meant that an unexpected need for cash could cost you value. As an example, gold purchased in 1980 for $800 per ounce could have been sold in December of 1983 for $378, or a loss of $422. Since 1983 dollars had depreciated in value because of inflation, you would only be receiving $294 in 1980 purchasing power, losing $506 for each ounce of gold sold.

Looking at some other investment possibilities, stocks and bonds, let's see if the risk of loss of value can be reduced.

Stock is an ownership interest in a business evidenced by a piece of paper, a certificate. Some stock is listed on exchanges or special wire services. Some is privately held and very difficult to value and sell.

The Wall Street Journal tells the story of a man who had 15,000 shares of Genentech stock received while he was working for that company. It had no known market value when he got the stock. In one day, after the stock went public, he watched the price go from $35 to $89 in less than a half hour, and close at the end of the day at $71. In 1983 it hit a low of $26. This means that our stockholder, a man with a below average income, watched his stock have a market value of zero, rise to $525,000, then, within a half hour, go up to $1,335,000, down to $1,065,000 by the end of the same day, and hit $390,000 at one point last year.

This shows that stock is bought and sold based on perceptions as to where it is going, profit-wise, and that those perceptions can change quickly. Since stock evidences ownership, stockholders participate in the profits of their company in two ways: (1) You get dividends, payments from profits which are taxable, and (2) you get appreciation or growth of value if the company is profitable, or you get a reduction in value if the company is a loser. What adds to the confusion is that the company does not have to be a real winner or loser, but is dependent on whether the stock buying public believes it is a future winner or loser.

Stock is not a sure thing. There are no guarantees on dividends or appreciation. Even a well managed and respected company like IBM can watch its stock vary from a low of $94 to a high of about $135 in 1983, with a low price of almost $49 during the last four years. All during this period IBM products have been in great demand.

So-called stock market experts have no idea what will happen, price-wise. Each year they try to guess what will occur and much of that guessing falls flat. There are so many variables: (1) Will the company sales go up or down? (2) Will the company costs go up or down? (3) What impact will inflation, competition and innovation (new ideas) have on profits? (4) Will the stock market go up or down? (5) Where is the economy headed? (6) What will international affairs do to sales and profits? There is much more to consider! No one has a sure thing for you.

Bonds are another form of security. They are a debt obligation, a loan of your money in exchange for interest to be paid to you regularly, and a promise to pay back your money on a set day. The interest amount is a fixed percentage of the loan. This sounds like that "sure thing" we have been hunting, doesn't it?

If the company doesn't have adequate earnings to pay the interest, it will default on its obligation to you. First it may not pay the interest, and then it may not pay the principal. If interest rates in the marketplace go up, and you need to sell your bond, you may not get back 100 cents on the dollar. If interest rates go down below what you are receiving, you may be able to sell your bond for more than what you paid.

As an example, a friend bought $20,000 worth of bonds a few years ago, paying $20,000. In November of 1983, he needed some money and sold $10,000 worth of the bonds getting back $7,200. A month later he sold the other $10,000 in bonds and received $6,600. Interest rates on bonds had gone up. Furthermore, with inflation, his loss was even bigger because the $20,000 he paid for the bonds was worth more in purchasing power than the 1983 dollars he got from the sale of the bonds. Companies and governments have defaulted on bonds, which means that they sometimes do not pay their interest or their full principal.

Remember that stocks and bonds are sold by brokers who earn commissions when they buy and sell. They are not that "sure thing" we have been hunting as an investment.

The President had called to the White House leaders of both political parties in the Congress. He reported on his decision to participate with a coalition of eastern Caribbean nations in an invasion of Grenada. He decided to do this because of the 1,000 Americans in Grenada, multiple coups that had created instability, and the development of a Cuban and Russian base for the export of terrorism. Not one of these leaders, Democrat or Republican, disagreed with the President's decision, and the Democratic House Speaker even said, as he departed, "God Bless you, Mr. President."

When the President reported to the American people, after the invasion had commenced, he was able to show us pictures of warehouses, loaded floor to ceiling, with modern weapons and ammunition, enough to man an army of more than 10,000 men. He showed us an airport under construction with a two mile runway. There were fortifications and massive numbers of Cuban and Russian military men. He had gotten the Americans out, safely, eliminated a massive cache of weapons and ammunition, and rooted out those who would have terrorized the Caribbean. He achieved the objective. He also let a good many people know that the United States is not a doddering idiot to be pushed around and citizens abused overseas with no fear of retaliation.

Grenada was about one-eleventh of the size of Rhode Island. Its population is 112,000. A medical school offered enrollment to Americans, attracting hundreds of students who could not find space in continental medical schools. The country had been taken over by a few unconcerned with the rights of the people, and devoted to Russia and its Cuban stooges.

Over the years we watched Grenada developing into a terror-export base. Then the Prime Minister was arrested. Some of his people released him. Others decided to exterminate the Prime Minister and his key cabinet officials. The situation deteriorated. The Americans on Grenada were terrified.

Now that they are safe (many kissing the ground as they debarked from planes and lauding the American Rangers and marines who saved them), some of our politicians and peaceniks claim that we moved too fast. We should have waited until the terror began, as we have done when these politicians and peaceniks were in positions of power. They see no reason why we should not have left the Russians, Cubans, weapons, ammunition, political prisoners and problems alone until they were critical and costly to root out.

The President did act. The medical students and other Americans are here now and safe. The Grenadans have their country back. Their neighbors do not have to fear the export of terror. The Russians and Cubans are being sent back home. The President demonstrated that the Americans are no longer asleep and willing to tolerate any kind of abuse that the Russians and their stooges may want to dish out. He has set the world on notice that we are not cowards unwilling to protect ourselves so that the bullies of the world can play and torment with impunity.

By setting the record straight, the President has done more for peace because he has eliminated the miscalculation that nothing could cause the United States to react.

What surprises me is the reaction now of some of our politicians. Even though the American people understand that you do not need equipment for an army of 10,000 to protect an island as small as Grenada, and that the Russians and Cubans were there for no good, and our fellow Americans there are now safe, some politicians are now talking. Even those who agreed with the president when they were briefed now see some political hay to be made by saying that we should have waited until the troubles were critical and apparent. These are the same politicians who helped create the American reputation as a coward, mishandled the Iranian hostage situation, cost us 17 per cent inflation and interest rates of more than 21 per cent, and mismanaged our economy and government. Their judgement record is so faulty that I am surprised at their willingness to try to undermine the president with their hindsight criticism which is no better than their foresight judgements.

These politicians are counting on our having poor memories so that we will have forgotten their past failures and lousy advice.

I have not always agreed with this president, but I felt prouder of our nation because he did something positive for long term peace. In perspective, while I feel terrible about the soldiers we have lost in the fighting, I do realize that they approximate the number of traffic deaths we experience in 2 hours, deaths that achieved nothing.

DEMONSTRATION of the intricate patterns and delicate hand stitching involved in quilts sewn for Project Heritage Designs, Inc., took place Sunday at The Sue Line in Thief River Falls. Nina Halvorson, one of the quilters for the locally-organized and operated business, demonstrates for Linda Bentson of Project Heritage Designs and Sue Fredeen of The Sue Line. The hand sewn quilts require over 100 hours of work and marketing is being expanded beyond the Twin Cities area where outlets have been arranged. The Sue Line will be a local outlet for the company's products. Mrs. Bentson will be traveling to Chicago for the company in an effort to develop additional sales outlets. The quilt hanging on the wall in the background is one made by Mrs. Halvorson and is one of several patterns produced by the company. Well over 200 people attended the demonstration and exhibit Sunday.

Sodbuster Bill Clears House Subcommittee

U.S. House subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development has reported the so-called "sodbuster" bill. The legislation, H.R. 3457, is much more extensive than the Senate version (S. 663) passed late last year.

H.R. 3457 contains three main provisions. The first is the "sodbuster" language which would deny price supports and other federal subsidies to farmers for crops grown on newly plowed and highly erodible land. It is an attempt to stop subsidizing speculators who buy large parcels of arid grassland, plow under the natural vegetation, and expect to make quick profits by reselling the land at higher cropland prices. Meanwhile the soil erodes and taxpayers are saddled with disaster payments and other subsidies for the unwarranted venture.

Another provision of the bill would establish a "conservation reserve." This program would concentrate on erodible land nationwide. It provides for long-term contracts whereby a landowner would take the land out of crop production and plant something else that would hold the soil in place.

The third provision in H.R. 3457 authorizes a "voluntary set-aside." That program is aimed at taking any land out of crop production and devoting that acreage to conservation pruposes, such as wildlife habitat. The land put into this program would not be removed from the base acreage that a farmer uses to participate in other USDA programs now or in the future.

Subcommittee chairman Ed Jones of Tennessee reportedly wants to move the bill as rapidly as possible through the full House agriculture committee.

In the Senate, the subcommittee on soil and water conservation, forestry and environment held an oversight hearing on the agriculture department's budget for conservation programs in fiscal year 1985. Conservationists opposed the cuts in USDA conservation programs, including the water bank. They noted, however, that financing current efforts would not solve the massive losses of soil, clean water and wildlife habitat caused by agriculture. They said program and policy changes were necessary to reduce that waste.

Hazardous Waste Care Liability To Be Shared

Who should bear the liability for hazardous wastes deposited at the disposal or long-term storage facility to be sited by the waste management board: state government, the firms that produced the wastes, companies that transported the wastes, the operator of the facility, or a combination of these parties?

After a long, careful look at this complex and difficult issue, the board has recommended a system of "shared responsibility" in which the various parties involved in the generation and management of hazardous wastes, at different stages, would be liable for personal injury claims that might result if an accidental release of wastes were to occur at the facility, notes board chairman Robert Dunn.

The board issued its liability recommendations in late February; it was required to make recommendations on disposal facility liability by the state "superfund" law passed in 1983, which set up a fund to pay for the clean-up of problem waste sites in the state. The law also set standards that made generators, transporters and disposal facility operators jointly and strictly liable for personal injuries caused by releases of hazardous substances.

The legislature, however, did not resolve the issue of liability for wastes to be deposited at the facility to be sited by the board. Instead, it asked the board to address the issue in-depth and make specific recommendations to the 1984 legislature, Dunn said.

Major portions of the board's proposed "shared responsibility" system are contained in legislation authored by Sen. Gene Merriam of Coon Rapids and Rep. Dee Long of Minneapolis that is currently being considered by the legislature.

The key provisions of the bill are:

— The disposal facility operator would indemnify — in other words pay the liability costs, but not assume the actual liability — individuals or companies that generated wastes deposited in the facility, as well as transporters who bring wastes to the facility. One possible means of indemnification would be the purchase by the facility operator of insurance coverage. The indemnification requirement would provide an incentive for the operator to ensure the safe and responsible operation of the facility.

— The disposal facility operator, however, would only be required to indemnify facility users up to a predetermined amount. The state would then pay the liability costs for claims in excess of the operator's indemnification coverage, up to a specified limit.

— Claims exceeding both the operator's indemnification, as well as the state's coverage, would be covered jointly by the original parties: generators, transporters and the facility operator.

— The facility operator would be liable for claims for damages for 30 years following "closure" of the facility, with that liability limited; claims beyond that limit would be covered by a special state "post-closure liability" fund financed by fees on facility users.

This allocation plan avoids assigning liability exclusively to private or state interests and reflects the cooperative public and private sector approach to waste management desired by the legislature and the board.

This shared method for indemnifying users of the disposal facility responds to the needs of business and industry in Minnesota by relieving them of some liability costs for wastes they deposit in a disposal facility sited by state government.

At the same time, charging hazardous waste generators a special fee to support the state's liability fund will force then to share in the costs of liability, and will provide them with an incentive toward hazardous waste reduction.

Under the shared liability plan the operator of the facility will be motivated to strive for proper, safe waste disposal.

For further information on the waste management board's policies and programs, write the board offices at 7323 58th Ave. No., Crystal, MN 55428; or call toll-free 1-800-652-9747.

Bill Increases Benefits For Disabled Vets

President Reagan has signed legislation approving a 3.5 per cent rate increase in compensation for service-connected disabled veterans and in dependency and indemnity compensation for widows and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes. The increase will be effective on April 1.

Disabled veterans and survivors affected by this legislation will receive their increased benefits for April in their May 1 checks.

The legislation also increases benefits for a few service-connected blinded veterans who also suffer from service-connected deafness. In addition, it increases the membership of the board of veterans appeals from 50 to 65 to ease an ever-increasing caseload and expedite appeals.

Also included in the bill signed by the president is a provision that removes a 73-year-old restriction of the nation's sole confederates-only cemetery in Springfield, MO. The cemetery had been limited to southern soldiers of the civil war and their direct dependents since it was deeded to the federal government in 1911. President's signature clears the way for any U.S. military veteran with an honorable discharge to be buried there.

In a related cemetery matter, the bill contains a five-year extension of the VA program which helps finance state veterans' cemeteries. Since its inception in 1980, the state cemetery grants program has awarded matching funds totalling $4.1 million to six states for establishment, expansion or improvement of state veterans' cemeteries.

Free Brochure Available To Asthma Victims

Asthma is one of the most common of severe lung diseases in childhood, and flareups are one of the leading causes of time lost from school.

According to the American lung association, there may be as many as six million people with asthma in the U.S., one-third of them under 17 years of age. All socio-economic classes are involved, and, before adolescence, more boys than girls are affected, by a ratio of two to one.

About half of all children with asthma outgrow the illness entirely as they reach the mid-teens, and many show improvement at age six, perhaps because airways widen at that time.

The disease is characterized by increased responsiveness of the trachea and bronchi, to various stimuli such as pollutants, allergens, and infectious agents. Sulfur dioxide, ozone, oxides of nitrogen and other components of polluted air all appear to be involved.

In an effort to help educate the public about asthma, the American lung association of Minnesota is offering several free pamphlets on asthma, and also publishes a free quarterly newsletter entitled "Asthma Update." "Asthma Alert" is a new program available for school personnel, which utilizes file folders full of information. Family asthma programs are available in several communities which help teach parents and children how to deal with the disease. Camp Superkids, a camp for children with asthma, will be held July 9-20.

Upper Midwest Recovery Said Less Than Usual

Upper Midwest economy has been recovering from the last recession — though not quite as fast as usual — and it should continue to recover throughout 1984, according to economists at the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis. Their report in the bank's latest "Quarterly Review" says that, compared to previous postwar recoveries, this recovery has begun rather slowly in the Upper Midwest.

The Fed economists attribute this below-average growth, in part, to the fact that agriculture did not recover early in 1983 from its several years of extreme weakness. In good years, agribusiness generates a "significant amount of income" in the Upper Midwest, they say.

The economists report that the construction industry appears to have so far been contributing more than a historical average share to the regional recovery. Both building permits and housing starts rebounded at a faster pace than usual during the first few quarters of this recovery. Based on historical experience, some temporary setbacks are to be expected in this industry in 1984, but the general trend for 1984 construction should be upward.

Another strong industry in the Upper Midwest has been manufacturing, and it should also continue to grow in 1984. As measured by its employment, the manufacturing sector has also come back from recession at a faster-than-normal pace. Many plant expansions have been announced recently, and industry analysts expect capital equipment spending to pick up further in 1984.

Several natural resource-related industries were not strong like construction and manufacturing in most of 1983, but they turned up late in the year and now are also expected to continue to grow in 1984, according to the Fed report. Spurred by strong demand for pulp and paper, the forestry industry began to recover in 1983, the report says. The number of active oil rigs in the Williston Basin of North Dakota recently increased nearly 30 per cent. Some industry analysts think that the short-term outlook for iron pellet production is improving and that production will probably be higher in 1984 than in 1983.

Revised Farm Program Gets Committee OK

Wheat farmers will get a chance to reassess the 1984 government program if a new revised farm program passes the Congress.

The bill, which was worked out over months of behind-the-scenes maneuvering by Senator Rudy Boschwitz and other members of the senate agriculture committee, passed the committee with ease last week. It will probably be considered by the full senate next week.

Basically, the bill revises government programs for wheat, corn, cotton and rice. It also provides export assistance and drought and credit aid.

Boschwitz was the principal Republican author of the wheat program. He said a change was necessary in order to prevent even greater surpluses of wheat this fall. The new program looks like this:

— 1984 crop: $4.38 target price; 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; 20 per cent unpaid setaside; 10 to 20 per cent PIK with 85 per cent payment rate.

— 1985 crop: $4.45 target price; five per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; not more than 25 per cent unpaid setaside; early July announcement in accordance with current law.

"Sometimes it seems like a free ride for the farmer, but it isn't," Boschwitz said, "because the farmer gives up something by not planting.

"What the farmers gets back is lower production, raised prices and as a result, the farm programs cost less," he added. "It's a good deal less costly to pay for laying aside land than it is to pay for all the problems that arise when the wheat is grown."

— 1984 crop: No change in 1984 program.

— 1985 crop: Freeze target price at $3.03; if carryover exceeds 1.1 billion bushels, total acreage cutbacks of 5 to 20 per cent (combination unpaid setaside and paid diversion) of which not less than five per cent is paid diversion and any reduction over 15 per cent to be equally proportioned between paid diversion and unpaid setaside; early September announcement in accordance with current law.

Stumpf Authors Bill Regarding Public Lands

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer is authoring legislation this session that would require the state department of natural resources (DNR) to prepare county land acquisition plans identifying where and why the DNR intends to acquire public lands.

The legislation is intended to give county boards more muscle when wrestling with the state department of natural resources over public lands issues.

"It is true that I would very much like to see some action taken that would require the DNR to work more closely with our county boards and local citizens in general in terms of public land acquisition and sales," Stumpf said.

Action on Stumpf's bill, which would require that all DNR public land acquisition proposals be submitted to county boards for prior approval, was delayed last week at the State Capitol in St. Paul when debate over the measure became heated and further action on the measure was laid over to the next meeting.

"The state law needs to be changed in the area of tax-forfeited, public land issues so that these land conflicts will not be further prolonged," Stumpf explained. "My intent is for local communities and counties to work hand-in-hand with the DNR in terms of land acquisition and in making the transfer or sale of this land more agreeable to all parties involved."

The DNR currently holds large acreage in Aitkin, Beltrami, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall and Roseau counties. Morris Anderson of the Association of Minnesota counties, speaking in support of Stumpf's bill at the recent hearing, said that county commissioners favor it because "it is a workable plan toward gaining more local influence" in the transfer and sale of public lands.

Sen. Stumpf said his bill would have three major effects:

First, it would offer a plan for the county and state to consider prior to any purchase or sale of public lands;

Second, it would require the DNR to set up some benefits criteria related to drainage, ditch-clearing issues, which are now determined entirely by the DNR, and

Finally, land located in consolidated, conservation districts that is tax delinquent would not revert back to public land status. It would instead be treated as other delinquent land and eventually could be offered for local resale if the land is found to be suitable as agricultural land by the county board, the land exchange board and the DNR commissioner.

Senior Citizen Day At Library Features Films

Two films will be presented at the senior citizen's day program at the Northwest regional library on Thursday from 3 to 4 p.m. The films "Cops" and "Martin the Cobbler" will be presented in the library meeting room and refreshments will be served.

"Cops" is a black and white Buster Keaton movie which is about 17 minutes long. Buster Keaton tries a new business venture to win his girl's hand. It results in one of the grandest chase sequences ever filmed. A music track is included.

"Martin the Cobbler" is a 28-minute film which is based on the Tolstoy folktale, "Where Love Is, God Is." It is a film for all seasons and for all ages, especially those who believe in miracles and dreams. This film is done in clay animation.

Sr. Federation Meet Thursday

education, reading, speech, etc.), vocational center school program and music program.

Receiving B or B-minus marks were the curriculum, extra-curricular activities, quality of teaching, education students receive, school lunch program, driver education instruction, way schools are administered, student behavior, college preparation of students, way discipline is handled, job preparation of the student and athletic program.

Of the 19 questions involving letter grades, the lowest grade given was a C-plus for the guidance program, Supt. Busch said.

Parents were also asked to answer in detail questions about the importance of different subjects required in the local schools. For college-bound students courses in mathematics, language arts, computer science, literature, business and history or U.S. government were most important subjects listed. Foreign langauge, health education, home economics, industrial arts, music and art were considered less important.

For students not planning to attend college, areas of importance were language arts, mathematics, business, computers, literature, home economics and industrial arts. Less important for these students were science, health, physical education, music, art and foreign language.

In addition to regular subjects, views were asked about instruction in special topics. Selected from among the list in order of importance were drug abuse, alcohol abuse, respect for self and others, career planning, dangers of smoking and sex education. Less important topics were values, feelings and decisions, parenting training, communism and socialism, dangers of nuclear energy and race relations.

Supt. Busch said another current question involved the requirement for a foreign language in the schools. Parents listed Spanish and Norwegian as preference for a foreign language but 30 per cent didn't know which language should be required.

Sixty-four per cent of the parents indicated that high school agriculture classes should be added to the curriculum, but 63 per cent indicated that a program for gifted and very high ability students should not be added.

"We are greatly appreciative of the effort which parents made to complete and return the questionnaire," Supt. Busch said. "These thoughtful and candid opinions will surely be considered in future education planning for this school district."

Results of the survey regarding opinions on homework, length of school year and day, school elections and other topics will be published Monday.

3-Wheelers Not Designed For City Driving

Drivers of three-wheeled all-terrain motorized vehicles should keep their machines off streets and highways and enjoy them for the puspose for which they were designed, off-road use, according to Paul Tschida, commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Public Safety.

"Driving all-terrain vehicles (ATV) can be fun and at the same time be safe by following a few common sense safety precautions," said Tschida. "Public Safety discourages driving three-wheel ATV's on highways and city streets because they are not designed or legally equipped for this type of operation."

According to Chief Roger Ledding of the Minnesota State Patrol, ATV's travel at maximum speed is 40 miles per hour and this greatly impedes the general flow of traffic.

"Even more dangerous is the vehicle's low profile which seriously impairs the driver's visibility making the vehicle hazardous to operate," said Ledding.

Highway design standards provide for a safe stopping and passing sight distance based on an average driver's eye height of 3.75 feet. But due to the smaller design profile of ATV's this distance is reduced to approximately 3.49 feet.

"In addition, ATV's run the risk of being struck by other motorists because they can't be seen as easily as other vehicles," added Ledding.

Minnesota state law requires that any all-terrain vehicle driven on public streets or highways must be licensed as a motor vehicle and must meet the following specific requirements.

+ Have a set of handlebars that do not extend above the operator's shoulders.

+ Have footrests for passengers if the vehicle is equipped with a seat designed or suited for use by a passenger.

+ Must have all safety equipment required of motorcycles.

+ To register an ATV the owner must present a statement of origin to the Division of Driver and Vehicle Services of the Department of Public Safety (DPS). If the machine is homemade, the owner must file an affidavit declaring the fact and have receipts for major components purchased.

+ Owner must present the vehicle for inspection by DPS to determine a base value for licensing and the assignment of a permanent vehicle identification number.

+ Operator must possess a valid operator's license with a motorcycle endorsement, and they must operate in accordance with traffic laws while driving it on public streets and highways.

Driver of off-the-road vehicles are reminded that advance permission of the property owner is required before driving on private property on the seven county metro area. ATV's are not permitted on snowmobile trails. Advance permission is not required outside the seven-county area but if a no trespassing sign is posted, it is a misdemeanor to operate the machine on the posted land.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

When purchasing a used car, most Americans have a mental checklist: We kick the tires, check the mileage, look at the car's general appearance and examine the warranty. Buying a car is a big investment, and it is a decision — good or bad — that we must live with for years. A well polished clunker can look pretty good in the car lot, but end up costing its new owner hundreds of dollars in repairs. It is not a decision to be taken lightly.

I would suggest here that it is none too soon for Americans to begin preparing for a decision we all face on November 6, Election Day. For electing a representative or senator can be every bit as expensive — take another look at your 1983 tax return — as purchasing a lemon of a car. It is also a decision you must live with for years. There is no warranty on representatives, and there's no trading them in for at least two years. Senators must be endured for six years.

Thus, in the interest of better government, I offer the following checklist as a consumer's guide to congressional candidates.

Now just as all used cars are owned by little old ladies who only drove to church on Sundays, so are all congressional candidates committed foes of excessive government spending. Or so they will tell you.

Here are five quick checks to make to see if these politicians have been turning back the odometer.

The Balanced Budget Amendment: This constitutional amendment would require the federal government to balance its budget, much as you and I are required to do. This amendment has the support of more than 75 per cent of all Americans and has been endorsed by 32 state legislatures. It came up for a vote in the fall of 1982 and received the necessary two-thirds vote in the Senate but failed in the House of Representatives. If you hear a politician rail against deficit spending, but he or she voted against the Balanced Budget Amendment when it was before Congress, you know you are dealing with a lemon.

The Spending Limitation Amendment: This constitutional amendment was introduced in Congress alongside the Balanced Budget Amendment. It would ensure that Congress balance the budget by limiting federal spending, rather than by piling more taxes on the American people. It is the sine qua non of fiscal responsibility. Put this on your checklist when you are looking at congressional candidates for 1984.

The Line Item Veto: The third item on the fiscal responsibility checklist would allow a president to veto part of an appropriations bill rather than face the choice of vetoing the entire bill or letting pork barrel projects slip through hidden in an otherwise worthwhile bill. Today, 43 states have the line item veto in some form, and it is a powerful weapon for spending control. When politicians drop by your church or speak at a town meeting, be sure to ask how they stand on the Line Item Veto.

The 1981 Tax Cut: A key indicator of whether your congressman believes you work for a living or for the federal government. A big plus if your congressman voted for the 1981 tax cut that slashed personal income tax rates by 25 per cent and brought us the present recovery. If he or she voted against the tax cut, it is probably time to send that congressman out into the private sector until he learns what it is like to work for a living.

No New Taxes: Will the incumbent or challenger asking for your support promise to keep his hands off the people's tax cut? No new taxes. No "revenue enhancement." No "deficit reduction measures." And finally, no new euphemisms for tax increases.

If your incumbent senator or representative supports these three constitutional amendments and demonstrates a sufficient aversion to higher taxes, you probably have a "keeper" and it is safe to send him or her back to Washington for another few years. If not, it is time to start taking a good hard look at alternative candidates.

The Roaring Eighties: If

When Benjamin Franklin left the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787, he was asked by a woman what form of government America would have. "A republic, Ma'am," Franklin replied. "If you can keep it."

I believe much the same can be said for the economic recovery now under way. The groundwork has been laid for a long period of strong and sustained economic growth, such that future generations will remember the 1980s as the Roaring '80s — if we can keep it.

The recovery will continue to run strong and deep, if we have finally learned from the tragedy of the 1970s that ever increasing federal spending, higher taxes and attempts to direct the economy from the corridors of power in Washington are failed policies and proven prescriptions for disaster.

Unemployment will continue its steady decline and fall below 7.5 per cent by year's end, if we have learned that lower marginal tax rates generate real jobs and real economic growth by encouraging work, savings and investment. The Reagan tax cut which slashed person income tax rates by 25 per cent across the board has already created more than 3.6 million new jobs in 1983. Millions more jobs will be created in 1984 unless Congress raises taxes and kills off the hopes of those looking for work.

Inflation which dropped from 13.3 per cent in 1979 and 12.4 per cent in 1980 to below four per cent during 1983 — the lowest level in years — will stay low in 1984, if we have learned that inflation does not come from greedy Arabs or sunspots or because Americans live too well, but rather from the overworked printing presses in Washington.

Interest rates which have dropped from 21.5 per cent in 1981 to 11 per cent today will continue to move downward, if Congress can summon the will to reduce deficit spending by cutting back on the growth of federal outlays.

Real economic growth will continue strong in 1984 following on the heels of a 2.5 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1983, a 9.7 per cent increase in the second quarter, a 7.9 per cent increase in the third quarter and an expected 4.5 per cent rise in the fourth quarter, if we have learned that low tax, low inflation policies — not federal spending — create jobs and economic progress.

Other upward trends will continue: 1983 saw over half-a-million more self-employed Americans, a 15.9 per cent increase in industrial production, a 7.4 per cent increase in manufacturing productivity, an 11 per cent jump in retail sales, an 8.6 per cent increase in disposable personal income and more new business incorporations in the first seven months of 1983 than in any full year prior to 1975.

Predicting the future of the $3 trillion American economy, the largest in the world, is a tricky business. Predicting the future actions of Congress is impossible. And yet, more than one would like to think, our economic well being depends on congressmen and women learning from the high tax, big government stagflation of the 1970s, and the low tax, low inflation recovery of the past year, and choosing the path of economic growth over the path of government growth.

Oh, yes. My optimistic prediction for 1984 comes with one more caveat. One more "If." Congress will not sidetrack economic growth with higher taxes, if we have learned that democracy is not a spectator sport. If Amerca is to continue the low low inflation, pro-growth policies of the past year, those men and women who understand the power and dynamics of a free economy must involve themselves in the political process by communicating frequently and forcefully with their elected representatives and working hard to elect pro-growth, pro-jobs candidates in the 1984 elections.

File 22 Counts In Mail Fraud Federal Case

Philip N. Hogen, United States attorney for the District of South Dakota, announced that a 22-county indictment has been unsealed, charging nine individuals with operating an advance fee scheme in violation of federal statutes relating to wire fraud, mail fraud, conspiracy, and inducing interstate travel to defraud.

Postal inspector in charge, Dennis R. Hagberg, and FBI special agent in charge, Richard Blay, reported the grand jury charges culminated as a result of a joint postal inspection service-FBI investigation conducted since 1982. The indictment was originally returned by a federal grand jury at Sioux Falls on December 16, 1983.

Charged were Norman Bernard Thirion a-k-a Norman Tyrone a-k-a Dr. Thirion, 61, address unknown; Ronald A. Sablosky, 36, of New York, New York; Jack Casperson, 57, of Carter Lake, Iowa; Bernard Philip Pletcher, 45, of Des Moines, Iowa; John Macauley, 65, of San Francisco, California, Wayne Hanson, 64, of Carthage, South Dakota; Pete Gomez, 54, of San Leandro, California; Gregory Meyers, 38, of Des Moines, Iowa; and Gerald Ruis, 41, of Adel, Iowa.

The indictment charges that the defendants, from January 1982 to January 1983, defrauded more than 30 victims of nearly half a million dollars by obtaining advance fees from victims in return for which victims were to receive large loans at low interest rates from Arab and or European sources. No loans were ever obtained. An indictment is only a charge of allegation of a crime and guilt or innocence must be proven in subsequent court proceedings in U.S. district court.

All defendants, except Norman Bernard Thirion have been arrested. Thirion remains at large at this time.

Sen. Moe Joins In Offering DFL Tax Ideas

Minnesota Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Ada has joined with Governor Rudy Perpich and other ranking Senate and House leaders in offering a broad range of tax relief proposals to the state's business community in what he calls an "attempt to improve the state's tarnished business climate image."

Speaking during a joint press conference held in St. Paul, Moe outlined a plan to repeal the state's temporary 10 per cent income tax surcharge by July 1, 1984; cut the state's corporate tax rate from 12 to 9.8 per cent, and provide a range of other property tax relief measures to aid farmers, homeowners and small businesses statewide.

"Because Minnesota has been getting a bum rap around this country and in our own state about its business climate, we decided to face this issue head-on," Moe stated. "We've run the risk of the image of our state being damaged and we are now giving the business community the chance to turn this around. If they respond to our efforts, maybe we can start on a long-term goal to improve Minnesota's image, both nationally and internationally."

Preliminary estimates of the tax relief amounts offered for legislative action this session indicate that it would provide about $248 million in tax relief for the remainder of this biennium and another $131 million in tax savings during the next biennium (1985-87), Moe said.

The DFL tax proposal outlined by the group this week includes:

+ A pledge to make Minnesota more competitive by July 1, 1985;

+ An 18 per cent reduction in the corporate income tax rate, now at 12 per cent, to 9.8 per cent, on Jan. 1, 1985, which will save businesses more than $60 million a year;

+ Repeal of the income tax surtax on July 1, 1984, saving taxpayers $225 million;

+ A reduction in the estate tax to the "federal pick-up level," effective Jan. 1, 1985, a savings of $1.7 million a year;

+ Full exclusion of dividends received from a foreign subsidiary effective July 1, 1984, saving $1.8 million a year; and

+ Increasing the state's budget reserve to at least $375 million. The reserve, or "rainy day fund," is now at $250 million.

"The fate of all of these tax reduction items will depend on the support of the business community and its willingness to promote Minnesota," Moe stressed. "It should also be made clear that we do not intend to take this action at the expense of the unemployed. We do not intend to cut corporate income taxes at the expense of the unemployed.

"We also will be taking action on some specific programs we'd like to see continued for unemployed people. Unemployment compensation is one of these," Moe said.

Referring to property taxes, Moe said that reform proposals would include the removal of the cap on the agriculture mill credits, targeting tax relief to homeowners who experience rapid rises in their rates and reducing the tax burden created by commercial-industrial classifications on small business.

Bill Intended To Reduce Cost Of Gov't. Parts

Day of the $500 clawhammer or the $440 plastic knob in the department of defense ledgers may become a thing of the past if legislation introduced by Senator Rudy Boschwitz and others becomes law.

Boschwitz and three of his senate colleagues, Mark Andrews (R-ND), Charles Grassley (R-IA), and Ted Kennedy (D-Mass) have introduced a bill that would make contracts for spare parts more available to small businesses and therefore more efficient. The bill could save the U.S. government $4 billion annually, Sen. Boschwitz said.

Each year DOD spends $13 billion for spare parts. This high cost is due to the fact that 80 per cent of spare parts contracts are given to specific firms designated as the sole supplier of the part — without competitive bidding.

The Boschwitz legislation would mandate more competitive bidding on spare parts contracts. The Small Business administration would assign personnel to major procurement centers to identify spare parts contracts that can be awarded through competitive bidding. An SBA employee would be assigned as a procurement center representative for those centers that spent at least $150 million on spare parts in the previous year.

"We've all heard stories about how the government pays exorbitant prices for the goods it buys. Unfortunately, there is a lot of truth to these stories, and too often DOD pays too much for spare parts. Paying prices such as $440 for a $5 plastic knob, or $153 for a $6 piece of bent sheet metal with three holes drilled into it is just too much," Boschwitz said.

Currently, the major motivation for procurement personnel is the timely processing of documents, which makes sole source procurements faster and easier. This bill counters that motivation by rewarding procurement center representatives who achieve the greatest cost savings by breaking out contracts for competitive bidding.

"I think we can work out a better spare parts procurement system in this country by applying the guiding principle of our free enterprise system, competition. Buying spare parts through competitive bidding will not only save the government substantial sums of money, it will give small business a better chance at competing for government contracts," he said.

SD 441 Gets High Grades From Parents

education, reading, speech, etc.), vocational center school program and music program.

Receiving B or B-minus marks were the curriculum, extra-curricular activities, quality of teaching, education students receive, school lunch program, driver education instruction, way schools are administered, student behavior, college preparation of students, way discipline is handled, job preparation of the student and athletic program.

Of the 19 questions involving letter grades, the lowest grade given was a C-plus for the guidance program, Supt. Busch said.

Parents were also asked to answer in detail questions about the importance of different subjects required in the local schools. For college-bound students courses in mathematics, language arts, computer science, literature, business and history or U.S. government were most important subjects listed. Foreign langauge, health education, home economics, industrial arts, music and art were considered less important.

For students not planning to attend college, areas of importance were language arts, mathematics, business, computers, literature, home economics and industrial arts. Less important for these students were science, health, physical education, music, art and foreign language.

In addition to regular subjects, views were asked about instruction in special topics. Selected from among the list in order of importance were drug abuse, alcohol abuse, respect for self and others, career planning, dangers of smoking and sex education. Less important topics were values, feelings and decisions, parenting training, communism and socialism, dangers of nuclear energy and race relations.

Supt. Busch said another current question involved the requirement for a foreign language in the schools. Parents listed Spanish and Norwegian as preference for a foreign language but 30 per cent didn't know which language should be required.

Sixty-four per cent of the parents indicated that high school agriculture classes should be added to the curriculum, but 63 per cent indicated that a program for gifted and very high ability students should not be added.

"We are greatly appreciative of the effort which parents made to complete and return the questionnaire," Supt. Busch said. "These thoughtful and candid opinions will surely be considered in future education planning for this school district."

Results of the survey regarding opinions on homework, length of school year and day, school elections and other topics will be published Monday.

RECOGNIZED Friday at the annual meeting of the Production Credit association of Thief River Falls for 30 years of membership in the cooperative were the people pictured above. # 3-Wheelers Not Designed For City Driving

Drivers of three-wheeled all-terrain motorized vehicles should keep their machines off streets and highways and enjoy them for the pusposes for which they were designed, off-road use, according to Paul Tschida, commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Public Safety.

"Driving all-terrain vehicles (ATV) can be fun and at the same time be safe by following a few common sense safety precautions," said Tschida. "Public Safety discourages driving three-wheel ATV's on highways and city streets because they are not designed or legally equipped for this type of operation."

According to Chief Roger Ledding of the Minnesota State Patrol, ATV's travel at maximum speed is 40 miles per hour and this greatly impedes the general flow of traffic.

"Even more dangerous is the vehicle's low profile which seriously impairs the driver's visibility making the vehicle hazardous to operate," said Ledding.

Highway design standards provide for a safe stopping and passing sight distance based on an average driver's eye height of 3.75 feet. But due to the smaller design profile of ATV's this distance is reduced to approximately 3.49 feet.

"In addition, ATV's run the risk of being struck by other motorists because they can't be seen as easily as other vehicles," added Ledding.

Minnesota state law requires that any all-terrain vehicle driven on public streets or highways must be licensed as a motor vehicle and must meet the following specific requirements.

+ Have a set of handlebars that do not extend above the operator's shoulders.

+ Have footrests for passengers if the vehicle is equipped with a seat designed or suited for use by a passenger.

+ Must have all safety equipment required of motorcycles.

+ To register an ATV the owner must present a statement of origin to the Division of Driver and Vehicle Services of the Department of Public Safety (DPS). If the machine is homemade, the owner must file an affidavit declaring the fact and have receipts for major components purchased.

+ Owner must present the vehicle for inspection by DPS to determine a base value for licensing and the assignment of a permanent vehicle identification number.

+ Operator must possess a valid operator's license with a motorcycle endorsement, and they must operate in accordance with traffic laws while driving it on public streets and highways.

Driver of off-the-road vehicles are reminded that advance permission of the property owner is required before driving on private property on the seven county metro area. ATV's are not permitted on snowmobile trails. Advance permission is not required outside the seven-county area but if a no trespassing sign is posted, it is a misdemeanor to operate the machine on the posted land.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

When purchasing a used car, most Americans have a mental checklist: We kick the tires, check the mileage, look at the car's general appearance and examine the warranty. Buying a car is a big investment, and it is a decision — good or bad — that we must live with for years. A well polished clunker can look pretty good in the car lot, but end up costing its new owner hundreds of dollars in repairs. It is not a decision to be taken lightly.

I would suggest here that it is none too soon for Americans to begin preparing for a decision we all face on November 6, Election Day. For electing a representative or senator can be every bit as expensive — take another look at your 1983 tax return — as purchasing a lemon of a car. It is also a decision you must live with for years. There is no warranty on representatives, and there's no trading them in for at least two years. Senators must be endured for six years.

Thus, in the interest of better government, I offer the following checklist as a consumer's guide to congressional candidates.

Now just as all used cars are owned by little old ladies who only drove to church on Sundays, so are all congressional candidates committed foes of excessive government spending. Or so they will tell you.

Here are five quick checks to make to see if these politicians have been turning back the odometer.

The Balanced Budget Amendment: This constitutional amendment would require the federal government to balance its budget, much as you and I are required to do. This amendment has the support of more than 75 per cent of all Americans and has been endorsed by 32 state legislatures. It came up for a vote in the fall of 1982 and received the necessary two-thirds vote in the Senate but failed in the House of Representatives. If you hear a politician rail against deficit spending, but he or she voted against the Balanced Budget Amendment when it was before Congress, you know you are dealing with a lemon.

The Spending Limitation Amendment: This constitutional amendment was introduced in Congress alongside the Balanced Budget Amendment. It would ensure that Congress balance the budget by limiting federal spending, rather than by piling more taxes on the American people. It is the sine qua non of fiscal responsibility. Put this on your checklist when you are looking at congressional candidates for 1984.

The Line Item Veto: The third item on the fiscal responsibility checklist would allow a president to veto part of an appropriations bill rather than face the choice of vetoing the entire bill or letting pork barrel projects slip through hidden in an otherwise worthwhile bill. Today, 43 states have the line item veto in some form, and it is a powerful weapon for spending control. When politicians drop by your church or speak at a town meeting, be sure to ask how they stand on the Line Item Veto.

The 1981 Tax Cut: A key indicator of whether your congressman believes you work for a living or for the federal government. A big plus if your congressman voted for the 1981 tax cut that slashed personal income tax rates by 25 per cent and brought us the present recovery. If he or she voted against the tax cut, it is probably time to send that congressman out into the private sector until he learns what it is like to work for a living.

No New Taxes: Will the incumbent or challenger asking for your support promise to keep his hands off the people's tax cut? No new taxes. No "revenue enhancement." No "deficit reduction measures." And finally, no new euphemisms for tax increases.

If your incumbent senator or representative supports these three constitutional amendments and demonstrates a sufficient aversion to higher taxes, you probably have a "keeper" and it is safe to send him or her back to Washington for another few years. If not, it is time to start taking a good hard look at alternative candidates.

The Roaring Eighties: If

When Benjamin Franklin left the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787, he was asked by a woman what form of government America would have. "A republic, Ma'am," Franklin replied. "If you can keep it."

I believe much the same can be said for the economic recovery now under way. The groundwork has been laid for a long period of strong and sustained economic growth, such that future generations will remember the 1980s as the Roaring '80s — if we can keep it.

The recovery will continue to run strong and deep, if we have finally learned from the tragedy of the 1970s that ever increasing federal spending, higher taxes and attempts to direct the economy from the corridors of power in Washington are failed policies and proven prescriptions for disaster.

Unemployment will continue its steady decline and fall below 7.5 per cent by year's end, if we have learned that lower marginal tax rates generate real jobs and real economic growth by encouraging work, savings and investment. The Reagan tax cut which slashed person income tax rates by 25 per cent across the board has already created more than 3.6 million new jobs in 1983. Millions more jobs will be created in 1984 unless Congress raises taxes and kills off the hopes of those looking for work.

Inflation which dropped from 13.3 per cent in 1979 and 12.4 per cent in 1980 to below four per cent during 1983 — the lowest level in years — will stay low in 1984, if we have learned that inflation does not come from greedy Arabs or sunspots or because Americans live too well, but rather from the overworked printing presses in Washington.

Interest rates which have dropped from 21.5 per cent in 1981 to 11 per cent today will continue to move downward, if Congress can summon the will to reduce deficit spending by cutting back on the growth of federal outlays.

Real economic growth will continue strong in 1984 following on the heels of a 2.5 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1983, a 9.7 per cent increase in the second quarter, a 7.9 per cent increase in the third quarter and an expected 4.5 per cent rise in the fourth quarter, if we have learned that low tax, low inflation policies — not federal spending — create jobs and economic progress.

Other upward trends will continue: 1983 saw over half-a-million more self-employed Americans, a 15.9 per cent increase in industrial production, a 7.4 per cent increase in manufacturing productivity, an 11 per cent jump in retail sales, an 8.6 per cent increase in disposable personal income and more new business incorporations in the first seven months of 1983 than in any full year prior to 1975.

Predicting the future of the $3 trillion American economy, the largest in the world, is a tricky business. Predicting the future actions of Congress is impossible. And yet, more than one would like to think, our economic well being depends on congressmen and women learning from the high tax, big government stagflation of the 1970s, and the low tax, low inflation recovery of the past year, and choosing the path of economic growth over the path of government growth.

Oh, yes. My optimistic prediction for 1984 comes with one more caveat. One more "If." Congress will not sidetrack economic growth with higher taxes, if we have learned that democracy is not a spectator sport. If Amerca is to continue the low low inflation, pro-growth policies of the past year, those men and women who understand the power and dynamics of a free economy must involve themselves in the political process by communicating frequently and forcefully with their elected representatives and working hard to elect pro-growth, pro-jobs candidates in the 1984 elections.

File 22 Counts In Mail Fraud Federal Case

Philip N. Hogen, United States attorney for the District of South Dakota, announced that a 22-county indictment has been unsealed, charging nine individuals with operating an advance fee scheme in violation of federal statutes relating to wire fraud, mail fraud, conspiracy; and inducing interstate travel to defraud.

Postal inspector in charge, Dennis R. Hagberg, and FBI special agent in charge, Richard Blay, reported the grand jury charges culminated as a result of a joint postal inspection service-FBI investigation conducted since 1982. The indictment was originally returned by a federal grand jury at Sioux Falls on December 16, 1983.

Charged were Norman Bernard Thirion a-k-a Norman Tyrone a-k-a Dr. Thirion, 61, address unknown; Ronald A. Sablosky, 36, of New York, New York; Jack Casperson, 57, of Carter Lake, Iowa; Bernard Philip Pletcher, 45, of Des Moines, Iowa; John Macauley, 65, of San Francisco, California, Wayne Hanson, 64, of Carthage, South Dakota; Pete Gomez, 54, of San Leandro, California; Gregory Meyers, 38, of Des Moines, Iowa; and Gerald Ruis, 41, of Adel, Iowa.

The indictment charges that the defendants, from January 1982 to January 1983, defrauded more than 30 victims of nearly half a million dollars by obtaining advance fees from victims in return for which victims were to receive large loans at low interest rates from Arab and or European sources. No loans were ever obtained. An indictment is only a charge of allegation of a crime and guilt or innocence must be proven in subsequent court proceedings in U.S. district court.

All defendants, except Norman Bernard Thirion have been arrested. Thirion remains at large at this time.

Sen. Moe Joins In Offering DFL Tax Ideas

Minnesota Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Ada has joined with Governor Rudy Perpich and other ranking Senate and House leaders in offering a broad range of tax relief proposals to the state's business community in what he calls an "attempt to improve the state's tarnished business climate image."

Speaking during a joint press conference held in St. Paul, Moe outlined a plan to repeal the state's temporary 10 per cent income tax surcharge by July 1, 1984; cut the state's corporate tax rate from 12 to 9.8 per cent, and provide a range of other property tax relief measures to aid farmers, homeowners and small businesses statewide.

"Because Minnesota has been getting a bum rap around this country and in our own state about its business climate, we decided to face this issue head-on," Moe stated. "We've run the risk of the image of our state being damaged and we are now giving the business community the chance to turn this around. If they respond to our efforts, maybe we can start on a long-term goal to improve Minnesota's image, both nationally and internationally."

Preliminary estimates of the tax relief amounts offered for legislative action this session indicate that it would provide about $248 million in tax relief for the remainder of this biennium and another $131 million in tax savings during the next biennium (1985-87), Moe said.

The DFL tax proposal outlined by the group this week includes:

+ A pledge to make Minnesota more competitive by July 1, 1985;

+ An 18 per cent reduction in the corporate income tax rate, now at 12 per cent, to 9.8 per cent, on Jan. 1, 1985, which will save businesses more than $60 million a year;

+ Repeal of the income tax surtax on July 1, 1984, saving taxpayers $225 million;

+ A reduction in the estate tax to the "federal pick-up level," effective Jan. 1, 1985, a savings of $1.7 million a year;

+ Full exclusion of dividends received from a foreign subsidiary effective July 1, 1984, saving $1.8 million a year; and

+ Increasing the state's budget reserve to at least $375 million. The reserve, or "rainy day fund," is now at $250 million.

"The fate of all of these tax reduction items will depend on the support of the business community and its willingness to promote Minnesota," Moe stressed. "It should also be made clear that we do not intend to take this action at the expense of the unemployed. We do not intend to cut corporate income taxes at the expense of the unemployed.

"We also will be taking action on some specific programs we'd like to see continued for unemployed people. Unemployment compensation is one of these," Moe said.

Referring to property taxes, Moe said that reform proposals would include the removal of the cap on the agriculture mill credits, targeting tax relief to homeowners who experience rapid rises in their rates and reducing the tax burden created by commercial-industrial classifications on small business.

Bill Intended To Reduce Cost Of Gov't. Parts

Day of the $500 clawhammer or the $440 plastic knob in the department of defense lodgers may become a thing of the past if legislation introduced by Senator Rudy Boschwitz and others becomes law.

Boschwitz and three of his senate colleagues, Mark Andrews (R-ND), Charles Grassley (R-IA), and Ted Kennedy (D-Mass) have introduced a bill that would make contracts for spare parts more available to small businesses and therefore more efficient. The bill could save the U.S. government $4 billion annually, Sen. Boschwitz said.

Each year DOD spends $13 billion for spare parts. This high cost is due to the fact that 80 per cent of spare parts contracts are given to specific firms designated as the sole supplier of the part — without competitive bidding.

The Boschwitz legislation would mandate more competitive bidding on spare parts contracts. The Small Business administration would assign personnel to major procurement centers to identify spare parts contracts that can be awarded through competitive bidding. An SBA employee would be assigned as a procurement center representative for those centers that spent at least $150 million on spare parts in the previous year.

"We've all heard stories about how the government pays exorbitant prices for the goods it buys. Unfortunately, there is a lot of truth to these stories, and too often DOD pays too much for spare parts. Paying prices such as $440 for a $5 plastic knob, or $153 for a $6 piece of bent sheet metal with three holes drilled into it is just too much," Boschwitz said.

Currently, the major motivation for procurement personnel is the timely processing of documents, which makes sole source procurements faster and easier. This bill counters that motivation by rewarding procurement center representatives who achieve the greatest cost savings by breaking out contracts for competitive bidding.

"I think we can work out a better spare parts procurement system in this country by applying the guiding principle of our free enterprise system, competition. Buying spare parts through competitive bidding will not only save the government substantial sums of money, it will give small business a better chance at competing for government contracts," he said.

The Polars are the only team of the 16 state tournament entries back from last year. # DNR Nongame Wildlife Program Reaches Northwest Minnesota

Since June of 1983, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources nongame wildlife program has had specialists in each region of Minnesota. These specialists are responsible for coordinating educational projects, habitat management projects, and survey projects involving Minnesota's nongame wildlife species. These activities are funded by donations on Minnesota income and property tax forms.

One specialist has been assigned to northwest Minnesota, extending from Traverse and Stevens counties in the south to Roseau and Lake of the Woods counties in the north.

Responsibilities of the nongame specialist include presentations to citizen's groups on such things as bird feeding and enhancement of back yards for wildlife. Two "Build Your Own Bluebird House" workshops were held in 1983, and two more are planned for Detroit Lakes and Fergus Falls in 1984.

Wildlife habitat in northwest Minnesota is also enhanced by donations to the Nongame Wildlife program. In 1983 over 2,000 acres of prairie were rejuvenated by the habitat management technique of prescribed burning. High quality prairie allows for the nesting of rare nongame species such as Burrowing Owls, Marbled Godwits and Upland Sandpipers.

Surveys of nongame wildlife are coordinated by the regional noongame specialist in cooperation with area wildlife managers and other field personnel. These surveys provide information on the distribution and abundance of our nongame wildlife species.

If there is an interest in having wildlife programs presented in your area, more information can be obtained by contacting your regional nongame specialist. In northwest Minnesota, write or call Katie Hirsch, Department of Natural Resources, 2115 Birchmont Beach Rd. N.E., Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 755-2976.

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has received an additional $3,744,149 in federal aid funds to assist in financing fish and wildlife restoration projects.

Minnesota's apportionment was included in $37.2 million appropriated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to the various states and brings to $119.8 million the amount distributed during fiscal year 1984.

Of the total received by Minnesota, $2,472,248 is for wildlife work and the remaining $1,271,149 is earmarked for fisheries projects.

Funds to finance the federal aid program are derived from a tax on sporting arms and ammunition and on archery equipment. A tax on fishing equipment provides the monies for federal aid to fisheries programs.

Appropriations to the states are based on a formula which takes into account the number of persons who have hunting and fishing licenses and the land and water area of each state.

Only Alaska, California and Texas received more federal aid funds for fisheries projects than did Minnesota during the 1984 fiscal year.

TIP Calls

Phone calls to the Department of Natural Resources on the Turn In Poachers (TIP) line resulted in 16 arrests of state game and fish law violators during the month of February, according to the DNR and TIP President Robert Larson of Wayzata.

Nine of the 16 arrests were made in the DNR's central region, headquartered in Brainerd, and six of the arrests for the month were for violations of the deer hunting laws.

TIP program offers cash rewards to persons who provide information that leads to an arrest and also protects the identity of the tipsters.

TIP, Inc., a non-profit citizens group, raises money through private contributions and fund raising events to finance the reward payments. Last month the organization paid out $2,725 in rewards.

A special toll-free telephone number has been set up for TIP callers: 1-800-652-9093.

Split Rock Lighthouse Park

State park lands surrounding the Split Rock Lighthouse on the North Shore of Lake Superior will be the scene of a major development project expected to start some time this summer.

Lighthouse is the focal point of Split Rock Lighthouse State Park, but aside from the lighthouse site and a few hiking rails, the park to date has offered minimum recreation facilities.

However, by the summer of 1985, if development work proceeds on schedule, visitors will have campgrounds and picnic sites, and the park will also offer winter-recreation opportunities.

There will be a new access road into the park's interior with parking lots adjacent to use areas, a unique "cart-in" campground with sanitation building, a picnic-trail area with covered shelters and a building suitable for year-round use by hikers and skiers.

Visitors to the cart-in campground will leave their vehicles at a common parking area and transport their camping gear into secluded campsites in the type of two wheel cart used for lawn work.

A modern 750 square foot toilet building will have handicapped accessibility and showers. The trail center will also be handicapped accessible and will feature various displays, an assembly area with wood stove and an attached picnic shelter with a fireplace-grill.

Architecture of the buildings will be reminiscent of the nineteenth century lighthouse station residences.

Funding for the project, to cost an estimated $55,000, is being provided from the Legislative Commission on Minnesota Resources (LCMR) and state bonds.

LCMR funds are derived from a two cent per pack tax on cigarettes.

Wildlife Law Violation Costs Minnesota Man

William John Hirvela of Hibbing has been indicted by a United States Grand Jury in Minneapolis for violating a federal wildlife law.

The indictment was for intentionally transporting or selling in interstate commerce, from Minnesota to New York, the raw fur skins of fisher taken, possessed, transported, or sold in violation of Minnesota state law.

Federal Lacey Act makes it a felony violation to transport across state lines wildlife or wildlife parts taken in violation of any state or foreign law. Hirvela was arrested on February 24, 1984, and released on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond. He was arraigned before a U.S. Magistrate on February 28, 1984, in Minneapolis. The Lacey Act carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $20,000 fine or both.

Investigation was a joint effort of the state of Minnesota and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The investigation was initiated in January of 1983, after Minnesota conservation officers served a search warrant on a residence in Hibbing. At that time, the conservation officers seized illegal furs valued at approximately $20,000 including fisher, bobcat, marten, otter and fox.

Fishing Class Is Offered At Mankato State

March 30 is the deadline for enrolling for the ninth annual Mankato State University Fishing Institute to be conducted by upper midwestern angling experts Saturday and Sunday, April 7-8, on the MSU campus.

Open to anyone interested in fishing, the event will feature Hank Parker, 1983 bass angler of the year; Gary Roach, author, broadcaster and expert on all-around fishing; Babe Winkelman, nationally known multi-species angler; Tom Zenanko, nationally prominent angler, lecturer, author and educator; Lynn Frederick, Lake Michigan fishing authority; Gary Korsgaden, leading Midwest crappie fisherman; Tony Dean, producer of the nationally syndicated "In-Fisherman" radio show; Larry Bollig, multi-species tournaments fisherman; Ken Reinicke, leading muskie fisherman of northern Wisconsin; Larry Dahlberg, flyrod fishing expert; Dave Csanda, editor of In Fisherman magazine; and Bob Jensen, staff columnist for Outdoor Outlines and Midwest Outdoors.

Sessions in the two-day program will be on lake types, fish location, seasonal patterns, tackle, fishing techniques, equipment, taxidermy, fish sensory perceptions and rod building. Southern Minnesota Walleye Association members will also make a "Southern Minnesota Basics" presentation.

Persons interested may obtain registration materials and complete schedules by writing or phoning Art Ollrich, director, Mankato State University Fishing Institute, Mankato State University, Mankato, MN 56001, telephone 507-389-6215. The institute can be taken either for one academic credit at the regular tuition rates or for no credit at a non-credit fee.

State Tourney Gets Underway On Thursday

having a difficult time forecasting a winner. None of the eight Class A entrants were ranked in the top 10 according to one final regular season poll. Two-time former champion Winona Cotter; Orr, who knocked off defending champion Barnum after the latter school had won 50 straight games; and once-beaten St. Anthony Village, appear to be the likely favorites to win top honors.

This year's 16-time Class AA and Class A field has only one repeating school from the final 16 which reached the state tournament a year ago. That school is Minneapolis North, who is back for a fifth consecutive time. North, in fact, is one of three schools entered who has previously captured top honors. Others include Rochester John Marshall, who won in 1969, and Winona Cotter, who captured Class A laurels in 1977 and 1982.

The tournament has two undefeated squads, both in Class AA, Minneapolis North, holder of the state's longest winning streak at 24-0, and White Bear Lake, winners of all 23 games this campaign. They are paired in opposite brackets and could meet one another in the finals.

The 1984 tournament features five schools which have never previously participated in a state boys basketball tournament. The two from Class AA are North Branch, who became a high school in 1932, and Mankato East, which was founded in 1973. First-timers in Class A include Sanborn, St. Anthony Village, and St. John's Prep.

Schools in the tournament with most appearances are Minneapolis North and St. Paul Central. Both will be making ninth appearances. St. Paul Central has made five trips in the past six years, missing only in 1983.

Fergus Falls, Wells-Easton and Winona Cotter have previously appeared four times. Fergus Falls was last entered in 1957; Wells in 1969; and Winona Cotter in 1962 when it was No. 1.

Rochester John Marshall, White Bear Lake, Warren and Orr are making third tournament appearances, while Bloomington Kennedy and Pelican Rapids are back for second times.

Tempting Low-Cost Menus From Maine

A hearty New England-style chowder, made especially nutritious and delicious with the addition of Maine sardines.

Looking for new ways to stretch food dollars? Here is a menu idea that can help cut soaring food bills, based on that denizen of the deep, the sardine. These tiny fish, caught in quantity off the coast of Maine from June to November, are amazingly inexpensive. Compare their price with that of imported sardines.

They're not only low in cost but offer the delights of instant availability. Just one tug of the ring-pull tab and they're ready for eating or blending into any number of dishes. Packed under the labels of Port Clyde and Holmes, they offer an abundance of protein, calcium and phosphorus, plus niacin, iron and riboflavin.

Try this recipe for a hearty chowder:

CAMPOBELLO FISH CHOWDER

- 3 cans (3-3/4 oz.) Port Clyde or Holmes sardines or fish steaks in soybean oil
- 2/3 cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup boiling water
- 1-1/2 cups diced raw potatoes
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup light cream
- 1 can (12 oz.) whole kernel corn
- Chopped parsley

Drain sardines or fish steaks. If using sardines, cut into smaller pieces. Set aside. Saute onions in oil in Dutch oven five minutes, until tender but not brown. Add water, potatoes, salt, pepper and bay leaf. Simmer, covered, until potatoes are tender, about 15 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Add milk, cream, corn and fish steaks. Heat gently. Serve immediately, garnished with parsley. Makes four to six servings.

For more recipes, write to Naturally Nutritious, P.O. Box 1769, Portland, ME 04104.

Offers Bill To Make Advance Farm Payments

U.S. Rep. James Oberstar has introduced legislation which would direct the secretary of agriculture to make advance deficiency payments to farmers who have been hit by natural disasters for at least two consecutive years.

In Minnesota, Marshall, Pennington and Polk counties have been designated natural disaster areas for two consecutive years or more, he said. The total number of counties nationwide which have been designated as eligible to receive emergency disaster loans during the past two years is 328.

Under Oberstar's bill, farmers who have qualified for Farmers Home administration (FmHA) emergency disaster loans for the past two years or more would be eligible to receive advance deficiency payments for the 1984 and 1985 crops of wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice. Deficiency payments are funds paid to farmers when crop prices fall below the target price.

"Farmers who have been hit successively by natural disasters need this assistance desperately," Oberstar said in his introductory statement. "Despite the fact that they have followed good management practices, they have not been able to realize the potential income of their crops for the past two or more years. The FmHA emergency disaster loan program has provided only partial relief for some farmers.

"This legislation would provide immediate cash to qualifying farmers and help enable them to make their farms financially solvent once again. Because farmers will soon begin spring planting operations, they need the money now," Rep. Oberstar said.

"Secretary Block in February extended the sign-up period for the wheat and feed grains programs by three weeks in order to increase participation. My bill offers a method to increase partpcipation in the program without significantly increasing the cost to the government; there are payments that farmers who participate in the programs would eventually receive anyway."

Free Materials Available From Tourist Office

For fresh ideas about vacationing in Minnesota, the Minnesota office of tourism offers two new publications: the "1984 Spring and Summer Calendar of Events" and the "Explore Minnesota-Style" vacation brochure.

The spring and summer calendar describes over 800 fun and unusual events in Minnesota including rodeos and ice cream socials, marathons and horse shows, barbecues, art fairs, and harvest festivals, to name a few. There are turkey trots and turtle races, country fairs and opera events, as well as contests for golfers and rockhounds. The 40-page publication can used for planning day trips, weekend outings and vacations this spring and summer.

"Explore Minnesota-Style" is designed with the out-of-state visitor in mind. The 32-page publication features over 100 color photographs and gives a sampling of sights, activities, accommodations, shopping, dining and transportation in Minnesota. It emphasizes the range of vacation possibilities in Minnesota from big city to wilderness, cabin in the woods to luxury resort. Many of the state's historic sites, cultural events, outdoor activities, parks and museums are included.

Copies of these publications and others are available free from the Minnesota travel information center: 296-5029 in the Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area, 800-652-9747 toll-free in Minnesota, or 800-328-1461 toll-free outside of Minnesota.

DRAPERY CARE TIPS

You can keep your draperies looking better longer if you vacuum them regularly.

You can avoid throwing money out the window if you use proper care in choosing and using draperies. Here are a few hints.

When you buy drapes, ask for totally preshrunk fabric. Ask about the colorfastness of the fabric and its resistance to fading from light and atmospheric exposure. Linen drapes usually last longer.

Read all the care instructions that accompany your purchase. Ask for them if they are not offered and share this information with your drycleaner when the drapes are cleaned.

To prolong the life of your draperies, clean them frequently, at least once a year, and vacuum regularly between cleanings. Rotate draperies if possible to vary light exposure. Protect draperies from moisture, such as rain through an open door or window or condensate on the window panes.

Many drapery fabrics are surface printed rather than died. Some of these colors, especially very deep or bright colors, are not colorfast. This type of color failure is the responsibility of the manufacturer. Often the color loss is unobjectionable, but it is wise to have all matching draperies cleaned at once, so any dulling of color is uniform. Matching bedspreads and furniture covers should also be cleaned at the same time.

A free brochure with other important facts about draperies is available from many fine member drycleaners. It is published by the International Fabricare Institute, and called "Selecting and Caring for Your Draperies."

Urges Release Of U.S. Farm Financial Aid

Terming the farm credit crisis as bad if not worse than a year ago in Minnesota and the upper midwest, agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols has urged U.S. secretary John Block to expedite the release of all available federal farm financial aid.

In a letter to Block, Nichols appealed for immediate payment of already budgeted 1984 crop deficiency payments, and asked that he exercise the rarely used emergency authority to advance half of the price support loans to farmers who contract to reduce 1984 wheat and feed grain production.

Nichols said that while corrective action has been taken by federal authorities to expedite Farmers Home administration (FmHA) loan processing in northwestern Minnesota, that the FmHA problems are not confined to that area but are mounting statewide.

"Farmers are just four to six weeks away from spring field work and too many all over the state have been unable to obtain the loans needed now for seed, fuel, and fertilizer. Suppliers of seed, fertilizer, fuel, machinery and repairs are caught in the credit crisis, too, and are demanding cash from many of their farm customers before they will deliver the production inputs," Nichols said.

"This is an emergency situation that demands a speed-up in federal financial aid. The agricultural stabilization and conservation service (ASCS), with well staffed offices in every county and trained to administer the farm program, is the logical agency and the program to use to speed-up the already budgeted financial aids," Nichols wrote to Block.

He also pointed out that advancing half of the 1984 deficiency payments and price support loans could spur increased farm sign-up in this year's wheat and feed grain acreage reduction program. The initial sign-up was so disappointing that the deadline was extended three weeks, through March 16. Nichols suggested that Block also consider extending the 1984 sign-up deadline through March 31. Nichols said he has contacted Minnesota's senators and congressmen and the members of the House and Senate agriculture committees in Washington asking for the release of this money.

A new film designed to improve the labor relations skills necessary to resolve employee grievances has been produced by the U.S. Department of Labor. "Grievance Handling," is designed to educate an inexperienced audience with the techniques of handling employee grievances in the context of a collective bargaining agreement.

YOU'RE DIFFERENT

There is no one in the world who has a fingerprint exactly like yours. Nor does anyone else have the same texture of hair — identical personality or even the same problems that you have.

One thing is certain, though. We all have problems. They may differ from person to person, but they all require the same two things — the courage to face them and the strength to solve them.

Where then can we, among millions of different people, find the problem-solving courage and strength to ease our course through life? For centuries people have been going to the Church. It welcomes young and old, rich and poor, people from all walks of life and all races.

Different? But you may find, along with your fellowman, just the ingredient to face life unafraid — in your church or synagogue next week.

Let's Ask the Experts!

Women as a group would pay more for insurance were sex to be eliminated as one of the variables that affect insurance pricing.

Two bills now before Congress potentially affect every man and woman who has insurance of any kind. Under consideration is the removal of sex as a rating variable in the pricing of insurance. Such a move could affect the price you pay for insurance coverage.

Although the individual cost impact on both men and women could vary widely were this legislation to be enacted, women as a group would face the largest increases, according to the American Academy of Actuaries in its study for Congress on the effects of eliminating gender in determining premiums. For life and automobile insurance, women would pay more, men less. For annuities and disability insurance, men would pay more, women less.

Academy Executive Director Stephen G. Kellison says that the bills would most affect individual purchasers of insurance, rather than employees covered by group insurance plans.

If unisex insurance pricing is mandated by Congress, it is likely that the law will have some indirect, ripple effects as well. One of these could be an increased risk that the actual distribution by sex of the insured population would be different from the distribution assumed in the pricing formula.

The American Academy of Actuaries is a professional organization representing about 80% of the nation's actuarial workforce. It remains neutral on the issue of removal of gender pricing, but maintains that gender is a statistically valid risk classification variable. It enables actuaries to price insurance coverages and determine pension benefits on the basis of cost, taking into account strong statistical evidence of differences in male and female experience.

Forest Industries Fact Sheet

While there may always be those people who lament the cutting of any tree, we believe the national forest industry is a responsible and cooperative business. It deals with a renewable product where reasonable harvesting is a multiple advantage in several areas.

Days of irresponsible timber barons are long gone. Forestry now is a delicate science, and those involved in it for profit are well aware of the necessity for sustained yield. That means care of the productivity of the land and the replacement planting of trees harvested.

Unlike the removal of minerals by mining or the pumping of petroleum, harvesting of timber utilizes a renewable resource. Not to use mature timber when it is available and man has a need for it is a waste. We have frequently voiced this opinion regarding the cutting of mature aspen for firewood. Not only is the regrowth rapid but the young shoots and saplings are sought after for food and cover for wildlife of many species.

Minnesota Timber Producers association points out that "the forest industry believes the best way to use the state's forests is to combine recreational and commercial interests. The industry coordinates management of the land so that it can be profitably harvested and at the same time serve as a great outdoor recreational asset."

The industry has generally been exceptionally good about allowing its private holdings to be used for recreational pursuits. Sportsmen, hikers, picnickers, bird-watchers, stream fishermen and others have benefitted from this public-spirited attitude.

And the entire state and nation benefits from the practice of forestry which has an annual contribution to the Minnesota economy or more than two billion dollars.

The industry employs nearly 50,000 people including foresters, loggers, specialty paper producers, electricians, skilled tradesmen and furniture makers. It invests millions of dollars to create and secure jobs and manufacture products more efficiently and plants millions of seedlings and ensures natural regeneration of harvested timberland. Millions of tons of used paper are recycled by the industry and wood wastes are recycled to provide energy for the manufacturing process or for public or private heating.

An average of 3,690,600 cords of wood is harvested in the state each year with fuelwood being the largest amount at 1,520,000 cords. Pulpwood is second at 1,484,000 cords, followed by lumber, logs and bolts at 515,800 cords and specialty wood products at 100,100 crods.

Pulp and paper value is listed at $674,256,000 with various waferboard and hardboard products at $120,277,000. Fuelwood value is placed at $61,060,000, and lumber, logs and bolts at $38,067,000. We like the forest industry; it's a good citizen for Minnesota.

Compulsory Conservation

Following editorial is from the Fergus Falls Daily Journal:

Winter winds that carry a mixture of snow and dirt are one sign of erosion, a problem that is stirring more persuasive action by government. Several ideas will be debated before Congress considers the 1985 farm bill.

The Soil Conservation Service has been around for a long time and many farmers have adopted sound conservation practices to save their precious topsoil. But any observer can see that program is not as effective as it might be. In addition to dirt storms, heavy rains leave gullies in sloping fields and knolls often have lost their topsoil.

Continuing efforts will be made to get more farmers involved in conservation voluntarily, but more regulation at the nation or local level is a strong possibility. The Farm Journal for March has outlined several ideas and some of them are in practice at various places.

A county in Colorado has an ordinance requiring permission from soil and water district commissioners before plowing up grassland, and violators are subject to fines. Farmers in three townships of Pepin County in Wisconsin get a tax break if they meet SCS standards for erosion control.

In some areas, farmers are paid part of the planting costs for trees or grassland on land subject to erosion. It may still be counted as part of their cropland acreage. A bill that has passed the Senate would make crops grown on land that the SCS considers highly subject to erosion ineligible for price supports and other government programs.

Senate hearings have indicated that it's the feeling that farmers should be required to conserve soil if they benefit from a government program. However, mandatory conservation is expected to be a last resort.

At the same time it's noted that a farmer who has done the best job of conservation may have been penalized. Land kept on grass or woodland did not count as part of his crop acreage base.

It's to be hoped that new ideas will be found to encourage voluntary conservation. And if there is some form of regulation it should be from the local level.

Lower The Smokestacks

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

Acid rain legislation was approved by the Senate Environment committee last week and inserted in a comprehensive bill to amend the federal clean air act. Screams and gnashing of teeth from Congressmen in states creating the air pollution indicate a spectacular battle is imminent. Essentially, the legislation to clean the air is being pushed by Senators from states such as Minnesota, Main, New York, Wisconsin and New Hampshire which are recipients of the unwanted poison from the skies. It is being opposed by Senators from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and other states where the huge coal-fired furnaces are spewing out the fumes. . . or which mine the coal with a high sulfur content which escapes into the air as sulfur dioxide and turns into air-borne sulfuric acid.

The Reagan administration's EPA heads, ignoring the data compiled by their men in the field, say more research is needed before any cleanup is attempted. There are a lot of people in the administration and in the power industry who simply do not believe that acid rain is a problem. . . or if it is, the power industry is causing it. Their argument is that the cost of cleaning the smoke would be more expensive than the benefits, if any. And they have a valid argument in that costs would be high and there are some scientists who are not sure the coal furnaces are that big a problem.

The Congress, then, should allow a choice for those industries which do not believe there is a real problem. The choice would be to shorten their smokestacks. Years ago, when air pollution became identified as a major health problem in many areas, industries were told to clean up. But, they came up with the neat idea of raising the smoke stacks hundreds of feet into the air. . . which got the pollution out of the immediate area and moved it elsewhere, much like cities used to dump their sewage in the nearest river and let the people downstream worry about it.

The Congress could solve a lot of debate, cost and time lost by simply providing a choice: either cleanup or lower the stacks, to, say, 100 feet, so the material coming out of the stacks stays in the area where it is generated. If it is no problem, like the critics say, then there would be no problem keeping it home.

On the other hand, if the local citizens begin to die off prematurely due to acute respiratory problems, as they did before the stacks were raised, the problem would no longer rest in Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York, New Hampshire, etc. It would be one which Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, et al, would be glad to deal with.

It isn't so much a matter of where it goes up, as where it comes down.

Forest Industries Fact Sheet

While there may always be those people who lament the cutting of any tree, we believe the national forest industry is a responsible and cooperative business. It deals with a renewable product where reasonable harvesting is a multiple advantage in several areas.

Days of irresponsible timber barons are long gone. Forestry now is a delicate science, and those involved in it for profit are well aware of the necessity for sustained yield. That means care of the productivity of the land and the replacement planting of trees harvested.

Unlike the removal of minerals by mining or the pumping of petroleum, harvesting of timber utilizes a renewable resource. Not to use mature timber when it is available and man has a need for it is a waste. We have frequently voiced this opinion regarding the cutting of mature aspen for firewood. Not only is the regrowth rapid but the young shoots and saplings are sought after for food and cover for wildlife of many species.

Minnesota Timber Producers association points out that "the forest industry believes the best way to use the state's forests is to combine recreational and commercial interests. The industry coordinates management of the land so that it can be profitably harvested and at the same time serve as a great outdoor recreational asset."

The industry has generally been exceptionally good about allowing its private holdings to be used for recreational pursuits. Sportsmen, hikers, picnickers, bird-watchers, stream-fishermen and others have benefitted from this public-spirited attitude.

And the entire state and nation benefits from the practice of forestry which has an annual contribution to the Minnesota economy or more than two billion dollars.

The industry employs nearly 50,000 people including foresters, loggers, specialty paper producers, electricians, skilled tradesmen and furniture makers. It invests millions of dollars to create and secure jobs and manufacture products more efficiently and plants millions of seedlings and ensures natural regeneration of harvested timberland. Millions of tons of used paper are recycled by the industry and wood wastes are recycled to provide energy for the manufacturing process or for public or private heating.

An average of 3,690,600 cords of wood is harvested in the state each year with fuelwood being the largest amount at 1,520,000 cords. Pulpwood is second at 1,484,000 cords, followed by lumber, logs and bolts at 515,800 cords and specialty wood products at 100,100 crods.

Pulp and paper value is listed at $674,256,000 with various waferboard and hardboard products at $120,277,000. Fuelwood value is placed at $61,060,000, and lumber, logs and bolts at $38,067,000. We like the forest industry; it's a good citizen for Minnesota.

Compulsory Conservation

Following editorial is from the Fergus Falls Daily Journal:

Winter winds that carry a mixture of snow and dirt are one sign of erosion, a problem that is stirring more persuasive action by government. Several ideas will be debated before Congress considers the 1985 farm bill.

The Soil Conservation Service has been around for a long time and many farmers have adopted sound conservation practices to save their precious topsoil. But any observer can see that program is not as effective as it might be. In addition to dirt storms, heavy rains leave gullies in sloping fields and knolls often have lost their topsoil.

Continuing efforts will be made to get more farmers involved in conservation voluntarily, but more regulation at the nation or local level is a strong possibility. The Farm Journal for March has outlined several ideas and some of them are in practice at various places.

A county in Colorado has an ordinance requiring permission from soil and water district commissioners before plowing up grassland, and violators are subject to fines. Farmers in three townships of Pepin County in Wisconsin get a tax break if they meet SCS standards for erosion control.

In some areas, farmers are paid part of the planting costs for trees or grassland on land subject to erosion. It may still be counted as part of their cropland acreage. A bill that has passed the Senate would make crops grown on land that the SCS considers highly subject to erosion ineligible for price supports and other government programs.

Senate hearings have indicated that it's the feeling that farmers should be required to conserve soil if they benefit from a government program. However, mandatory conservation is expected to be a last resort.

At the same time it's noted that a farmer who has done the best job of conservation may have been penalized. Land kept on grass or woodland did not count as part of his crop acreage base.

It's to be hoped that new ideas will be found to encourage voluntary conservation. And if there is some form of regulation it should be from the local level.

Lower The Smokestacks

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

Acid rain legislation was approved by the Senate Environment committee last week and inserted in a comprehensive bill to amend the federal clean air act. Screams and gnashing of teeth from Congressmen in states creating the air pollution indicate a spectacular battle is imminent. Essentially, the legislation to clean the air is being pushed by Senators from states such as Minnesota, Main, New York, Wisconsin and New Hampshire which are recipients of the unwanted poison from the skies. It is being opposed by Senators from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and other states where the huge coal-fired furnaces are spewing out the fumes. . . or which mine the coal with a high sulfur content which escapes into the air as sulfur dioxide and turns into air-borne sulfuric acid.

The Reagan administration's EPA heads, ignoring the data compiled by their men in the field, say more research is needed before any cleanup is attempted. There are a lot of people in the administration and in the power industry who simply do not believe that acid rain is a problem. . . or if it is, the power industry is causing it. Their argument is that the cost of cleaning the smoke would be more expensive than the benefits, if any. And they have a valid argument in that costs would be high and there are some scientists who are not sure the coal furnaces are that big a problem.

The Congress, then, should allow a choice for those industries which do not believe there is a real problem. The choice would be to shorten their smokestacks. Years ago, when air pollution became identified as a major health problem in many areas, industries were told to clean up. But, they came up with the neat idea of raising the smoke stacks hundreds of feet into the air. . . which got the pollution out of the immediate area and moved it elsewhere, much like cities used to dump their sewage in the nearest river and let the people downstream worry about it.

The Congress could solve a lot of debate, cost and time lost by simply providing a choice: either cleanup or lower the stacks, to, say, 100 feet, so the material coming out of the stacks stays in the area where it is generated. If it is no problem, like the critics say, then there would be no problem keeping it home.

On the other hand, if the local citizens begin to die off prematurely due to acute respiratory problems, as they did before the stacks were raised, the problem would no longer rest in Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York, New Hampshire, etc. It would be one which Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, et al, would be glad to deal with.

It isn't so much a matter of where it goes up, as where it comes down.

Tips On Successfully Combining Motherhood/Career

If you want to succeed at combining motherhood and a business career, perhaps this story of a California executive who's done just that may inspire you.

Marjorie Wang is executive vice president of a highly-successful computer software company, Cambridge Systems Group.

The most successful product Cambridge markets is ACF2, the best-selling security software system developed by SKK, Inc., of Rosemont, IL. It helps prevent computer enthusiasts such as the young "414s" from Milwaukee from illegally entering and tampering with data on IBM mainframe computers.

"Any mainframe computer owner who wants to be 'one up' on the '414s' and their kind can reach us by calling 415-directory assistance," says Marjorie Wang. The Cambridge employees who market the security system have dubbed themselves the "415s".

Marjorie had no work experience when she joined Cambridge Systems Group after her husband Shawn McLaren founded the company in the early 1970s. Her two older children were in school and she convinced Shawn that she could easily handle the secretary's job.

Marjorie's philosophy is to "give my all to anything I do". Work at Cambridge sometimes stretched from 6 AM to 2 AM... the hours that small businesses often demand.

Although she acknowledges the advantages of being the boss's wife, she says she had to work extra hard to earn his faith in her. Bit-by-bit, she took on added responsibility. As the company hired more personnel her duties evolved into upper management. In the last three years, she set up Cambridge's European branches.

Young Brittany Shannon McLaren is an accepted member of the staff at the California computer software firm where her mother is executive vice president.

Eleven years after the birth of her last child, Marjorie unexpectedly found herself pregnant again.

Since she believed strongly that keeping a baby close to its mother is the best basis for future mental health, Marjorie decided to bring newborn Brittany to work with her. If that hadn't been possible, she says she would have worked out of her home most of the time.

How does Marjorie sum up the road to success? She says bluntly: "From experience, I learned that many women cause their own problems. They don't understand what business is about, hence have unrealistic expectations. They want the benefits of success but don't seem willing to work hard or accept increased responsibility to achieve it.

"If you want to progress, then it's up to you to play the game, learn your job well, then work like hell to succeed. In the computer industry gender and college degrees aren't as important as intelligence, ambition, drive, hard work and willingness to learn and grow."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Harvard University is half of the answer.

The question, is, "Where is this guy, Martin Feldstein, coming from?"

The second half of the answer is still up in the air. Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, is recommending tax increases totaling some $50 billion in 1985.

President Reagan has wisely decided against such a massive tax hike. This is not surprising. Ronald Reagan campaigned for the presidency in 1980 on a platform of lower, not higher, taxes. He has repeatedly reassured the American people and the economy that the third year of the tax cut and indexing are not on the bargaining table. And the economic recovery he presides over is directly attributable to the 1981 tax cut. With employment hitting record highs, the gross national product surging ahead, and inflation down in 1983 to a 16-year low of 3.2 per cent, there is no reason the President should turn his back on his successful economic policy of lower taxes and low inflation.

Martin Feldstein's persistent memos urging higher taxes are a riddle. Mr. Feldstein made much of his reputation as an economist pointing out that high taxes preempt savings and investment and thereby reduce economic growth. The success of the Reagan tax cuts in stimulating investment and growth is a vindication of Mr. Feldstein's academic work at Harvard University.

Yet, we are now treated to the spectacle of Mr. Feldstein beating the drums for higher taxes on the working men and women of America. Why? Mr. Feldstein points to his forecasts of deficits above $150 billion for the next four years and pronounces tax increases the only remedy. What about spending reductions? Well, in Washington's theater of the absurd, we have David Stockman enter stage left. A born-again tax enthusiast, the once fearsome budget cutter Stockman announced in an interview with Fortune magazine that while "some still think there are vast pockets of fraud, waste and abuse out there, in fact, nearly every stone has been turned over."

There is an old joke about a group stranded on a desert island with nothing except thousands of cans of food. The castaways fear starvation until the economist in the group pronounces the problem solved. "First," he explains, "we assume a can opener." The duet of Feldstein and Stockman has turned this story on its head. They simply assume no can opener. They assume away all solutions except more taxes.

Feldstein assumes that lower taxes will not bring economic growth rapidly enough to lower the deficit, and Stockman assumes that the budget cannot be reduced further. Both assumptions are wrong, and projections about the future are like computer programs: garbage in, garbage out. Plug in bad assumptions and you get bad projections.

In economic forecasting, Martin Feldstein has much to be modest about. He predicted that real economic growth in 1983 would be 1.4 per cent. Instead, growth in 1983 weighed in at a hefty 3.3 per cent. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce more accurately predicted 3.2 per cent growth by incorporating — rather than ignoring — the supply-side stimulus of lower taxes. Forecasts that understate economic growth result in bloated predictions of future deficits. Indeed, underestimating real economic growth by one per cent will, over a five-year period, overstate deficit spending by $200 billion.

As for David Stockman's odd assertion that the federal budget is beyond trimming, I recommend that he take a weekend to read the Grace Commission report, which found more than $424 billion in possible spending reductions over the next three-year period.

A combination of economic growth and spending restraint can and will bring down the deficits. Both Martin Feldstein and David Stockman ill-serve the President and the nation by calling for higher taxes.

Teacher Contract Settled With Board Ratification

Agreement on a two-year contract which will provide total increase in salary and fringe benefits of 6.2 per cent for 1983-84 and another 6.0 per cent for 1984-85 has been ratified by School District 564 and its teacher association. The increase is projected to cost the district an additional $293,341 in 1983-84 and $301,927 more in 1984-85.

Ratification of the agreement was given by members of the Thief River Falls Education association Wednesday afternoon with 62 per cent voting in favor of accepting the agreement, according to James Cuppett, welding instructor at the AVTI who serves as president of the association and co-chairman of the negotiating committee with Edith Etter, an elementary teacher.

The board of education ratified the agreement this morning at a special meeting called for that purpose, and to act on discontinuance of positions for 1984-85, termination of probationary teachers and proposal to place tenured teachers on unrequested leave. Vote among the board members this morning was five to two with board members Myrle Carlson, Greg Pribula, Arnt Aune, Paul Bortnem and Archie Cameron voting in favor and chairman Harry Sjulson and Hank Hallstrom opposed.

Based on a full-time equivalency of 196.74 teachers in the School District 564 system, the total contract would provide an average increase in all areas of $1,491 per teacher in 1983-84 and $1,534 per teacher in 1984-85 or a two-year total of $3,025. This would raise the average salary and benefits total from $24,066 in 1982-83 to $25,577 in 1983-84 and $27,111 in 1984-85.

(The full-time equivalency

Braun Urges Transfer Of Excise Tax To Fund Roads

In an address on the state of the Minnesota transportation system given Thursday in Thief River Falls, Richard Braun, commissioner of the Minnesota department of transportation, urged accelerating a gradual transfer of the motor vehicle excise tax from the general fund into the highway construction fund as a method of solving many of the problems presently faced by the system.

About 60 people attended the noon luncheon meeting at Lon's restaurant, which was arranged by the legislative-transportation committee of the chamber of commerce.

Braun said that the transfer, which is scheduled to start in July of 1985, would enhance much needed major reconstruction projects if it could be moved up to sometime in this biennium, but allowed that there was "no free lunch," and with other programs having to suffer as a result.

Transfer was originally mandated by the 1979 legislature to start in July of 1983, but it was delayed to 1985 because of the state's budget problems in the early 1980s. Gradual transfer of the excise tax from the general fund to the highway construction fund was to have been made over a period of eight years, at a rate of 25 per cent per biennium. Braun described the excise tax as a sales tax on the transfer of titles for new and used cars and trucks.

Noting that the transfer was a high priority item for Governor Perpich, as reported in his state of the state address in February, Braun noted that it had slipped somewhat in importance, coming behind the repeal of the individual income surtax and a boost in the state's budget reserve cushion from $250 million to $375 million. Braun is hoping there will be enough surplus when the revenue projections are made in April to move up the excise transfer to this biennium.

Moving up the transfer will cost other state projects $4.5 million for each month the transfer is accelerated from its startup date of July 1, 1985, he noted. The transfer would split total construction funding with 46 per cent to the state, 25 per cent to mass transit, 22 per cent to counties and seven per cent to cities with populations of more than 5,000. However, he noted that the motor vehicle excise tax currently generates only 3.7 per cent of the total general revenue fund.

Having that money available for state, county, city and township roads and bridges might enable those units of government to hold the line on property taxes and AGRICULTURE COMMISSIONER Jim Nichols makes a point during the agriculture forum conducted Thursday noon at the American Legion club rooms. The event was sponsored by radio station KTRF and included a dinner, followed by Commissioner Nichols' talk and a panel comprised of Nichols, county extension directors from Pennington, Marshall and Red Lake counties and Willard Brunelle, chairman of the Northwest Minnesota emergency action committee.

Fog Prevents Shuman From Attending Meeting

Fog which failed to permit a plane carrying Farmers Home administration administrator Charles Shuman to land in Thief River Falls Saturday morning also left a number of people who came here to hear him up in the air. Frustration, anger, resentment and a feeling of being rejected added to the ugly mood of the several hundred people gathering in the Northland community college gymnasium.

Efforts of Northwest Emergency action committee chairman Willard Brunelle, college officials and radio station KTRF to establish a telephone and radio dialogue from Thief River Falls to the Grand Forks, ND, airport, were met with shouts of dissatisfaction from the crowd. The plane carrying Shuman, Congressman Arlan Stangeland and Sen. Rudy Boschwitz' side Dan Pearson, was able to land at the Grand Forks airport.

Because of a commitment to connect with a commercial airline flight in the Twin Cities at 2:30 p.m., the Washington delegation chose not to drive to Thief River Falls to meet with the people gathered here. That decision further angered the audience, a number of whom said they had begun their trip to Thief River Falls as early as 3 a.m. They believed Shuman was putting his personal pleasure ahead of their difficulties.

In a brief radio-telephone exchange, Shuman expressed his apologies for being unable to land at the Thief River Falls airport and be at the gymnasium in person. He said he appreciated the effort of everyone attending in getting together and invited questions by phone.

Several questions were asked by telephone from an office in the college, but Brunelle cut the exchange short when it appeared the situation may get out of hand. He said farmers were getting angry about Shuman not making the effort to drive to Thief River Falls and meet with them.

Brunelle told the Times this morning that an attempt is being made to reschedule an appearance by Shuman here. He has made calls to Shuman's office, the state FmHA office and Congressman Stangeland's office and is awaiting return calls, he said.

He also noted that arrangements for the Saturday meeting had been made by the Washington officials and that his purpose was only to testify at the meeting. When the Washington group failed to arrive, however, he assumed the responsibility for attempting to get an informational session underway with available FmHA officials.

Introduced at the meeting in the absence of Shuman were Maurice McLinn, FmHA expediter who has spent the past several weeks in the area working with FmHA loan offices; Jerry Carlson, newly appointed acting director for District 2; "Butch" Koehmstedt, supervisor of the Pennington county FmHA office; and several members of the emergency committee's watchdog committee.

McLinn told the crowd that in the past 30 days there had been 541 loans made for a total of $24,053,530. There are 226 emergency loan applications remaining to be processed at Thief River Falls, McIntosh and Warren with the expectation that the Crookston office would be current in processing by the end of this week. Some of the extra task force members are being reassigned to the three offices

Findings In Drug And Alcohol Use Noted By WCTU

Effects of the use of marijuana and alcohol on the body were studied at the March meeting of the Alice Mae Stuart Thief River Falls woman's Christian Temperance union held at the social room at the Riverside Terrace apartments.

In a study made by Dr. Hardin B. Jones, professor of medical physics and physiology at Donner laboratory at the University of California, at Berkeley, marijuana is 100 times more damaging than alcohol or tobacco as it can destroy a person in a few years. THC, the active ingredient in marijuana, is unique in that it accumulates in the body. It does not kill the cells, but by poisoning interferes with their function. "After awhile you just sit," said Dr. Jones.

Studies showed that the average marijuana user exhibits a wide range of brain changes. A self-activating and interested person becomes withdrawn and given to disoriented thinking. The ability to concentrate is reduced, social responses are impaired and the users are likely to have a tendency toward paranoia or schizophrenia, or both. Other changes included less precise eye focus and an inverted sleeping pattern, making the user a night person.

Dr. Jones concluded the report by saying, "We believe that we will begin to see a tremendous rash of lung cancer in 10 to 15 years because of the use of marijuana." He based the findings on bronchial biopsies taken from 30 American soldiers in Germany who smoked 25 to 30 grams of hashish (from the same plant but richer in THC than marijuana) a month for a few months. The biopsies showed that 24 of the users had precancerous lesions.

An article, "How Alcohol Affects the Brain," was also read and discussed. It was noted that the first effect of the use of alcohol is felt by the brain. Alcohol muddles thinking, weakens, judgment, loosens control over actions, and causes small brain hemorrhages with irreplaceable loss of brain cells. It was also noted that a study showed that alcohol effects the nervous system, with delirium tremens or "D.T.'s," as the greatest horror. A doctor who had made a lifelong study of alcoholic patients noted that many men who had never been intoxicated but for years had steadily taken alcohol, had after some shock incident developed delirium tremens.

The meeting began with devotions based on Jeremiah 29: 12-14. It was noted that people try to find God in different ways. Although the savage tries to find God by inflicting punishment upon himself, the pagen by bowing down before idols, and the civilized man by forms and rituals, the Bible points to only one way and that is by repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The program also included two hymns, "This is My Father's World," and "Give to the Winds a Mighty Voice."

The next meeting of the local union will be held April 13. The District meeting is scheduled for April 14 at Wannaska, Youth Temperance Education week will be observed April 22-28, and Youth Temperance camp will be held June 11-17.

Lioness Club, Goodridge, Hears Darla Twomey

Darla Twomey, director of Northland Community Hospice program, was guest speaker at the March meeting of the Goodridge Lioness club.

Mrs. Twomey stated that the Hospice program offers comfort, friendship and support to the dying. She said that through the use of trained volunteers, many of the terminally ill are able to stay in their homes until death.

During the business session, members voted to donate $25 to the Hospice program. Other donations made were $25 to Steve Kiesow for Special Olympics, and $100 to the Goodridge school playground fund.

Numerous reports were given. Tony Bryle, narrator of the project planning committee, reported on the Valentine party given at the Senior Citizen center for the senior citizens of the area. Serving on the committee with Mrs. Bryle were Elaine Wiseth, Myrtle Sunsdahl, Marlys Drangstveit, Marilyn Olson and Trudy Hyland.

Information was also given on the second shopping spree sponsored by the Goodridge Lioness club. Winning the event was Mrs. George Panek, who selected $209.24 worth of groceries at the Goodridge Hartz store in an allotted period of time.

It was noted that a large number of Lions and Lionesses had attended the St. Patrick's Day whist party. The event was coordinated by members of the social committee: Julie Kiesow, Gail Wilkens, Lorine Aandal, Sandy Hendrickson and Nancy Troska. The proceeds went to augment the activity fund.

It was also reported that six members had visited the Thief River Falls Evening Lioness meeting to recapture the lion mascot which had disappeared after several of Evening club members had visited the Goodridge club meeting. Those visiting the Thief River Falls club meeting were Elaine Wiseth, Marilyn Olson, Marie Wiseth, Marlys Drangstveit, Tony Bryle and Ethel Wiseth.

In the report given on the February meeting, it was noted that Lavonne Forsberg had attended the meeting and given a demonstration on country arts. Recipient of the floral arrangement created by Mrs. Forsberg was Sharon Wayne.

In place of the special guest speaker, Jean Hilliard Vig of Fosston, who was unable to be present, Janice Kiesow read an article about Jean published in the February issue of "Guide Post." The article was regarding the ordeal when Jean, while single, was found frozen solid and how the medical staff aided in her complete recovery.

Visitors at the meeting, which began with a supper, were Pat Anderson, Arlene Moser and Virginia Bjerken.

Strange Plants Are Studied By Campanula Club

In keeping with the approaching Easter season, the horticulture of Thorns and the Crown of Thorns was read at the March meeting of the Campanula garden club held at the Edythe Franson home.

Marie Fischer presented the main topic, "Strange and Wonderous Plants." It was noted that in the days when voyages were slow, adventurers and traders, mariners and travelers returning from far away places brought back tales about real and imaginary plants with fantastic shapes, strange behavior and magical powers. The religious legends and symbolic meanings attached to many plants were handed down and are still valid today. Some of the trees and plants on which information was given were the Apple of Sodom, Honesty, the Ice Plant, Maidenhair Fern and the Tree of Sorrow.

President Ruth Holmes presided at the meeting and led the members in reading the March poem by Flora Hagglund Mercil of this city. The nature's calendar was given by each member.

During the business session, members decided to postpone the showing of the program booklets until the club's 36th anniversary luncheon set for April 11 at Lon's.

Grain Block Meeting Set Here Thursday

The meeting is to continue building the massive grain block farmers started on February 23, when an unprecedented nationwide grain series was held, consisting of 90 meetings in 14 states, all tied together by telecommunications.

Rodger Schlottach, director of the National Farmers organization grain department, announced the 400 meetings and said that since the first meeting was held in Illinois, farmers have put together millions of bushels of wheat, corn and soybeans. "It has grown from one meeting to 20 a day to 90 a day and now 400 plus, and we urge every grain producer to come and participate in the block," Schlottach said.

"These are not just meetings to talk about the problem", Kotrba said. They are being held to offer a solution by building onto the existing mammoth grain block. Nor is this a farm organization program; it is a farmer program of all grain producers".

The prices established by the grain producers for their block are $10 per bushel for soybeans, basis Gulf; $4.50 for corn, basis Gulf; $5, for wheat, basis Minneapolis; $5.50 for durum, basis Minneapolis; $2.35 for oats, basis Minneapolis; $3.20 for feed barley, basis Minneapolis; and $5.25 for hard red winter wheat, basis Gulf.

On Thursday one of over 400 gulf grain block meetings will, be held in Thief River Falls beginning at 8 p.m. in the city auditorium, according to Ron Kotrba of Goodridge, county representative.

Week Of Young Child To Be Noted Apr. 1-7

In the national observance of the Week of the Young Child April 1-7, this year's theme is "Children: Our Investment in the Future."

During that week, members of the Northwest chapter of the Minnesota Association for the Education of Young Children are joining in an effort to provide the public with information about the quality services for children in individual communities and to enlist active support in efforts designed to improve the status of children.

Members will be involved in children's fairs, parent's day, grandparent's day, distribution of posters and balloons, and many other child-involved activities, according to LuAnn M. Giles of Thief River Falls, publicity secretary.

Braun Urges Transfer Of Tax To Roads

road levies, he noted.

"The difference between not starting this biennium and waiting until 1985 means $280 million in trunk highway funds alone through the eight-year program," said Braun. "It means $100 million to counties." This could mean a significant delay in half of the requested projects through 1989.

Braun referred to the excise tax as the "third leg" of the funding program, noting that the gas tax revenues actually decreased due to energy conservation, while registration fees could not be raised fast enough to keep up with inflation.

Noting that the present funding level was based on a 104 year reconstruction cycle for most Minnesota highways, he called that a "ridiculously long time," adding that 50 years was a more realistic life expectancy.

Responding to questions, Braun noted that prospects for state assistance for rail improvements were not presently high on the governor's list of priority items. Noting that 2,000 miles of track were vulnerable to abandonment, he said that $10 million could be available from the state. An estimate was given that $13 million would be required to rebuild the line between Red Lake Falls and Warroad. Braun said it would require a three-party agreement between the shippers, the railroad and the state to accomplish such a project, proposing that bonding authority could be granted to raise funds.

Other topics addressed included a proposal currently being studied which would allow an increase of 40 feet for multiple trailer combinations to operating on interstate highways, with Braun emphasizing that his position was that it should require legislative action rather than allowing individual permits to be issued.

Asked about the proposal for redistricting the transportation department, he said that the one thing he had learned most was that the communities involved valued their constituent services, so that intense lobbying efforts had temporarily put it on the back burner.

Following the address, Braun held individual meetings with various lobby groups, including the Northwest Minnesota Rail Shippers Corporation, to discuss the potential abandonment of the Red Lake Falls to Warroad line by Burlington Northern railroad; Red River Valley Potato Growers to discuss route priorities; American Crystal Sugar Company to discuss their routes; and the Northwest Regional Development Commission to discuss a variety of issues.

Fog Prevents Shuman Plane From Landing

mentioned to assist with loan processing there.

McLinn said he expects to be leaving this area soon, having completed the task he was assigned to do. He will be spending some time in other districts of the state, he said, but not in the same extent as his work here.

Several people from outside this immediate area — including Mahnomen county, Becker county and southern Minnesota as well as North Dakota — expressed their difficulties with FmHA borrowing and weather-related farm problems.

A North Dakota farmer related his situation in going out of farming while heavily in debt to FmHA, stating that if the people attending thought farming was tough, they should try to get out of it. He said he could have filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy, ". . . but I am an honorable man and want all my bills to be paid".

He said he had farmed for 26 years, had 640 acres of land and was first hit by the summer flood of 1975 which left him with no winter feed for 140 head of cattle. He took out a $59,000 FmHA loan at five per cent interest for 40 years which he said didn't begin to cover his $100,000 loss.

Because of weather-related difficulties, he said, he went back to FmHA four more times for loans and termed his final relationship with the agency as "a living hell". After "being preached at for two hours" in a meeting with county, district and state personnel about what he was doing wrong, he said he tried to explain that he "wasn't God or a miracle worker" and couldn't control the weather.

He went on to explain how his decision to quit farming in the summer of 1983 led to financial hardships being increased because of the insistence of his creditors that sales income go to debt retirement. This left virtually no money for family living expense.

With no possibility that Washington officials would attend the session, the microphone was made available to anyone who wanted to make comments or ask questions. Many of those attending chose to leave shortly before noon, voicing continuing dissatisfaction with cancelation of Shuman's appearance.

Actual salary schedule at the BS degree level increases from $14,358 on the first year level in 1982-83 to $15,006 in 1983-84 and $15,670 in 1984-85. At the BS plus 60 credit level, the increase is from $16,153 to $16,828 and $17,629 over the two years at the first step level. At the 16th year of experience and beyond, the BS plus 60 credits maximum of $25,240 in 1982-83 increases to $26,291 in 1983-84 and $27,547 in 1984-85. School District 564 has nearly a third of its teachers at the maximum experience level in the four lanes from BS plus 15 to BS plus 60 credits.

Much of the 1983-84 and 1984-85 contract settlement didn't go into the salary schedule, however. Extra-curricular salaries increased by five per cent each year.

Hospitalization insurance subsidy was increased from $105 per month to $135 per month for the first year of the contract and to $150 per month for the second year. Hourly pay for curriculum work, lead teacher assignments and other hourly work was increased from $10.75 to $12 per hour for both years. Mileage paid remains at 24 cents per mile in 1983-84 and increases to 25 cents in 1984-85. No change was made in summer school salaries or assistant to the principal.

A number of items in contract language and composition were also provided for in the contract agreement. A child care leave section was added, providing for up to 12 months of leave without pay or fringe benefits for child care. Severance pay provision was changed to provide for a five-year limit instead of two-year limit to comply with state law.

Pay period language and system was simplified to facilitate accounting with teachers permitted to elect to be paid in either 19 or 24 equal installments. Leaves of absence were defined for specific purposes and long term substitutes will be granted full salary and full fringe benefits if they teach full-time for periods of 85 days or more during the school term. Teachers who are actively employed by the district for 60 per cent or more of the full time equivalency contract will earn one increment on the salary schedule for each school year.

TRFEA president Cuppett said that the tentative agreement between the school board and negotiating committee was explained to the faculty meeting by Mrs. Etter prior to the vote. The tentative agreement had been reached in a session with a state mediator on March 15.

REFLECTI NS

The men who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing . . . and, succeed. Any fool can do nothing but what a pitiful creature he is, never savoring the sweet taste of success . . . or, if not success the strong sense of dignity and personal pride you receive from trying. It is better to wear out than to "rust out."

You may not change the world but you can change your small part in it.

Pay Attention To Tax Law Changes

When you prepare your 1983 federal income tax return, you may notice some changes. Although there are fewer new rules to contend with than last year, these rule changes can be confusing and easily overlooked.

Last year, those changes meant headaches to taxpayers and the IRS. Two million married couples neglected to take a hefty new deduction for two-earner couples, according to the IRS, and another 377,000 botched the new child and dependent care credit formula. To avoid losing out on tax savings and to keep out of trouble with the IRS, the Minnesota society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs) urges you to take a closer look at what's new on yout 1983 income tax return.

The deduction for married couples, when both spouses work, is twice what it was last year. A two-earner couple should subtract 10 per cent (up to $3,000) from the earned income of the lower-paid spouse. Take this deduction in part III of form 1040A, or on line 29 of form 1040.

Medical expense deductions will be calculated against a stiff new formula this year. Deduct only those medical and dental expenses that exceed five per cent of your adjusted gross income. That means an individual with a $15,000 adjusted gross income can deduct medical expenses only if they total more than $750.

Besides that, the separate deduction for half of your health insurance premiums (up to $150) has been eliminated. But you may include the cost of medical insurance premiums with other medical and dental expenses.

The casualty and theft loss deduction, which works like the medical deduction, also changes on 1983 tax returns. Now you can deduct only unreimbursed casualty and theft losses that exceed 10 per cent of your income. You must also reduce each casualty loss by $100. The new casualty and theft loss rules severely limit the size of deductions. For instance, someone with a $15,000 adjusted gross income whose basement is flooded can only deduct unreimbursed losses above $1,600.

Another change in IRS procedure concerns the reporting of state and local income tax refunds. Refunds received from state and local government have always been taxable, but now, for the first time, local government agencies are sending the federal government statements on the amount of your refund. A copy of that statement, the 1099-G, will also be sent to you. You must add the amount of your 1982 refund to your 1983 taxable income, unless you did not deduct state or local income taxes last year.

Motorists who use their cars for business may now deduct 20½ cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles of business travel. That's a half-cent increase in the standard mileage rate deduction over last year. Other mileage deductions are unchanged. It's 11 cents a mile for business travel over 15,000 miles; nine cents for medical and volunteer travel.

In addition to the changes in rules, the IRS has altered its forms. Form 1040EZ, introduced last year to simplify filing for singles who earn less than $50,000, looks different. The new format allows for optical scanning of the EXs which promises to speed processing of returns while lowering IRS labor costs.

Form 1040A, the traditional short form, has also undergone changes so that more people will be able to use it. You can now use the short form to adjust your income for an IRA contribution by using line 11 of that form. Previously, taxpayers had to use Form 1040, the long form, to report an IRA contribution. In addition, you can now use Part Four of the short form to take a credit for child and dependent care expenses. If you use Form 1040, you can still take the credit by attaching Form 2441.

Paying attention to the changes in filing your income tax return will save you and the IRS trouble and money, and it lessens the chance that you will be audited.

SD 441 Parents Agree College Is Important

(Editor's Note: A summary of survey answers provided by parents in School District 441 (Viking and Newfolden) was published in Wednesday's edition of the Times. The following information also was derived from the survey, according to R. Gene Busch, superintendent of schools.)

Ninety-seven per cent of parents in School District 441 believe a college education today is from "fairly important" to "very important," according to survey results compiled by the school district office.

Eighty-two per cent of the parents also said that work assignments at school and homework required are "about the right amount" for the district's students, Supt. Busch said. "Homework has been a well publicized topic of concern in discussion of schools across the nation."

Length of school year and school day have also been considered in a number of areas of the country. In School District 441 the survey showed 94 per cent of parents are opposed to a 10-month school year and 85 per cent are opposed to extending the school day by one hour. In addition, 63 per cent of the parents are opposed to a four-day week with a longer school day.

Two-thirds of the parents would approve changing the annual school-board-election date from May to the general election date in November, Supt. Busch noted. He also said that stability of population is indicated by the fact that 55 per cent of the families have grandparents living in the school district.

Not surprisingly, students were listed as the main source of information regarding quality of the schools. Other sources listed were personal experience, principal's newsletter, other parents, other adults, faculty, newspaper, school board and other sources, in that order.

"We felt we asked the parents important questions about education in this community through the Marshall county central poll," Supt. Busch said. "They responded by giving the district a 'B' average, which is honor roll status. As educators of the community, we can come to a mutual understanding with parents by using data from the poll. Parents, students and teachers can form a partnership to move from the good rating of 'B' to an excellent ration of 'A' for the students of Marshall county central schools."

IBAM Leader Says Proposal Is Too Small

Governor Rudy Perpich and leaders in the DFL legislative majority better do a good deal more to improve the job climate than they proposed last Wednesday, says John Herman, president of the Independent Business Association of Minnesota (IBAM).

IBAM, a small business organization which expanded rapidly following the Minnesota conference on small business in 1981, considers the DFL proposals "far too little and far too late," according to Herman.

"In their news release, Gov. Perpich and DFL leaders said their proposed $261 million tax cut was a 'dramatic change of direction' and a signal to the private sector that 'we mean business.' I am here to tell him that it is neither of those things."

Herman said Perpich's and the DFL leaders' threat to withhold support from tax cuts if business leaders did not stop criticizing Minnesota's business climate was a "thoroughly unacceptable attempt to blackmail business into giving in to their personal political agenda. It won't work and we won't keep quiet when we are being driven out of business and out of state," he said.

"It is insulting that the governor and DFL leaders should offer tax relief of $261 million when we face a budget surplus that promises to grow to between $800 million and $1 billion," he said. "That will leave between $540 and $740 million for new spending programs whose future costs will result in even heavier tax burdens than those the small business owner now faces."

Herman said that if the governor and DFL legislators "truly want a dramatic change of direction, they ought to target some of the surplus to permanently lowering personal income taxes, worker compensation costs and commercial and industrial property taxes."

"In 1981 hundreds of small business owners at the Minnesota conference on small business recommended immediate cost reduction in workers compensation, unemployment tax and personal and corporate taxes. The conference recommended a reduction of corporate income tax rates from 12 to six per cent for the first $50,000 of income."

"Many owners of small business are not incorporated and would not benefit from proposed corporate tax reductions. To help these small businesses, the conference recommended that Minnesota personal income tax be cut from a maximum of 16 per cent to a maximum of 12 per cent."

"The fact that the governor ignored these recommendations and that he, along with DFL legislative leaders, chose to resort to threats shows that they are not ready to face reality. The fact remains that small business faces a Minnesota economic climate that continues to deteriorate with each passing day."

"The governor must understand that after a decade of watching the current majority turn a deaf ear to small business concerns, IBAM and the small businesses it represents are somewhat skeptical about this supposed new attitude. For us, the proof will be in deeds, not word."

Marshall Co. History Group Activities Set

At its March meeting in Warren, the Marshall county historical society board agreed to purchase a copier which will allow the copying of half sheets of newspapers and items from resource books and routine copying.

The society discussed budget needs for possible CETA reimbursement for summer help. Money for storage shelving at Settler's Square was approved and when help and weather permit will be constructed in the upstairs of the main building. The antique fair with tractor pull and many other events has been planned for August 26 at the fairgrounds in Warren. Several area Lions clubs will be assisting with funds and labor.

Minnie Ranstrom of Alvarado and Joyce Kron of Newfolden are planning to have the new finished Baltimore Brides quilt displayed at locations throughout the county. Labor on the handmade quilt was done by Veronica Lubarski Phyllis Haynes and Bess Swanson.

Flour grinding at Old Mill state park will be June 9-10, July 7-8 and September 2-3, with Neldor Broten, Emil Kuznia, Kent Broten, Mark Carlson and Jean Johnson on the committee. Next meeting will be May 17 at 7:30 p.m. at the Settlers Square.

Recycled Tires Being Used To Layer Highways

Experiments conducted by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) using finely ground tires and asphalt in a layer between the driving surface and the roadbed may prolong the life of highways as well as provide a smoother ride, according to commissioner Richard P. Braun.

The one-quarter inch thick layer of rubber and asphalt is sandwiched between the underlying pavement and the asphalt driving surface. It is known as a stress-absorbing membrane inner layer or SAMI. The SAMI reduces stress on joints in the pavement caused by the combined effects of traffic and expansion and contraction caused by extremes in temperature.

Reduced stress on the pavement joints should reduce cracking in the surface material and thereby improve driving qualities of the roadway for motorists, Paul Diethelm, Mn-DOT director of research and development, states.

An added benefit of the SAMI experiment is recycling used tires for productive use. More than 10,000 tires were recycled for use in the latest experiment.

Located on TH 19 between Milroy and Redwood Falls in Redwood county, the test sections total about five miles in length and use asphalt surface layers varying between three and four inches thick.

Diethelm explained that the addition of the rubber changes the asphalt's chemical properties so that it remains flexible at low temperatures, increasing its year-round effectiveness to inhibit road surface cracking. If SAMI proves effective, Mn-DOT may be able to reduce the thickness of asphalt overlays, thereby greatly reducing the cost of road resurfacing.

"What we hope to control is cracks in the roadbed radiating through to the surface," he said. "Reduced cracking would lower highway maintenance costs and save money for motorists by lessening vehicle damage and improving gas mileage and tire life."

The TH 19 test is the third conducted by Mn-DOT using an inner membrane layer, but it is the first to use recycled tires in its composition. The other test areas — US 10 between Detroit Lakes and Hawley and TH 63 between Zumbro Falls and Rochester — use an oil-based fiber mat or a special mix of asphalt, respectively.

Initial positive results with the US 10 and TH 63 tests led to the third experiment, Diethelm claimed.

"We are trying several methods to reduce cracking," he explained. "If this method can solve the problem, it would take us a long way toward solving our highway rehabilitation problem, and provide better service for motorists."

Winter Slows Adoption Of Horses, Burros

Winter weather has slowed demand for western wild horses and burros offered for adoption to people willing to give them good homes under a unique federal program. Adopt-a-Horse or Burro program, as it is officially called, is an activity of the interior department's bureau of land management.

G. Curtis Jones Jr., director of the bureau's eastern states office, said adoptions were down to a trickle in December and January at the two distribution centers the agency operates in Tennessee and Pennsylvania.

In calling for potential adopters to take advantage of ample stocks of horses presently on hand, Jones explained that excess animals put up for adoption under the program come from public rangelands in eight western states where they are protected by law. As a result of the law, however, herds have increased considerably.

Wild horses and burros face possible starvation in many areas as they compete for forage with wildlife and domestic livestock. There are now more than 60,000 wild horses and burros on public rangelands, compared with some 17,000 in the early 1970's. The bureau considers about 24,000 animals an optimal number for the range to carry. While the law authorizes destruction of excess animals, the bureau avoids that by placing animals with adopters throughout the country.

"There are over 2,500 excess wild horses and 40 wild burros presently in corrals out west waiting to be shipped to adoption centers, Jones said. Nevada corrals alone have over 1,400 animals which were gathered last summer and fall to help avoid overgrazing and possible starvation.

"Our dilemma is trying to keep up a steady adoption demand through the winter so we can be prepared to accept normally larger spring shipments. We need to find homes for them rather than feed them in corrals for long periods either here or out west. Nationwide, it costs about $4,500 a day to feed the captured animals. If we can't find homes for animals year round, the range and animals are ultimate losers. There's the hazard of greater range deterioration and less forage for domestic livestock and wildlife, as well as horses and burros."

"Actually, now is a good time to adopt. More horses are available and the selection is good. In most cases, a wild horse or burro adopted now could be gentled and trained for work or recreational use by springtime," Jones stated.

Bureau maintains two adoption centers in the east, located in Cross Plains, Tennessee and Lewisberry, Pennsylvania. Adopters at Cross Plains pay a fee of $210 for a horse and $130 for a burro, while the fee at Lewisberry is $215 and $140 respectively. The fee helps pay the cost of roundup, veterinary care, transportation and administration.

In addition to the permanent centers, the bureau takes animals to locations where people have shown an interest in adopting them. Plans are underway for dispersal events later this year in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, West Virginia, New York and New England.

Practice of removing excess wild horses and burros from the public lands and placing them with private citizens or organizations began in 1973. Homes for some 46,000 animals have been found.

Details on how to adopt can be obtained by writing Adopt-a-Horse or Burro program, Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of the Interior, 350 South Pickett Street, Alexandria, VA 22304. The telephone number is (703) 235-2840.

Advice Given On Tax Breaks For Retirees

Retirement is a time to reap the harvest of one's life, a time to collect on the dues paid for decades. Having income from a pension, social security and maybe a small nest egg makes it possible to enjoy this time of life.

For many retirees it's not that easy. Retirement can be a time of personal struggle that demands a financial balancing act. Whether your retirement is a bountiful harvest or a high-wire feat, it's important that you get all you're entitled to at tax time, says the Minnesota society of certified public accountants (CPAs).

As the tax deadline nears, be sure you know how much money you can earn before you must file a return, how much you may earn before losing some of your social security benefits, if you're eligible for a tax credit to the elderly and where to go for help with filling out your tax return.

If you are 65 or older, you can claim extra exemptions: one as a taxpayer plus another exemption for your age. If your spouse is also 65 or older and you file a joint return, you claim four exemptions. This means that individuals do not have to file a Federal income tax return unless income is $4,300 or more. For Minnesota, the amount is $4,100 or more. That's $2,000 in exemptions plus $2,300 for the standard deduction, or zero bracket amount as it is now known. If you are married and file a joint return, you do not have to file unless your combined gross income is more than $7,400. In Minnesota the amount is $6,200.

If you receive social security benefits, you can earn some extra income without losing any benefits. If you are over 65 but under 70, you can earn up to $6,600 without losing any benefits. For each $2 you earn above $6,600, you will lose $1 of your benefits. If you are 70 or older, you can earn any amount without losing any benefits.

Retirees receiving social security benefits should also be aware of a new wrinkle in the tax law that could expose benefits to taxation next year.

To determine if your 1984 benefits will be taxed, add up your adjusted gross income, half of your annual social security benefits and any interest you receive from tax-exempt bonds. For individuals, if the total of those three numbers is greater than $25,000, you will pay tax on half of your benefits or half of the excess above $25,000, whichever is less. For married couples filing jointly, if the sum of those three numbers is greater than $32,000, they will be taxed in the same manner.

Anyone 65 or older should know about the tax credit for the elderly. It can cut as much as $375 from a single taxpayer's bill, and $562.50 from the tax bill of a couple filing jointly. Credit is mainly for those who do not receive social security benefits, so the income limitations are tight. Still, more than 200,000 people received the credit in 1981.

To qualify for the credit you must receive less than $208 a month in social security benefits if you are single. If you are married and both you and your spouse are over 65, you can receive no more than $312 a month in social security benefits. In addition, single people applying for the credit must have an adjusted gross income below $12,500. A qualified married couple must have an adjusted gross income below $17,500.

Figuring the credit can be complicated, however. If you think you pass the social security and income test for receiving the credit, you may want to get some help in figuring out what you're entitled to. And help is available.

American association of retired persons sponsors a free nationwide outreach program that helps the elderly file income tax returns. Last year, the tax-aide program assisted more than a million persons through their 19,000 IRS-trained volunteers. If you are unable to go to them, tax-aide volunteers will come to your home. State CPA society may also offer assistance.

Interesting Perspective

In a recent news release regarding a "tax relief" plan proposed by DFL leaders in the Minnesota Senate, majority leader Roger Moe of Ada provided some insight into governmental thinking.

Included in the proposal was repeal of the state income tax surtax on July 1, 1984, which Sen. Moe contends would be "saving taxpayers $225 million". Many legislators would like the surtax repealed retroactive to January 1. Using the July 1 date comparatively, therefore, the proposal would COST taxpayers another $225 million.

More accurately, we shouldn't be led to believe that removing a tax placed on our tax is really "saving" us anything as taxpayers. Once the knife has been plunged in your chest to the hilt, pulling it out halfway doesn't go very far toward saving your life.

Another interesting comment dealt with cutting the state's corporate tax rate from 12 to 9.8 per cent. Most people would consider that a cutback of 2.2 per cent. But Sen. Moe calculates the reduction to be 18 per cent, or the difference between 12 and 9.8 per cent. That certainly sounds better to the public. We wonder if the rate was to be increased from 9.8 to 12 per cent if he would have called the increase 2.2 per cent or 22 per cent, the difference between 9.8 and 12 per cent.

It is amusing — with a touch of irony — how politicians view a reduction in taxes from exorbitant to excessive as being a "saving" to the taxpayer. It's something like federal aid — where the government takes all of the money it has from you, then offers to give half of it back if you will match it. The perspective indeed changes from the purely paying side to the receiving side of the tax system.

Looking At Agriculture

Following comments were written by Patricia J. Estes, executive manager of "The Back Forty":

This editorial will not fit the structure of how journalism school taught me to write an editorial. It's more a commentary or the sharing of a fearful vision.

Over the last few weeks four members of The Back Forty staff have crisscrossed North Dakota and as this issue goes to press we begin our Minnesota journey. When we're done spring will be only a few weeks away. And we'll have met with 14 small groups of farmers and farm wives.

The official name for these sessions is a "Focus Group".

We try to have a maximum of five farmers at each session. However, one there was only one and once we had seven. Some will have ten or more.

While two of us spend four to five hours with the farmers, the other two spend that amount of time with the wives to gain their special perspective on farm life and family hopes and dreams.

The easy questions center on seed purchases and farm management opinions. The pain and glory come as we share feelings on the future of farming and the fears that the American public will wake up too late to discover the horrible price paid for a cheap food policy.

We talk about the number of farmers in each area who won't farm this year or who will lose it next year unless a better than average crop is harvested. And we talk about the farmers at that very table who aren't yet sure they'll be in the field this year.

The enormous stress of farming and the joy of tilling that soil are poured out as a tape recorder preserves every word. We four, plus other staff members who have joined us for portions of these sessions are humbled and overwhelmed by the experience. It has changed me.

It's turning me into a crusader, willing to rock the boat for agriculture. No, more than willing to rock the boat. I'm becoming willing to risk being unpopular, willing to risk becoming a target for opposing views. Because I think we're running short of time.

In some areas I'm being told more than 10 per cent of the area's farmers might turn off the tractor this year and never again head for the fields. That could cripple not only this area economically, but the entire nation would feel it. And as I rode through the night with another staff member at the driving wheel, this is what played through my mind:

The prairie wind will howl through the silent streets of small towns in the upper Great Plains.

A legion of families will weep silently and privately, too proud to let a nation see their tears.

They and their forefathers fed this nation. Indeed, fed the world. But those ancestors will lie in untended graves in cemeteries at the edge of newly sprung ghost towns.

The bankers will not have to confront the terror of prime customers caught between high interest rates and low commodity prices. No longer will weekly bank staff meetings question whose loan to call in, whose loan not to renew, whose operating funds for this year's farm crop must be denied.

Because those small town banks will sit dusty, musty and empty.

The sound of coffee cups clinking at the local cafe will be only a memory shared in books and movies that will recall the death of American agriculture as we today know it.

And no one will roll illegal dice at the local bar to see who pays for this round.

Schools will be only brick buildings with rows of broken windows instead of buildings housing the hope for tomorrow's agriculture and the world's only chance at a peaceful future.

For it is food and fiber that will decide the future of this world, not nuclear arms.

The local elevator board will no longer have to wage war to keep railroad service because the elevator will be abandoned to the rats and nesting birds.

The soil will be tilled and the crops harvested but not by those who are operating a family farm.

Merger Worries

Following editorial is from the Sacramento (CA) Union:

Is the recent wave of mergers between big oil companies dangerous for the country? Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., thinks so and is seeking a regulatory remedy that may be as economically harmful as the problem he envisions.

Spurred by Texaco's assumption of Getty Oil for $10 billion and Socal's $13 billion takeover of Gulf, Johnston has proposed a six-month ban on any further mergers between the 50 largest oil companies.

In a letter to colleagues, the Louisiana Democrat says "we need to call a halt to these mergers until we understand what is happening, why it is happening, and what the implications are." Johnston fears the impact will be fewer companies that "will be much more in debt and will have less money for finding new oil and gas wells. For the consumer, that will mean reduced supplies and higher prices. For the country, it will mean more oil imports and a prolonged dependence on the Middle Eastern supplies."

With a drop in world oil prices, from $33 to $29 a barrel, it should be fairly obvious why so many oil companies are viewing the merger route. It was cheaper for Socal to buy reserves from Gulf, at $4 a barrel, than to explore for new oil at $10 a barrel. Many companies are also due for a restructuring because of stagnant demand.

That's not necessarily bad for the economy, consumers or competing oil companies. Shareholders who benefit from these mergers are likely to redeploy much of their profits in other investments bolstering the economic recovery. The longer the recovery is sustained, the greater the demand for energy, and eventually new exploration.

Even if Congress and the FTC allow the merger between Socal and Gulf, Big Oil remains less concentrated than Big Steel or the Big Three automakers.

Congress and the FTC have a duty to scrutinize such mergers. But they should not start out with the preconceived and politically appealing notion like Johnston's that may not help anyone at the pump.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"She really has a terrible voice," remarked the bored listener to the person seated next to him at a concert.

"You think so?" the man replied. "She's my wife."

"Now that I listen more carefully," the mortified fellow explained, "I can tell it isn't the voice. No, sir. It's the music. I wonder what kind of a no-talent imbecile would compose trash like that."

"You're talking to him," was the terse reply.

"Here's fifty cents," the lady said to the Hobo, "not because you asked for it but because it pleases me to give it to you."

"Gee, thanks, lady," the hobo replied, "but for a dollar you could really enjoy yourself."

reports to Minnesota

How can a community build its economy? The people of Madison, Minnesota, have devised a unique effort for the task that shows the ingenuity of these Minnesotans.

Madison is permanently transferring $750,000 from its electric fund to two other city funds that are designed to give a boost to the local economy.

William P. Lavin, city administrator of Madison, described the transfer and accompanying actions by the people of Madison as "a unique effort that has been under-taken by our city in order to improve the economic growth and prosperity of our community."

Of the $750,000 total, $500,000 will be used in the Madison growth and development fund for a revolving loan fund to attract new businesses or to retain firms already located in the city. The loans will also be used to aid the expansion of new or established businesses, including retail, manufacturing and industrial firms; to assist applicants for Small Business administration loans and state and federal grants; to promote downtown revitalization; and to foster improvements that will increase the community's tax base.

The city ordinance that authorized the transfer of the money also created a growth and development commission as part of a three-tier system to loan the funds.

In the first stage, the Madison business development corporation will search out prospective projects, and investigate and report on applicants and projects to the growth and development commission. The commission will review applications and make recommendations to the city council. Then, in the third tier, the city council will have final approval over loans.

Responsibility for the development of guidelines and application forms has been given to the growth and development commission, which will represent a wide range of Madison's leadership.

The commission, made up of seven members, will consist of two members of the city council; and the city administrator and other city officials; two members of the Madison business development corporation. The seven members will serve for four years or during their term of city office, and will receive no compensation.

The remaining $250,000 from the $750,000 funds transfer will make up the city's share of a wastewater treatment facility to be built with about $2 million in state and federal grants. The transfer of city funds will eliminate the need to sell bonds for the facility and thereby eliminate the need for extra taxes to retire the bonds.

Noting that the economic future of Minnesota appears to be on an upswing, Lavin said, "We are creating this fund without any financial assistance from the state or federal government."

Madison, in southwestern Minnesota, is the county seat of Lac Qui Parle county and already possesses many attributes attractive to businesses seeking expansion. These attributes include a 33-acre industrial park that has water, gas and sewer installed, and rail, truck and bus service as well as an airport.

The city leaders of Madison decided to take this aggressive step toward economic growth after they examined the state of their electric fund. The fund was created years ago to repair and replace equipment used in the operation of the city's electric utility.

Madison switched to the Missouri Basin power group several years ago, but the fund continued to grow from wise investments; as of Nov. 1, 1983, the fund was nearly $1.5 million. The city has in the past used the fund to purchase temporary improvement bonds for street and sewer improvements, thus reducing bond costs for these projects.

Even after the $750,000 transfer is made, the electric fund will still earn interest on its remaining reserves. The electric fund will still be used in the issuance of temporary improvement bonds for various projects.

City administrator Lavin says that the city's current task is to market the Madison growth and development fund program to attract interested industries and businesses. This is no small task but the city of Madison has taken a crucial step.

Preparation Good Tax Audit Idea

If the thought of an IRS audit strikes terror in your heart, now is the time to address those fears, says the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs).

By taking a few precautionary measures now, you can reduce the chances of being audited. And, by acting now, while the particulars of your 1983 return are still fresh in your mind, you can devise a stronger defense in case you are chosen for an audit. Without doubt, a little understanding of how the IRS audit system works can save you time and lessen any anxieties if your return is called into question.

In 1982, more than 1.4 million tax returns were audited and the IRS found an additional $3 billion in tax liabilities from individual taxpayers. Ironically, IRS audits also uncovered one-half billion dollars in overpayments to the IRS in 1982, resulting in refunds on 114,602 returns.

The principal method used by the IRS to pick who will be audited begins once all returns are run through a computer. The computer sorts out returns that have unusually high deducations or other discrepancies that seem out of line with their income levels. The computer scores returns, and those with the highest scores are picked for audits.

A return showing a $20,000 income and $10,000 in medical expenses may be flagged by the computer. To prevent being audited, you may want to attach a copy of your medical bills to your return in such a case. That may convince an IRS examiner that the high deduction is justified and it wouldn't pay to look any further.

Among the chief signs the IRS looks at in deciding who will be audited are: excessive losses from tax shelters, very high medical deductions, unusual business and travel expenses, high casualty or theft loss deductions, excessive sales tax deductions and steep alimony payments. Top IRS officials urge taxpayers to take all deductions to which they are legally entitled. Don't be intiminated and allow fear of being audited stop you from taking a deduction as long as you can prove you are entitled to what you are claiming, CPAs advice.

Another way of having your return audited is under the tax compliance measurement program (TCMP), which is done entirely at random. A TCMP is a rigorous, often multi-day, affair — a taxpayer's nightmare. This line by line examination of your return requires substantiation of every item and every number on your return.

Other ways the IRS selects returns for audits include matching different information forms, such as your W-2 and 1099 forms with your return, and following up on tips from informants. But no matter how you are selected for an audit, you should know what steps you need to take.

If you receive a letter saying you owe additional taxes, examine your return to make sure the IRS has not made any errors in their computation. If you don't have a copy of your return, the IRS will provide you with one for $5. If after examining your return you find that the IRS is not correct, simply send them a letter explaining your position. Then wait to be notified of the next step.

If you receive a letter directing you to come to an IRS office for an audit, be sure the audit date allows you time to prepare your case. If you need more time, ask for a delay. When your date comes up, be prepared to answer questions. Have receipts ready for inspection. These may include paid bills, cancelled checks and paycheck stubs. If you no longer have a receipt, say for a home improvement, get a letter from the contractor who did the work. You may be able to negotiate with an IRS examiner. If you are dissatisfied with a decision made by an examiner, you can ask to see a supervisor. You may be able to settle the issue with the supervisor.

If you are not satisified with an IRS decision after an audit, you can appeal your case to the IRS appellate level. If you are still unable to work out a compromise, you can take the case to court.

Small Business Starts Continue To Increase

Rush to start new small businesses continues, according to a report by the U.S. Small Business administration.

SBA's office of advocacy projected that new business incorporations, just about all representing small firms, reached a record high of 600,000 last year, a 5.2 per cent increase since 1982. The previous record, 580,000 was set in 1981; new business incorporations in 1982 totaled 560,000.

"This new projection, based on Dun and Bradstreet data, clearly shows that an ever increasing number of men and women are interested in becoming their own bosses," SBA Minneapolis district director Celso C. Moreno said today. "Obviously, the economic recovery fuels such desires. The new business incorporations figure also reflects the continuing strength and significance of small business in the American economy."

Statistics for the first six-months of 1983 show that only one region in the country — the West South Central states of Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana recorded fewer business incorporations. The six-month total in 1983 was 4.78 per cent lower than in 1982.

Largest year-to-year gain in the six months, 12.81 per cent, was recorded in the Rocky Mountain states of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Nevada.

New incorporations, Moreno explained, do not all represent new businesses. "Most of the incorporations were filed by new companies, to be sure," Moreno said. "But others represent ongoing partnerships and sole proprietorships making legal or geographic changes. But the majority of the incorporations' total does reflect the overall trend of more and more persons starting up their own enterprises."

SBA also reported that another measure of small business activity, new business starts, rose 13 per cent over during the first nine months of 1983 compared with the same 1982 period.

"From measurable filings, we found that new business starts from January to September 1983 totaled 66,572 vs. 58,950 in the similar 1982 period," Moreno said.

"While these figures undoubtedly represent a small part of new businesses started, they again reflect the increased number of men and women going to work for themselves".

New business starts in the construction industry rose 42.2 per cent during the nine month period. Other industry increases were: Manufacturing 13.1 per cent; transportation, communication, electric gas and sanitary services 15.2 per cent; wholesale trade 11.2 per cent; retail trade 8.9 per cent; finance, insurance and real estate 33 per cent; services 6.2 per cent. New starts in the mining industry declined 22.4 per cent.

For the period January to June 1983 vs. January to June 1982, Minnesota ranked 15th among the states with an increase in business incorporations from 3,607 to 4,068.

According to Moreno, Minnesota's 12.72 per cent increased ranked third among West North Central States, which include Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

Flight Program Moves Organs For Transplant

A nationwide emergency air transportation program designed to assist individuals in critical need of organ transplants was launched January 1 by a petroleum industry group underwiring the project.

Known as Oil Industry Livesaving flight, or "OIL Flights," the program is the first formalized national effort to make corporate or chartered aircraft available for transplant-related purposes.

Under the program, the aircraft will be made available to transport organs, donors, recipients or surgical teams who recover organs for numerous transplant centers in the United States.

The OIL flights network is underwritten by a cross-section of companies engaged in oil and natural gas operations as well as firms which provide services to the petroleum industry.

The program is administered through a non-profit foundation of the Greater Houston hospital council and governed by a board composed of petroleum industry, hospital administration and medical representatives.

"With the development of new anti-rejection drugs," states chairman J.B. Coffman, "the medical community is making great strides in its efforts to successfully transplant organs. Yet, one critical and often limiting element of transplant programs is the timely transportation of the organ to the recipient.

"To help satisfy this humanitarian need," Coffman added, "many oil and gas companies and firms that provide services to the industry are offering their corporate aircraft, or alternatively, cash contributions to charter planes through the OIL flights program."

The program is composed of 42 companies. Their participation provides a pool of 49 planes in 18 cities in 11 states from California to Florida and Texas to Illinois. Cash contributions will fund the chartering of planes where corporate aircraft are unavailable or where specialized life support systems are needed.

OIL flights are intended to supplement existing transportation services, not to compete.

Coffman explained that OIL flights will maintain information on participating companies; the base of operations for their aircraft, and the characteristics of the planes, including speed, range and general geographic operating areas.

When a transplant center requests emergency transportation, the OIL flights center in Houston makes the arrangements.

If a corporate plane is available, OIL flights will arrange the flight schedule with the corporate member. If a plane is unavailable, OIL flights will then arrange for a charter flight from funds paid by member contributions.

"The flights are offered on a charitable basis," Coffman said. "We believe OIL flights will provide a valuable service, particularly to those individuals and families who may not have the financial resources to pay for transportation."

Coffman also expressed the hope that, if the pilot program proves successful, more companies will join to help OIL flights continue and expand. Additional companies were inquiring about participation in the OIL flights program at the time the news conference was held.

Examine Doors And Windows For Heat Loss

Doors and windows. They're not obvious thieves. But steal they do: quietly and steadily, they rob your home of heat and that means money out of your pocket.

Doors are a necessary feature of a home and most would say the same about windows. Obviously, doors are needed to get into and out of a house, while windows provide ventilation, light and a view of the outside world. Both are portals through which your energy dollar can pass and be lost.

One type of heat thievery occurs when improperly sealed doors and windows allow cold air to leak inside. Give your home a simple test. Stand by a door or window. Wet your hand and place it near any possible cracks. Is there a draft? Shake the door or window. Does it rattle?

These are signs of heat loss through cold air leakage, but don't despair; there are some simple steps you can take to keep cold air out, warm air in and save money in the process.

Your first step should be to stop cold-air drafts, known as infiltration, by making your doors and windows as airtight as possible. Infiltration is a major culprit when it comes to your home's total heat loss. Some researchers have found that if you added up all the small cracks and holes in an average home, the total would be equivalent to a hole in an outside wall four feet square! Sealing as many of those leaks as possible can lead to savings.

Begin by examining the windows and doors to see if they are damaged, warped or need caulking and weather-stripping. Some may need to be replaced. Most, however, can benefit from simple and inexpensive treatments without the added cost of replacement.

Caulk around the interior woodwork to prevent infiltration and subsequent loss of warm room air. Weatherstrip around doors and windows where feasible. Tighten up windows with new locks, if necessary. Get used to using the locks, not only for security but to seal in the warm air.

Consider adding storm windows or plastic coverings to single glazings. Existing double glazings may also benefit from properly installed and maintained plastic sheets. If your prime door is weatherstripped and caulked, adding a storm door may not yield much additional energy savings, thought it may prove cost effective by providing better security and extending the life of a wooden prime door.

If your utility offers an energy audit, arrange to have one done on your home. An auditor can identify areas of heat loss, help you determine priorities and estimate payback periods for various conservation steps.

The Minnesota department of energy and economic development has several publications that can help you slow down the rate of heat loss through doors and windows. To receive these free brochures, call the energy information center, toll free, at 1-800-652-9747, or, in the twin cities area, 296-5175.

IRS Answers Questions For Retired Persons

"Do I have to pay tax on my social security benefits?" is a question many retired people are asking about a recent federal law change.

Short answer to this common question really depends on individual facts and circumstances. Here are some general guidelines from the IRS in Minnesota that should be helpful to older Americans and also those nearing retirement age.

If you receive social security or railroad retirement benefits, you may have to include part of that money with your gross income for 1984. This law change does not apply to your 1983 tax return.

Formula most people will use to learn if any benefits are taxable starts out with two income figures: $25,000 for a single person, and $32,000 for a married couple. If your income, including benefits, is below the appropriate figure, the law change does not apply to you and none of your benefits will be taxed. For income above these "threshold figures," up to one-half of social security benefits may be taxed as ordinary income.

To learn if you have any additional tax to pay in 1984 it will be helpful to have social security and income tax records at hand. Start out with your adjusted gross income. Add to it any tax-exempt interest income, the deduction for a married couple when both work — if that applies to you — and half of your social security or railroad retirement benefits. A few people will also have to add in certain foreign income. Next subtract the "threshold figure" that pertains to you. If the result is more than zero, divide it by two. This figure or half of your social security benefits, whichever is smaller, will count as taxable income.

Here's an example that may help you better understand the formula. In 1984 John and Mary expect to have about $28,000 of pension income. They receive a total of $3,000 in tax-exempt income from several municipal bonds and also receive $8,000 in social security benefits. Adding together the income plus one-half of the benefits totals $35,000 ($28,000 + $3,000 + $4,000). Subtracting the "threshold figure" of $32,000 equals $3,000. One-half of this figure ($1,500) is smaller than half of their social security benefits ($4,000) so in this situation John and Mary in 1984 will include $1,500 of their benefits in their gross income.

If you have additional tax to pay because of the social security law change, the IRS suggests you have more income tax withheld from your paycheck or increase your estimated tax payments.

In the situation of John and Mary, let's say they make estimated tax payments totalling $2,400 a year ($600 a quarter). After deductions and credits let's say John and Mary will have a tax liability of $3,450. At their current rate they may be subject to a penalty for paying too little of their taxes during the year. They can avoid this possibility by increasing their payments $90 a quarter.

Another option they have is to fill out a W-4P and have the amount of their increased tax liability deducted monthly from their pension the same way a wage earner has withholding taken out of each paycheck.

For answers to this and other federal tax questions, please call the IRS at 291-1422 or toll-free at 1-800-424-1040. The phone lines are open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Backgrounds Of Presidents Differ Through History

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Popular mythology leads us to believe that would-be presidents follow a well-charted map on the road to the White House. But most oval office occupants — and they've included soldiers and small businessmen, scholars and engineers, farmers and lawyers — arrived there through a combination of circumstance and happenstance, often with little preparation for the job.

Earlier careers and backgrounds, moreover, are little guide to predicting how well presidents will perform in office.

Abraham Lincoln "had absolutely no executive or administrative experience" when he became president. Lincoln historian Mark E. Neely notes. "His only previous term in national office, as a member of the House from 1847 to 1849, bardly constituted a presidential apprenticeship."

Harry Truman — like Lincoln, a highly rated president — was in the haberdashery business until it failed close to his 40th birthday. And, at age 54, Woodrow Wilson, also well regarded by historians, stepped aside from university life to begin what has been described as a meteoric rise to political prominence.

On the other hand, Herbert Hoover's engineering and administrative accomplishments, as well as his humanitarian work and wide popularity, seemed to be harbingers of a successful presidency. But he soon lost his following when nationwide hardship set in.

It is true that many of our 40 presidents spent their formative years in the political arena, nearly half being elected to some office before they were 30. More than two-thirds graduated from college; about half practiced law. Twenty-four served in the armed forces, 10 as generals. Beyond these similarities, the backgrounds of U.S. presidents have differed so greatly that historian Robert Post, editor of "Every Four Years", published by the Smithsonian institution press, calls himself "a partisan of the 'mysterious forces' interpretation" to explain whom we elect as president.

"Why did Lincoln become president — really?" Post asks. In that sober four-way election that focused on the issue of slavery, regional divisions rather than personalities dominated the campaign. And yet, Smithsonian historian Wilcomb Washburn believes that Lincoln, who "had acquired something of a reputation as the ugliest man in the Union," might never have been elected had not a photograph taken by Mathew Brady provided a perfect antidote to hostile caricatures and jokes. Brady, Washburn says, caught all "the intelligence, compassion — and grace at the heart of Lincoln's character."

Personality traits over the years have become indispensable in campaign advertising and image building. But the deliberate exploitation of symbols associated with personalities began only with the candidacy of Andrew Jackson in 1832. The hero of the battle of New Orleans was "packaged" to project images of power and determination, charateristics that remained with the public throughout his presidency.

During the first six presidencies, Washburn points out, simplistic images and personality-linked symbols were generally avoided in favor of the issues. The patrician lives of these presidents were closely guarded and certainly not deliberately exploited.

For all their differences in careers and personal interests, the first presidents — Washington, John Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and John Quincy Adams — essentially were cut from the same fine patrician cloth. But the ascendancy of these leaders, says historian Noble Cunningham, a contributor to, "Every Four Years," "was due more to talent than to birth, and all came to office through public service."

Each of these early leaders enjoyed the advantage of economic security and good educational background, and, as a group, they were experienced in both diplomacy and domestic politics. "Few, if any periods of American history," Cunningham points out, "Have brought to the presidency a succession of leaders with such impressive backgrounds."

Though he had longed to return to farming at Mount Vernon at the end of the revolutionary war, Washington, true to the early patrician pattern, did seem the epitome of a constitutional chief of state when he took office in 1789. He invested the office with a grave, dignified, even austere style," Richard Morris, an American history scholar, says.

Despite his deep concern for people, Washington was distinctly not of the people, Morris adds. Washington, for example, actually rode in a cream-colored chariot, adorned with cupids and his coat of arms. But his major contribution to the presidency, the historian says, "was to flesh out the bare bones of the office" as set forth in the constitution.

Thomas Jefferson, also very much the Virginia aristocrat, in many wasys stands apart from his peers. His range of intellectual interests and variety of skills " is simply incredible," Michael Lawson, another contributor to "Every Four Years", says. Jefferson explored — beyond mere proficiency — such fields as botony, architecture, music, philosophy, classical languages and archeology.

The author of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson, as president, soon made it known that he wanted a government "rigorously frugal and simple." Symbolically, he dropped the formal receptions of the federalist era and placed his dinner guests at round tables that implied an absence of hierarchy.

Jefferson spoke of returning the ship of state to its earlier decentralized principles, and, unlike his fellow patricians, the third president headed his political party, keeping in touch with state and local leaders. He also was a legislative innovator, sending personally drafted bills to Capitol hill.

Jefferson, as the story goes, received guests in his bedroom slippers — but the thought of his permitting rowdyism in the white house would have been inconceivable. Andrew Jackson was a different story, and for the first time in American history, so was the presidency. As if confirming the worst fears of the "aristocratic element," Jackson's administration and commitment to the concerns of the common man commenced with a "monstrous crowd" (as Daniel Webster described it) having a wild time at the white house.

One of the most colorful and complex figures in American history, Jackson was a lawyer — but, Post notes, a lawyer practicing west of the mountzins on the Tennessee frontier. He was a speculator in land and slaves — not that unusual for his time. "But for a primary profession it was unique," Post adds. Moreover, he was "sort of a bogus military hero," defeating the British at the battle of New Orleans after the war of 1812 had already ended.

Still, he provided the nation with a moment of pride, a moment that catapulted him into the presidency. He was quite a contrast to his opponent, the cosmopolitan John Quency Adams, who, Post comments, had "little political sense." (Once, Adams turned down a politically important invitation to a cattle show in Baltimore, fearing it would easily lead to "other public meetings for the purposes of exposures to public sentiment.")

"A gallant aristocrat to his friends, a rude barbarian to his foes, Jackson was facile enough to be many things to many people," according to Post. In office, Jackson regarded himself as the direct representative of majority opinion at a period when the vote was divorced from property ownership and other political reforms were occurring. Ultimately, Post concludes, Jackson was as indispensable as Washington had been in 1789.

Jackson's popularity also influenced a generation of campaign hopefuls. Even the aristocratic 1840 Whig candidate, William Henry Harrison, another Virginian, campaigned as a humble man from a "log cabin and hard cider heritage" — and won.

Ulysses S. Grant was a military hero, too, but his presidency, coming during the age of industrial barons and friendly politicos, is considered a scandal-ridden disaster.

Grant showed "absolutely no distinction as a youth," says Michael Lawson. To everyone's surprise, he won an appointment to West Point, but early in his military career, Grant was discovered drunk in public, and rather than face a court martial, he quit the service. In St. Louis, he lost one job after another until a brother took pity and offered him a clerk's job in a Galena, IL shop. With the outbreak of the civil war, Grant returned to uniform and rose to fame. But Grant's years as chief executive were badly tainted by corruption, and his political judgment contrasted dismally with his military prowess.

In total contrast is the career and record of Theodore Roosevelt, scion of an old New York City family, public servant — police commissioner, governor, vice president — rancher, cowboy, scientist, author, soldier, big game hunter. "If ever any man had been destined for the presidency it was Roosevelt," Princeton scholar Arthur Link believes.

Larger than life, Roosevelt cultivated the affection of the American people — he was despised by the big city political bosses because of his energy and independence — and turned his talents loose on the "malefactors of great wealth," striking first at the great rail, oil, beef and tobacco trusts. By the time he left office, he had marshalled the bast powers inherent in the presidency, powers that had languished since the civil war. "After Roosevelt," says Link, "all presidents would be judged, for better or for worse, against his activist precepts and autonomous conduct."

To many historians, the appearance that a candidate is right for his times, as Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Roosevelt surely were, weighs far more importantly than his lineage or career resume. "Who knows what it takes to be qualified?" Post asks. "What is important is how the voters respond to a candidate." Roosevelt was ideal for his day, suggests his biographer David McCullough, "but today all his eccentricities would show. Imagine those on the seven o'clock news."

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

In 1983 two members of the Congress of the United States were censured by their colleagues for committing major crimes, felonies, having sexual relations with minors serving as congressional pages. Both admitted their guilt. Each continues to serve in the House of Representatives. Each assumes that his constituents will forgive and forget.

If this crime had been committed by any voter, that voter would have been arrested for statutory rape, charged, arraigned and tried. Fr some reason, no criminal charges have been brought against either man.

I am concerned. Do we have a legal standard based on immunity for congressmen and enforcement for others? Also, how can we delegate responsibility for making laws when lawmakers are lawbreakers? What kind of example do we provide to the next generation when we allow men of this caliber, admitted felons, to wander around unpunished?

There was a time when pride, respectability, responsibility, and a sense of right and wrong had some meaning. A congressman caught in this situation would have resigned, been tried, paid his penalty and felt lucky that he hadn't had something worse done to him by an electorate who wouldn't tolerate this kind of behavior toward their children by adults.

Something has happened to our sense of right and wrong when we tolerate continued attendance in the congress of immoral men who can not even be trusted with our minor children sent off to serve as pages and get an exposure to our government. Is it any surprise that others, observing this kind of behavior and double standard in the law, feel that "if it's okay for them, why not me, too?" This kind of behavior, both by the congressmen involved and a tolerant public, certainly indicates a deterioration in the moroals of our society.

For an hour I listened to an acquaintence who had just discovered that his wife had been having a torrid affair with someone he considered a friend. He was debating alternatives. His wife's response, when discovered, in spite of their joint responsibility for five young children, was simply, "Give me enough space so that I can enjoy this affair for as long as it may last." This comment shocked me if it reflects our society's morals.

A short man I met, for reasons that I can not determine, decided to do what he could to injure another person. He passed on stories that he knew were untrue. He encouraged others to do the same thing. When his intended victim got word of what was occurring, and called him about it, he denied any knowledge of what he had been doing. He even said that he was too busy with productive activity to get involved in such affairs. He had a real talent for stirring things up and then hiding on the sidelines while others carried forward the damage he initiated.

Shooting someone with a pistol is a crime. Shooting someone with a mouth is also a crime. This short man was very concerned about his professionalism. He really was a professional hatchet man who took after many people. The amazing thing to me was that he had been able to con others into participation in these efforts, even after he had turned on them. We seem to like working in "packs" when it comes to tearing into someone. Ethical behavior can not be much in vogue or the many people this "little man" had injured and coerced would have "gunner him down" long ago.

There was a time when speaking with a straight tongue was considered important, and doing the right thing was appreciated. There was also a time when speaking with a "forked tongue" (lying or rumor-mongering with an intent to injure) could get you killed because of the significance we placed on reputation and integrity.

Looking at those two congressman, the mate having a torrid cross-country affair, the short man who shoots with his mouth but with the same intent as someone using a gun, I'm worried. If those two congressmen are re-elected, the affair continues, and the short man keeps picking off victims, I will be even more worried.

That's Straight Talk!

Michelle Olson Sets Records

Lincoln high school junior Michelle Olson set nine new team records and tied another during the 1983-84 girls basketball season, it was revealed in a statistical summary issued by coach Tom Schafer of the Prowlers.

Olson, a 5-8 forward, already is the school career scoring leader with 693 points. That's 307 shy of the prestigious 1,000-point club, a sizeable amount, but not out of reach for a player who set a school single season scoring record with 345 points this winter.

Other single season records established by Olson during the recently-completed 1983-84 season included new marks for most field goal attempts — 381; most field goals made — 132; and most free throws made — 81.

She also recorded new high single game marks in most field goal attempts — 32 vs. Bemidji; most free throw attempts — 22 vs. Marshall County Central; most free throws made — 18 vs. Marshall County Central; and most points scored — 34 vs. Marshall County Central.

Olson tied the team record for highest single game free throw percentage by making 11 of 12 attempts vs. Bemidji, matching a 92 per cent figure set by Ann Goodrich vs. Moorhead during the 1980-81 season.

Thief River Falls also broke four team records and tied another this winter.

New team season marks included most free throw attempts — 437; most free throws made — 201; and most rebounds — 771.

A new team single game record was established with 38 free throw attempts vs. Marshall County Central, and the 1983-84 Prowlers tied the team single game record for most free throws made with 22 vs. Marshall County Central, a total the 1980-81 Prowlers had vs. Detroit Lakes.

With a starting line-up that featured just one senior, two juniors and two sophomores, the Prowlers, who finished 9-11 this winter, are looking forward to a very successful 1984-85 campaign.

Stars' Coach Praises Broten

Minnesota North Stars coach Bill Mahoney was highly complimentary of Roseau native Neal Broten in the team's latest weekly news release received last Thursday.

Mahoney regards the 25-year-old Broten as one of the most gifted players in the National Hockey League. "You watch tapes of games played by Neal Broten and you see him pull off some feats that are almost magical," Mahoney said in the release.

Broten has been doing that ever since he was a Pee-Wee at Roseau, pointed out North Stars director of information Dick Dillman. His skills led him to the state hockey tournament with the Rams, to the University of Minnesota, to an NCAA championship, All-American recognition, the first Hoby Baker Award as the outstanding collegiate player in the nation, and an Olympic gold medal before he joined the North Stars.

His accomplishments in the NHL have been equally exciting, added Dillman. He set a goal-scoring record for United States-born players with 38 in his rookie season in 1981-82, and his 98-point season that year stands as the best-ever by an American-born player. He once again leads that category this winter with a team-leading 85 points on 27 goals and 58 assists in the North Stars' first 74 games (he appeared in 71 of them).

Lincoln Swimming Records

A single Lincoln high school swim team record was set during the Prowlers during the recently-completed 1983-84 season, according to head coach Jay Forney, with junior Todd Wing setting a new standard by scoring 270.25 points in diving competition.

Of the 11 events, five current Lincoln school records date back to the 1975-76 season when Dan Heieren had a 1:52.18 in the 200 freestyle; Mark Storhaug had a 5:06.4 in the 500 freestyle; Dan Cork had a 1:00.0 in the 100 backstroke; Jeff Carter had a 1:05.5 in the 100 breaststroke; and Greg Omdahl, Carter, Cork and Storhaug had a 1:44.3 in the 200 medley relay.

Oldest records date back a year earlier when Dave Borning swam a 22.02 in the 50 freestyle and had a 48.34 in the 100 freestyle. He wound up winning both events at the 1975 Minnesota state meet — the Prowlers' only state champion in swimming in the history of the sport at the school.

Two school records were set in 1978-79 when Bruce Storhaug has a 56.52 in the 100 butterfly, while the 400 freestyle relay team of Storhaug, Kevin Murphy, Dave Beito and Jon Pinkerton had a 3:25.85.

Other school record belongs to Dave Ose, who had a 2:08.72 in the 200 individual medley in 1982-83.

Thief River Falls boys have had a solid swimming program over the years, but the sectional field, which was realigned in its current set-up for the 1978 season, has been dominated by four teams — Bemidji, Fergus Falls, Brainerd and Alexandria. Over the past eight years nobody else in the 13-team sectional line-up has been able to nudge their way into the top three. It was Fergus Falls-Bemidji-Brainerd taking those top three spots four straight years before Alexandria moved atop the 1984 point totals.

Since the Prowlers first joined sectional swimming competition in 1973-74, results in the post-season meet through the 1982-83 season saw Fergus Falls qualify 44 competitors for state meet appearances, Brainerd 43, Alexandria 29, Bemidji 23, Fosston 18 and Thief River Falls 16.

Prowlers Looking Forward To 1984-85 Basketball Schedule

While far from displeased with the efforts of the 1983-84 Prowlers, it's the 1984-85 squad that attracts the attention of Lincoln high school girls basketball coach Tom Schafer.

Thief River Falls finished the recently-completed season with a 9-11 overall record — a near .500 regular season mark at 9-10 and a post-season 47-46 loss to Fergus Falls in North Sub-Region 8AA tournament play. The Prowlers started the year with seven wins in their first nine games, but went 2-9 down the stretch against tougher competition.

With a starting line-up that featured just one senior, the Prowlers expect to enjoy some success next year.

Paula Wilkens, a 5-3 point guard, was the lone senior in the starting unit this winter. Others in the starting five were juniors Michelle Olson and Penni Johnston, plus sophomores Connie Grovum and Michelle Puetz. In addition, juniors Stacie Kruta and Crystal Larson were front line reserves, and freshman Brenda Russell will be expected to contribute on the varsity next year after a very successful season with the junior varsity and brief duty with the varsity this winter.

Olson was the team's leader, evidenced by her name atop nearly every category on the Prowlers' post-season statistical summary. She averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds per game.

Puetz, meanwhile, complemented Olson's outside game with a strong inside attack as she averaged 11 points and 9 rebounds per game. Olson and Puetz accounted for 58 per cent of the Prowlers' offense.

Still, Grovum and Johnston both made major contributions, with Grovum averaging 8 points per game.

Statistically, the Prowlers out-performed the opposition in scoring and rebounding in 1983-84, normally two categories you lose with a losing record. Thief River Falls out-scored the opposition 947-889, averaging 47 points per game while giving up 44. And the Prowlers had a 771-621 advangage on the boards, averaging 38.6 rebounds per game to 31.1 for the opposition.

And shooting-wise, the Prowlers were just a notch behind their opponents. They shot 34 per cent from the field as a team for the year and 46 per cent at the free throw line. Opponents shot 35 per cent from the field and 47 per cent at the line.

In starting the year 7-2, Thief River Falls beat Marshall County Central 39-38, Tri-County 49-32, Roseau 50-16, Strandquist 51-23 and Marshall County Central, again, 58-38 in the final of the Nordics' four-team holiday tournament, Moorhead for the first time ever 55-48 and Red Lake Falls 49-24. They lost during that stretch to Warren 43-23 and Park Rapids 49-35.

But in the second half of the season the Prowlers beat only Greenbush 54-30 and Fertile-Beltrami 65-40 while losing to Bemidji 66-45 and 57-54, Crookston 40-36 and 48-41, East Grand Forks 61-43 and 61-49, Detroit Lakes 65-55 and Fergus Falls 63-52.

Northland Hockey Coach Announces Resignation

Tony Dorn, Jr. has resigned as Northland community college hockey coach, a position he held for the past two years.

In announcing his decision Thursday, Dorn said the time factor prompted his resignation. There just wasn't enough time available, he explained, to do a satisfactory job in both is work within the family office supply business and the coaching duties.

"It's a program that requires and deserves someone who can provide, and has the time, to make it successful," said Dorn about the Northland hockey assignment. "I just have too many committments with our own business. I did as much as I could with the hours in the day, but it still wasn't enough."

Dorn said he had no regrets about his first try at coaching. "It's something I wanted to do, and something I enjoyed doing. The people at the college were just super to work with."

Succeeding Tom Goddard, who also coached the Northmen for two years before resigning, Dorn took over the Northland hockey program for the 1982-83 season when a 10-8 regular season record was followed by two Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) state tournament losses. It was a young team, and Dorn anticipated a large number of sophomores to be on hand for the 1983-84 campaign.

But for a variety of reasons, including a number of late decisions, that sophomore class dropped drastically in size and the shorthanded Northmen struggled through a 6-14 season this winter. In fact, the numbers finally caught up with them in the final weekend of the season when injuries and illness reduced the squad to the point where they were forced to forfeit a two-game series ar Rochester, a series the Northmen could have used to make it into the state playoffs.

That gave Dorn a two-year won-loss record at the school of 16-24.

Dorn was the fifth Northland hockey coach in the 14-year history of the sport at the school. The program began under Swede Lund, who coached the Northmen five years, from the 1970-71 season through the 1974-75 season. Curt Geatz served as coach of the Northmen for the 1975-76 season before Bob Lundbohm took over for a four-year span from the 1976-77 season through the 1979-89 season. Goddard coached the Northmen during the 1980-81 and 1981-82 seasons.

Search for a new coach is currently underway.

Dorn is the second Northland head coach to resign during the current school year. John Helley, who served as Northland head football coach for the past four years, stepped down at the end of the 1983 fall season. He was succeeded by Rick Nelson, who was the head coach of the Grygla - Goodridge cooperative high school football program.

DNR hotline

1. I have heard that the Mosquito Creek is going to be dredged the whole length of the creek including Tamarack Lake. Is this true?

Mosquito Creek and Tamarack Lake are protected waters, and any dredging projects would require the DNR permit from the Division of Waters. The work, if permitted, would be closely regulated; however, to date, no applications have been received for any such projects on either of these bodies of water. Gerald Paul, regional hydrologist.

2. From the point where the Tamarack River first joins the Upper Red Lake to the first channel marking pole, I hit a rock that was large enough to make a substantial thud and damage my propeller. Many people that use the channel have told me that they also have hit this rock and they seem to know the general location of it. As well known as this rock is, why has it not been either removed or marked?

Department of Natural Resources has marked the Tamarack River navigation channel as a convenience to boaters. We were unaware of the presence of a rock in this channel until your letter informed us about it. Field personnel are being instructed to locate the rock and either mark it or remove it. Thank you for bringing this to our attention. Gerald Paul, regional hydrologist.

3. Is it legal to use a small treble hook tied to a piece of monofilament and a jig hooked in the mouth of a minnow with the treble in the tail of a minnow for fishing?

Yes, if the treble hook is attached to the artificial lure and is within 3 inches of it. This makes it part of the artificial lure. Bryon Bryland, regional enforcement supervisor.

4. Do you have a question, complaint or suggestion regarding how your natural resources are being managed?

DNR Hotline is your direct channel to a representative who will answer you, whether it concerns parks, fish, wildlife, forests, waters or minerals. Write DNR Hotline, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road N.E., Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 755-3976.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The following letter has been sent to your mayor and we would like to have the community award of the effort put forth in regard to the tournament mentioned.

Dear Mayor Carlson:

On the weekend of March 17 the Roseau Golden Agers old timer hockey team from Roseau participated in the Pepsi Challenge old timer tournament held in your city.

We have attended this tournament for a number of years, however, this tournament was one of the best we've ever attended. I have to give the major part of the credit to Mr. Dale Wennberg for his continued effort to be a big part of your hockey hub of Thief River Falls. I am also informed Mr. Mark Haugen did a great deal to assist Dale in this year's tournament.

I wish to thank the supporting businesses of Thief River Falls — Pepsi, American Legion, Hardee's, McDonald's, TG Sports, Kmart, Pizza Hut and Pamida. Their support made our weekend in your city even more enjoyable.

Yours Truly,
Steve Dahl

TRF Squirts Are Beaten During Warroad Event

Thief River Falls' entry in the 1984 Warroad Squirts Invitational hockey tournament lost all three starts in the eight-team event played Saturday and Sunday.

Kenora broke open a 5-1 game with five third period goals in a 10-2 opening round win over Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon. Ross Dalzell and Shawn Crowser scored Thief River Falls goals.

Selkirk skated past Thief River Falls 9-3 in the consolation semifinal Saturday night. Aaron Broten, Duane Molstad and Jason Svir scored in a losing effort.

Playing in the seventh place game Sunday morning, Thief River Falls lost a close 7-6 overtime decision to Transcona. Brian Gillespie had a three-goal hat trick for Thief River Falls, with Crowser scoring twice and Dalzell once. Dalzell and Cory Offerdahl each had two assists.

Thief River Falls trailed Transcona 5-3 entering the third period. Gillespie scored with 2:06 left to tie it 5-5 and Dalzell scored just 11 seconds later to put Thief River Falls ahead 6-5, only to see Transcona get the tying goal a quick six seconds later to complete a flurry of goal-scoring activity that forced a five-minute sudden-death overtime. Transcona scored the game-winner with 3:29 left.

Jay Lusignan and Barry Dowers shred the goaltending duties during the weekend.

Rest of the Thief River Falls team members, featuring players selected from the three Thief River Falls In-House Squirts teams, included Corey Mattson, Jon Klos, John Olson, Charlie Lundgren, Chad Frazer, Marc Haugen, Nathan Hunt, Tim Stengrim, Shane Skeim. Coaches were Mark Enge and Mike Lundgren.

Tourney Titles Won Saturday In Basketball

Pelican Rapids and White Bear Lake emerged as 1984 Minnesota state high school basketball tournament state champions Saturday at the St. Paul Civic Center.

It was the first state championship for either team.

Pelican Rapids won the Class A state title with a series of close wins as the Vikings edged Wells-Easton 46-44 in the opening round quarterfinals Thursday, got by St. John's Prep 59-58 in the semifinals Friday and tripped Winona Cotter 57-55 in the championship game Saturday afternoon.

While Bear Lake won the Class AA state title with wins over Rochester John Marshall 47-38, St. Paul Central 58-37 and No. 1-rated pre-tournament favorite Minneapolis North 51-47 in the Saturday night championship game.

Region 8A champion Warren saw a close game come apart in the final stages of the fourth quarter Thursday in a 51-39 opening round loss to St. Anthony Village in Class A state tournament play. The Ponies bounced back to beat Sanborn 61-44 in the consolation semifinals Friday but fell to Wells-Easton 36-34 in the final seconds Saturday in the consolation finals.

Fergus Falls, the Region 8AA representative, was playing without the full-strength services of standout Tim Swenson, sidelined with the flu, but still gave heavily favored Minneapolis North a close game in a 60-54 opening round victory for the Polars. The Otters then dropped a 51-45 consolation semifinals game to North Branch.

America — Still a Box Office Smash

Five years ago, President Carter delivered his "Malaise" speech. We were told that America's best days were behind her. We had entered an age of limits — limits to economic growth and limits to our hopes and dreams. America was no longer that shining city on a hill.

Politicians counseled despair and hopelessness. America no longer had anything the rest of the world would want or, indeed, that our children would want. The federal government was not, mind you, responsible for our problems, but would help us manage our steady and inevitable decline.

In response, I wrote a column rejecting this gloomy thesis. I quoted Ted Morgan, a man born in France to an aristocratic family. He had moved to the United States seeking expanded opportunity and wrote a book entitled "On Becoming American." He was interviewed on "60 Minutes" by Mike Wallace, who noted, "Ted, you write, 'this country is a success in the same way a Broadway is a success.' "

"That's right," Morgan replied, "because everybody is standing in line waiting to get in. It's a box office smash."

Ted Morgan was right. Immigrants from every nation on the face of the earth are coming to America. Others are on waiting lists. In some nations, immigrants must wait as long as a decade to come to America. Still, they come.

These prospective Americans are voting with their feet, registering their faith in America, her present and future opportunities and freedom. No other nation in the world receives this vote of confidence. It should be a source of pride for all Americans, and it must remind us of how truly blessed we are to live in a nation where individual liberty is respected, and initiative and hard work are rewarded, not discouraged.

The immigrants continue to arrive at our shores. Some through legal immigration; others slip past our border guards, risking imprisonment. (And let us remember that some nations employ border guards to keep their people in.)

Each year an estimated one million immigrants come to America. They carry the same dreams and hopes that sustained immigrants who traveled by boat from Europe at the turn of the century. Even if we are sometimes blinded to the strength and vitality of our nation, we can see in the eyes of these immigrants that they know and trust in America's greatness and opportunity. They have risked everything, often leaving families and friends behind, to join in the Great American Future.

Today, we have further proof of how the world views America and its future. For those individuals who cannot come to America are now sending their money to invest in what they believe to be the greatest engine of wealth creation the world has ever known — the free American economy. In 1981 foreigners invested more than $80 billion in America. In 1982 foreign investment swelled to more than $87 billion. That is confidence in our future.

While some American politicians and cynics may deride our accomplishments and belittle our future as a free and prosperous people, millions of individuals from around the world are putting their money on America. Such investment creates jobs here and fuels our economic growth.

Some may still preach decline and despair, but with millions of people risking everything to come to our shores and millions of others investing their life's earnings in our economy and our future, I will certainly not be one to bet against America and her future.

Ludwig Von Mises, the noted free market economist, once observed that only a central government could take two perfectly useful commodities — ink and paper — and, by combining them in paper money, create something totally useless. As a refugee who fled the political consequences of Germany's hyper-inflation in the 1920s, Von Mises' hyperbole may be excused. The point is made.

It is not easy to create nothing from something, to spin flax from gold or to turn a silk purse into a sow's ear. Few attempt it. It is sad that modern-day liberals have done just this to the once proud and honorable word "liberal."

Two centuries ago, liberals were at the forefront of the revolutionary struggles against the older order, the ancient regime, in Europe. They opposed the monarchies and supported republican government. They waged the intellectual battle against protective tariffs such as Britain's infamous Corn Laws. They stood in opposition to mercantilism, the theory which attempted to justify economic isolationism. Indeed, Adam Smith's The Wealth of Nations, the foundation of modern free market economics, was the product of this liberal movement. John Locke, a leading liberal theorist, laid out the case for limited government, arguing that government is best which governs least. He called for replacing the rule of individuals with the rule of law, and confining the legitimate scope of government to defending life, liberty and property.

In opposing the old aristocracies, the liberals believed in the equality of man before law and before God. Liberals led the spiritual revolution that precedes physical revolutions.

Our American Revolution was the product of this liberal thought. Representative democracy, limited government, low taxes, free trade, freedom of religion, and the protection of private property were the foundation of the liberal movement in Europe and the goals of a tiny nation of three million pioneers who challenged King George III and the most powerful empire in the world.

Herbert Spencer wrote in Man Versus the State that "the function of liberalism in the past was that of putting a limit to the powers of kings. The function of true Liberalism in the future will be that of putting a limit to the powers of Parliament." Something happened to the liberal movement that aborted this transition. The liberals ceased being advocates of limited government and individual liberty and became instead the champions of a strong and intrusive central government.

Where they once fought to remove the shackles on individual rights, liberals began to call for more restrictions on those rights. They no longer wished to control and limit government, but instead strove to control and limit men and women. Hence, the New Deal, the Great Society, the welfare state, and countless bureaucracies and agencies were all created with wealth taken from the people. This was extolled as progress by liberals.

Classical liberals were appalled. Those who believed in the values of limited government rejected the word liberal and began to call themselves conservatives or libertarians. But the damage done to the word liberal was so complete that eventually even the big government types jettisoned the label of liberal. Big-spending politicians now avoid the word like the Black Death. "Call us progressive," they whine. Or try "compassionate." Anything to distance themselves from the consequences of their disastrous economic policies.

In Europe, the Liberal parties remain relatively true to the historical origins of the free market movement. There the high-tax, high-inflation, big-government politicians march under a more honest banner. They call themselves socialists.

Taxpayers Can Avoid Expensive Penalty Costs

Don't be frivolous with the IRS. It can cost you $500. If you send in your tax return with nothing but your name, that frivolous. Or if you attach a note to your return saying you believe the constitution forbids the collection of an income tax, the IRS regards that as frivolous. On the other hand, if you willfully attempt to evade paying income tax, there's nothing frivolous about that. That could get you five years in jail.

To stay on the right side of the law, you should know about IRS rules and penalties covering a failure to prepare your income tax return correctly, according to the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs).

To put it simply, three things can happen if you don't abide by federal tax laws. You may be charged penalties that range from half of one per cent to 50 per cent of your tax deficiency, depending on the seriousness of the violation. You may be charged interest on top of the penalty. (Ironically, the interest on tax deficiencies is tax-deductible. The current interest rate is 11 per cent.) The third alternative is to spend time in jail. Though criminal prosecution is reserved for only the most serious violations, it may be comforting to know that federal prisons generally have accommodations superior to county or state correctional facilities.

The most common penalty taxpayers face is for late filing. More than 13 million 1982 individual returns were filed late. Late filers are charged a five per cent penalty for each month their liability remains unpaid, for up to five months. So on a $100 liability, a late filer must pay $5 for the first month, $10 for two months and up to $25 for five months. After five months, the penalty is reduced to half of one per cent. Thus, after six months the penalty on a $100 unpaid liability is $25.50.

To avoid late penalties, CPAs advise taxpayers to get a four-month extension on your filing date by sending in form 4868 by April 16 and paying the estimated amount of taxes you owe.

A new penalty concerns social security numbers. Many taxpayers have already received notification from banks requesting their social security number. Failure to provide it to a bank or other reporting institution can result in a $50 penalty and you will be subject to automatic withholding on 20 per cent of your interest and dividend income. Failure to provide the IRS with your social security number means a $5 penalty. That's part of the federal government's effort to clamp down on those who underreport interest or dividend income. By the way, you could be hit with a $500 penalty if you falsely report interest and dividend income.

Penalties for filing late or not providing a social security number are clear cut cases for the IRS. Other cases, however, are more subjective, and the facts surrounding a particular instance determine the size and severity of the penalty. As an example, consider the way the IRS looks at negligence and fraud.

Fraud, to the IRS, is the intentional violation of tax law. If a substantial amount of money is involved or if there is a long history of illegal activity, criminal tax fraud is punishable by up to five years in jail. The penalty can also monetary, and you may be ordered to pay a penalty equal to 50 per cent of the liability — on top of the tax owed. Where taxpayers have defrauded the government but the violation is determined to be less heinous, you may face a penalty for negligence. This is the more common type of malfeasance discovered in returns.

Negligence occurs when a taxpayer unintentionally but incorrectly takes improper deductions or otherwise understates tax liability. The penalties for negligence vary according to the seriousness of the offense. In most cases the penalty is either 10 per cent of the underpayment or $5,000, whichever is greater. In addition, you must pay what the IRS says you originally owed, plus any interest that has accrued.

Scout Expo Is Slated April 29

Annual Voyageur Trails district Boy scout exposition will be held Sunday, April 29, from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Thief River Falls sports arena, according to Dave Olin, chairman of the show and member of the Thief River Falls Elks, which is organizing its second scout expo.

Participation chairman John Nicholson of Thief River Falls indicates that all scouting packs, troops and explorer posts in the district have been invited to participate in the exposition and that this will be the only exposition held in the Voyageur Trails district this year.

Theme of the exposition is "Catch the Scouting Spirit." Purpose of an exposition is to give all scouts an opportunity to demonstrate to the public some of the scouting skills they have learned. The show is an opportunity to see scouting in action as the arena will be filled with action booths and other displays of scout activity.

In addition to the local and area scouts, there will be participating Beaver scouts, Cub scouts and Boy scouts from the Seven Oaks and St. Boniface districts of the greater Winnipeg region Boy Scouts of Canada.

Admission to the exposition is $1 per adult with children under 18 admitted free. Tickets will be available from Cub scouts, Boy scouts and Explorers throughout the district after March 31. Thief River Falls scouters are reminded to be at Zion Lutheran church to pick up their tickets on March 31 between 10 a.m. and 12 noon.

Scouters in other towns in the district may pick their tickets up at Zion church on March 31 or will receive them in the mail shortly after that date, according to Tim Loeffler, ticket chairman. Show chairman Olin urges the public to buy a ticket and see scouting in action on April 29. Olin also thanks the United Way, the sustaining membership enrollment and the communities of the Voyageur Trails district for their continued support of scouting on behalf of the boys of the district.

Voyageur Trails district is part of the Northern Lights council of the Boy Scouts of America and encompasses an area from the Canadian border to Mahnomen and Norman counties. Tom Przybylski serves as its district scout executive.

Krohns Honored As Farm Couple By University

Duane and Mavis Krohn, Viking, were honored as Marshall County's outstanding farm couple by the University of Minnesota, March 15 in St. Paul.

The Krohns were honored at a banquet where farm families from throughout Minnesota were recognized for their achievements. Farm family of the year program is under sponsorship of the University of Minnesota, college of agriculture.

Krohns operate a dairy farm in Viking township, and have an annual herd average of 18,000 pounds of milk on their holstein dairy cattle.

Duane is a DHIA board member of the Pennington county association, past president of the Land-O-Lakes board, past president of Zion Lutheran church, county extension committee member, past school board chairman, watershed board member and 4-H leader.

Mavis serves as Zion Lutheran church Ladies Aid president and a 4-H leader.

Family members include Rebecca, married to Steve Mickelson who farms with the Krohns; Marge, a graduate student at Western Michigan; Lynne, a senior at Moorhead State University; Karen, attending NDSU; and Ken, a student at Marshall County Central high school.

CLOSEST THING TO A FLOOD which is likely to be experienced in this area this year barring heavy rains took place early this week south of Viking. A beaver dam which had plugged Judicial Ditch 14 about a mile south of Viking last fall created an ice buildup which prevented water flow even when the dam was dynamited this spring. In addition, two 60-inch culverts (at lower left in the photo above) which carry water from the ditch under a township road were plugged with ice and snow. A backhoe operated by Wayne Peters was used Tuesday morning to open one of the culverts and cut the east-west township road to facilitate the flow. Water spread across farmland to the south, then spilled over a low spot in the north-south township road. Although farmsteads of Elroy Jensen, Ernest T. Melvie and Raymond Drotts were threatened with flooding Monday, water level was receding rapidly after the culvert was opened Tuesday. Water from this point flows northwest to an outlet into the Snake river which flows through Warren. Flooding is expected to be minimal in this area due to little snowfall throughout the winter and a gradual snow melt with virtually no additional precipitation. Most snow has disappeared except in shaded areas.

FOREIGN INTEREST in the rotating antenna mount developed and manufactured in Thief River Falls by Polar Research, Inc., has been expressed by Jean-Louis Benard of L'Industrielle Boraine in Quievrain, Belgium. Benard (center) visited Thief River Falls Friday to meet with the product's developer Gary Ellingson (left), vice president and engineer, and Norman Peterson, president. Benard, whose company manufactures poles and a hydraulic lifter for aluminum lighting standards, believes the Polar unit would be a good addition to his units for surveillance systems. He made arrangements to receive a unit for display at a show in Singapore in mid-May and Ellingson has been invited to attend the event. He first learned of the unit through a friend and saw it at a show in Orlando, FL. Benard said he sees "fantastic opportunities" for the unit with many applications and looks for world acceptance of the product which will attract quite a bit of business.

Cemetery Rate Increase Approved By City Council

Thief River Falls city council had a relatively quiet meeting last night in city auditorium, approving rate increases suggested by the cemetery commission, salary increases for the chief and assistant chief of police, and a number of sign and zoning matters in addition to routine business.

Request for a cemetery rate increase had been previously referred to the finance committee, which approved the proposal. Some members of the council, notably Alderman Bill Penning and Milan Borsheim, questioned whether the rate increase was necessary, suggesting that perpetual care funds might be used for maintenance expenses, and salary cuts accomplished.

Orville Fairhaugen, chairman of the cemetery commission, explained that perpetual care funds were set aside as 25 per cent of the fees charged, and were intended to pay for maintenance when the cemetery was full and no more money was coming in. "When the cemetery gets full, who'll pay the bill?" he questioned.

Arnt Aune, secretary-treasurer of the cemetery commission, explained that not more than five per cent of perpetual care funds could be used for maintenance purposes, with the money intended to provide operating funds from the interest it generated as an investment. He also explained that the commission based its proposed rates on costs to operate, noting that the last rate increase had been made in May of 1980. Although rates are reviewed annually, he projected that the increase would be sufficient for three to five years.

As approved by the council on a 5-2 vote (Alderman Penning and Borsheim opposed), the rates would increase, effective May 1, from $150 to $200 for a single grave, from $300 to $400 for two graves with a marker, from $400 to $500 for two graves with monument, from $700 to $800 for four graves, from $1,400 to $1,600 for eight graves, and from $50 to $75 for baby land. In addition, opening rates were raised from $40 to $50 for baby land, from $100 to $150 for adults, and from $150 to $200 on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Finance committee also recommended additional salary increases for 1984 and 1985 for the chief of police and the assistant chief of police, based on what was perceived as a need to maintain a sufficient difference in pay between them and police

Other contestants were Catherine Poole (left), free lance court reporter and Joan M. Walker, founder of "Joan Walker Couture", a clothing design and manufacturing business. ## Tornado Drill Scheduled For Area Thursday

To increase awareness of tornado preparedness and improve communications to shorten reaction time, a tornado drill will be conducted Thursday throughout Minnesota.

At 1:10 p.m. a mock tornado watch message will be sent over the national weather service and NOAA weather radio, initiated by the national weather service in conjunction with the Minnesota division of emergency services and the Minnesota state patrol.

State patrol warning points will receive the message first and fan-out will be initiated to all points immediately. County and city officials will begin their own fan-out procedures and activate spotter groups.

At 1:40 p.m. a mock warning message will be sent out and county and city sirens will be sounded. Radio and television stations will transmit the mock watch and warning messages in the same manner as they would if it was an actual emergency. Communities, schools, hospitals, nursing homes and businesses are urged to conduct drills. An end of test message will be issued at 2:10 p.m.

All agencies are asked to evaluate their readiness based on success of the drill and take necessary corrective action prior to this year's severe weather season.

Sheriff Charles Richards of Pennington county encourages public participation and cooperation in the warning test.

Permit Might Be Needed To Buy Chemicals

Cemetery Rate Increase Gets Council Okay

Since the contract previously approved with the police officer's union grants sergeants an annual salary of $22,354 effective January 1, 1984, increasing to $23,940 effective January 1, 1985, committee recommended raising the salary of the assistant chief to $23,930 in 1984, and to $25,440 in 1985. Chief's slary was raised to $27,240 in 1984 and to $29,124 in 1985. (City finance officer Roger Delap notes that the supervisory personnel draw a straight salary, regardless of hours worked, while officers on duty are paid on an hourly basis, and may be given additional pay for working over 40 hours.)

Recommendation from the Pennington county safety council that "no parking" signs be removed on the 200 block of North Kendall Avenue drew quite a bit of discussion before being passed on a 4-3 vote. Request for removal was made by representatives of the Evangelical Free church, seeking to improve parking. They presented a petition signed by residents along the street, granting approval.

Alderman Bill Penning voiced objections, on the basis that traffic would be reduced to one lane with parking on both sides. Police Chief Ken Froschheiser noted that all other streets in the area were the same width, with few problems experienced, and recommended approval of the action. On a roll-call vote, three opposing votes were cast by Penning, Clayton Restad and Ken Murphy.

Based on planning commission recommendations, council denied a request from Paul Bellerud for a sign variance which would have allowed him to construct a billboard type sign at the south end of the Holiday Motel, on Highway 59 South. Bellerud's intention was to construct a sign on which space could be rented for messages to be changed on a daily basis. Denial was based on several factors, including potential distraction of drivers and problems of setting a precedent. Alderman Penning cast the lone vote for approval of a variance.

Two variances were approved by council, based on planning commission recommendations, with one allowing Northwest Beverage to expand their present building to the south. That variance would allow construction within two feet of their property line, which adjoins the Land O' Lakes parking lot on the west side of Pennington Avenue. Other variance allowed Richard Anderson to build onto his residence at 317 South Crocker Avenue, with the addition coming within one foot of his property line.

Bids were reviewed and approved for purchase of a street department truck, with contract awarded to the low bidders: Ray's GMC, Fertile, at $13,111.67 for the chassis; and Bert's, East Grand Forks, at $3,882 for the box and hoist. Three bids were received for the chassis and two for the box and hoist.

Bids for 34 pad-mount transformers requested by the utilities committee were awarded to Westinghouse Electric Supply Company, Fargo, ND., at a cost of $42,644.

Council also approved a resolution of support for Rick and Steve Nordhagen, as they seek government approval for a potential new recycling business which they say could provide alternatives to use of sanitary landfills.

Next regular meeting of the city council is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 10, and will be followed by a hearing on the 1984 street improvement project.

JUDICIAL DITCH 14, located about a mile south of Viking at the point pictured above, created minor flooding conditions early this week. A beaver dam blocked the ditch last fall, according to Ernest Melvie who farms in the area, causing water which would normally have flowed out of the ditch to back up and freeze into a heavy ice formation. Although the beaver dam was dynamited, the ice restricted water flow. The whirlpool in the center of the photo is where water is being drawn down through a 60-inch culvert to continue northwest on its way to the Snake river outlet. Drop from the ditch shown to the water level in the ditch on the north side of the township road is about four to five feet. There are two culverts through the township road but only one was open when this Times photo was taken Tuesday. This photo is taken looking to the east. Trees and brush in the ditch also restricted the water flow.

Ethics Of Soil Conservation Is Meeting Topic

Soil conservation as an ethical, moral and economic matter will be the topic of two public meetings scheduled from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at Messiah Lutheran church in Roseau, and from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Presbyterian church in Hallock, on Sunday, April 8.

Meetings are being co-sponsored by the ministerial associations of Hallock and Roseau, the soil and water conservation district boards of Roseau and Kittson counties, and the Agassiz environmental education council.

Purpose of the meetings is to pose questions about the care and use of the land and to relate that ethic to public policy. Sponsors hope to draw people to the sessions who as individuals make daily decisions about how the land in their area will be used.

Meetings will feature speakers from the land stewardship project, a program funded by the Minnesota governor's council on rural development, several private foundations, several midwest religious denominations, and the national Catholic rural life conference.

Land stewardship project has conducted a series of public programs on land stewardship in 14 high-erosion counties in Minnesota and 15 counties in Iowa. In some counties the meetings have led to changes in county policy and efforts to influence state policy. Project has two purposes: to increase public awareness of soil erosion and farmland loss to development; and to intensify commitment to solving these problems.

Programs will begin with a film entitled "The Price of Abundance" and will be followed by exchange of ideas among participants.

For further information, contact: Betty Johnson, chairman, Agassiz environmental education council, 463-2161; Rev. Bryce Johnson, United Methodist church, 463-1057; Rev. James A. Jacobson, Presbyterian church, 843-2196; or Pat Collins, Soil Conservation Service, 843-2619 or 463-1862.

D-Day Quitters Prize Winners Are Announced

Several former smokers will be receiving extra incentives to help them reaffirm their commitment to a nonsmoking lifestyle, announced Minnesota D-Day ("Don't Smoke") chairman Terry F. Pechacek, Ph. D. All of those prize-winners quit smoking for the last Minnesota D-Day (November 17, 1983) and haven't smoked since. They were chosen in a random drawing from among D-Day quitters across the state. In order to qualify to win a prize, all finalists have to have been a smoker for at least six months and quit smoking immediately prior to entering the contest. A chemical test was also administered, to determine that they abstained from all forms of nicotine use since D-Day, and two "witnesses" had to verify that each person met the contest requirements.

Winners are: grand prize (one week vacation in Florida, provided by New Mech companies and Republic Airlines): Bob Fenson, Bemidji; runner-up prizes (weekend at Ruttger's Lodge, Deerwood): Pamela Sartor, Fairbault; (weekend at the Radisson Arrowwood, Alexandria): Leo Hofmeister, Solway; weekend at Madden's resport, Brainerd); Marie Peterson, Blaine; (four tickets to an '84-'85 season Guthrie theatre production): Mike Shipka, Pengilly. All the prizes in the D-Day "Quitters' Bonanza" were donated by the above firms and resorts.

D-Day is co-sponsored by the American lung association of Minnesota and the American cancer society, Minnesota division.

Non-Filers May Qualify For Rent Refunds

This year, regardless of your income, look into all state and federal tax credits or refunds which are available to you. For example, whether you are a renter or a homeowner, you may be eligible for a property tax refund even if you have not earned enough to file a tax return. Check the 1983 gold-colored Minnesota homeowner and renter property tax refund instructions to see if you qualify.

If you rent, your landlord should have given you a form CRP by January 31 showing the share of property tax you paid in 1983. To apply for the refund, you must attach this to your signed and completed refund form. If your landlord won't give you the form CRP or if information on it is incorrect, you can get your own rent paid affidavit from the Minnesota department of revenue. If your landlord needs help in filling out the new form CRP, he or she can call the department of revenue, or get its bulletin 50, the "Landlord's Guide to the CRP".

If you are a homeowner, this year you may need a copy of your statement of property tax payable in 1983 as well as the new statement. If you do, and you didn't keep a copy of the 1983 tax statement you attached to last year's refund form, for a slight charge, you can either get a copy of that return from the department of revenue, or get a copy of that tax statement from your county office which keeps noncurrent tax information.

Check the back of your state tax forms for numbers to call about state tax information, or about free tax assistance for elderly, low-income or disabled persons. For federal tax information, call 291-1422 in the Twin City metro area; outside that area call 800-424-1040 toll-free. Asking questions may save you money!

Mn/DOT Stand Helps Women Win Contracts

Commissioner Richard P. Braun of the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) has established a new position responsible for increasing the number of contracts awarded to minority and women-owned businesses.

Sandra Vargas was named assistant to the commissioner for equal employment opportunity (EEO) contract management March 12.

Before joining Mn-DOT, Vargas was director of the women-minority business enterprise program for the city of Minneapolis since 1981. Previously, she was a consultant to small businesses with the Minnesota department of energy and economic development.

Vargas will direct Mn-DOT's effort to achieve the 10 per cent goal established by the federal highway administration (FHWA) for 1984. The goal is to award 10 per cent of the federally funded highway and mass transit contracts to firms owned by racial and ethnic minorities. She also will lead Mn-DOT's effort to achieve its goal of awarding two per cent of state and federally funded contracts to firms owned by women.

Her responsibilities include increasing the number of contracts awarded to disadvantaged firms and conducting an outreach program to assist minority and women-owned firms to become certified to bid on contracts.

Emphasizing that racial and ethnic minorities comprise only 3.4 per cent of all Minnesotans, Vargas said, "Outreach to minorities and women is essential to attaining our goals."

She said that means encouraging minority and women contractors to seek business with the state or to develop the kinds of businesses that can.

"The long-term goal of our program is to help firms owned by minorities and women become more competitive. The percentage goal is one method to help achieve this purpose," she said.

NEATLY TRIMMED was this large aspen tree felled by beaver working along Judicial Ditch 14 south of Viking. Heavy branches from the tree were cut by the beavers and used for their dam and food cache in the judicial ditch. Back-up water from the dam caused heavy ice to form during the winter and contributed to a minor flood in the area early this week. A number of trees in and near the ditch appeared to have been recently cut by the animals despite the fact that the dam was dynamited this spring.

April 1 Set As C-Day For Area Cancer Society

"Volunteers of the Pennington county unit of the American Cancer society will be waging a door-to-door battle against cancer during C-Day on April 1," declared Ernie Swanson, residential drive chairman of the 1984 cancer crusade.

C-Days are the door-to-door aspect of the annual month-long educational and fund-raising campaign of the American Cancer society, when volunteers call on their neighbors and friends to distribute information about cancer.

"This year, trained volunteers will be carrying information on the two most common and deadly forms of cancer," Swanson said.

A folder offering a "Quick Test on Cancer Risks for Lung, Colon and Rectum" will be handed out to all residents.

"This short test may help save some lives here in Pennington county," Swanson added. "The test helps people find out how lifestyle, medical history and health habits could affect their risk of getting lung and coolorectal cancer."

C-Days also will provide an opportunity for people to contribute toward support of the society's year-round cancer control program which includes research, public and professional education, and patient services and rehabilitation.

"C-Days are important to the entire community. We're urging everyone to become involved. We need enough people to make sure that every home is visited. Become a C-Day volunteer by contacting the American Cancer society at 378-4262," Swanson said.

Free Handbook Offers Product Complaint Tips

Your new high tech laser-powered digital multi-function state-of-the-art veggie slicer doesn't cut the mustard or the onions? You can't very well complain to the operator who stood by and took your order and your $9.95 after that 3 a.m. late movie last month. But you can find help from a handy reference book for consumers now available from the department of health and human services.

In conjunction with national consumers week, April 23-29, the consumer's resource handbook has been published listing numerous tips on how, where, and to whom to send your product complaints.

Tips on how to write an effective letter of complaint, a list of better business bureaus, state, county and city consumer protection offices, and corporate consumer contacts are only a few of the consumer hints covered in the handbook.

Whether your complaint concerns a new or used car, an appliance, a public utility, or a government service, the handbook will help guide you to a solution.

President Reagan proclaimed the theme for national consumers week as "Consumers Mean Business." The proclamation cites Americans' "greater purchasing power" as a reason for consumers to have access to the latest information.

To obtain a free copy of the Consumer's Resource Handbook, write to: Department of Health and Human Services, 35th floor, 300 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Mn/DOT Stand Helps Women Win Contracts

Commissioner Richard P. Braun of the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) has established a new position responsible for increasing the number of contracts awarded to minority and women-owned businesses.

Sandra Vargas was named assistant to the commissioner for equal employment opportunity (EEO) contract management March 12.

Before joining Mn-DOT, Vargas was director of the women-minority business enterprise program for the city of Minneapolis since 1981. Previously, she was a consultant to small businesses with the Minnesota department of energy and economic development.

Vargas will direct Mn-DOT's effort to achieve the 10 per cent goal established by the federal highway administration (FHWA) for 1984. The goal is to award 10 per cent of the federally funded highway and mass transit contracts to firms owned by racial and ethnic minorities. She also will lead Mn-DOT's effort to achieve its goal of awarding two per cent of state and federally funded contracts to firms owned by women.

Her responsibilities include increasing the number of contracts awarded to disadvantaged firms and conducting an outreach program to assist minority and women-owned firms to become certified to bid on contracts.

Emphasizing that racial and ethnic minorities comprise only 3.4 per cent of all Minnesotans, Vargas said, "Outreach to minorities and women is essential to attaining our goals."

She said that means encouraging minority and women contractors to seek business with the state or to develop the kinds of businesses that can.

"The long-term goal of our program is to help firms owned by minorities and women become more competitive. The percentage goal is one method to help achieve this purpose," she said.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

NEATLY TRIMMED was this large aspen tree felled by beaver working along Judicial Ditch 14 south of Viking. Heavy branches from the tree were cut by the beavers and used for their dam and food cache in the judicial ditch. Back-up water from the dam caused heavy ice to form during the winter and contributed to a minor flood in the area early this week. A number of trees in and near the ditch appeared to have been recently cut by the animals despite the fact that the dam was dynamited this spring.

April 1 Set As C-Day For Area Cancer Society

"Volunteers of the Pennington county unit of the American Cancer society will be waging a door-to-door battle against cancer during C-Day on April 1," declared Ernie Swanson, residential drive chairman of the 1984 cancer crusade.

C-Days are the door-to-door aspect of the annual month-long educational and fund-raising campaign of the American Cancer society, when volunteers call on their neighbors and friends to distribute information about cancer.

"This year, trained volunteers will be carrying information on the two most common and deadly forms of cancer," Swanson said.

A folder offering a "Quick Test on Cancer Ricks for Lung, Colon and Rectum" will be handed out to all residents.

"This short test may help save some lives here in Pennington county," Swanson added. "The test helps people find out how lifestyle, medical history and health habits could affect their risk of getting lung and coolorectal cancer."

C-Days also will provide an opportunity for people to contribute toward support of the society's year-round cancer control program which includes research, public and professional education, and patient services and rehabilitation.

"C-Days are important to the entire community. We're urging everyone to become involved. We need enough people to make sure that every home is visited. Become a C-Day volunteer by contacting the American Cancer society at 378-4262," Swanson said.

Free Handbook Offers Product Complaint Tips

Your new high tech laser-powered digital multi-function state-of-the-art veggie slicer doesn't cut the mustard or the onions? You can't very well complain to the operator who stood by and took your order and your $9.95 after that 3 a.m. late movie last month. But you can find help from a handy reference book for consumers now available from the department of health and human services.

In conjunction with national consumers week, April 23-29, the consumer's resource handbook has been published listing numerous tips on how, where, and to whom to send your product complaints.

Tips on how to write an effective letter of complaint, a list of better business bureaus, state, county and city consumer protection offices, and corporate consumer contacts are only a few of the consumer hints covered in the handbook.

Whether your complaint concerns a new or used car, an appliance, a public utility, or a government service, the handbook will help guide you to a solution.

President Reagan proclaimed the theme for national consumers week as "Consumers Mean Business." The proclamation cites Americans' "greater purchasing power" as a reason for consumers to have access to the latest information.

To obtain a free copy of the Consumer's Resource Handbook, write to: Department of Health and Human Services, 35th floor, 300 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Six PCA Board Reps Attend Credit Meeting

Directors and managers of agricultural cooperatives, Federal Land Bank associations (FLBAs), and Production Credit associations (CAs) throughout Minnesota gathered in Minneapolis March 22 to 23 for a farm credit services annual meeting for Minnesota stockholders.

Representatives of the Production Credit association of Thief River Falls attending the meeting were Dona Rock, chairman; Edward G. Moe, Lenord Swanson, Ronald Haugen and Glen Hammer, directors; and Harlow C. Johnson, president.

Roger L. Schlader, chief operating officer and president, reported that borrowing by farmers and cooperatives was up slightly in 1983. The 1983 increase in loan volume was the smallest in the last five years, however, due to the condition of the economy and conservative use of credit by farmers and cooperatives.

"We planned for decreased loan activity and actually reduced our loan spreads as much as possible in response to the financial difficulties many of our farmers face," Schlader said. "Each of our organizations continues to maintain a sound financial base for the future."

In Minnesota, the amount of loans outstanding increased for the FLBAs from $2.57 billion to $2.7 billion in 1983, while outstanding bank for cooperatives loan volume increased from $2.5 billion to $3.2 billion. PCA outstanding loan volume slipped from $1.09 billion to $1.04 billion in Minnesota, in part reflecting lowered production spending as a result of the Payment-in-Kind (PIK) program.

Much of this two-day meeting focused on changes in the agricultural lending industry expected to result from the long-term agricultural economic outlook and deregulation of the banking industry.

"Farm credit services can't take a wait-and-see approach to the changes which are shaping a new, agricultural credit world," Schlader said. "We must develop an ability to strategically plan our future." Farm credit services and the PCAs and FLBAs are currently developing a series of changes.

"The economic and political word we farmers do business in will be rapidly changing," Philip Hein, a farmer from Stratford, Wisconsin, and Chairman of the Farm Credit Board of St. Paul said. "We have to manage change. . . success in the future will be determined by one's ability to anticipate and adapt to change before it occurs."

Burgee Amdahl, chief executive officer, outlined the organization's plans for meeting the financial needs of agricultural producers and cooperatives.

"Farmers have been optimistically looking for, and finding, better ways to do things. . . not just to survive. . . but to pass their farm to the next generation in better shape than they found it," Amdahl said. "Although the present economy is bringing a lot of stress to everyone, we should also remember that it is during time of stress that farmers, their cooperatives and their institutions make the changes that ultimately assure their success."

Farm Credit Services, St. Paul, is an agricultural lending cooperative. It is the seventh of twelve districts in the nationwide farm credit system, operating in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. Each state will be holding an annual stockholders meeting in March.

Stockholders of farm credit services in St. Paul are the farmer-cooperatives, the FLBAs, and the PCAs. The farmers who borrow from the FLBAs and PCAs or are members of cooperatives are, in turn, their stockholders.

Moe Authors Farm Bureau Bill On Taxes

In testimony recently before the Senate tax committee, Minnesota Farm Bureau president Merlyn Lokensgard called for passage of the Farm Bureau property tax bill, authored by Senator Roger Moe in the Senate and Representative Glen Anderson in the House.

Terming property taxes the number one issue for Farm Bureau in the 1984 legislative session, Lokensgard called for increases in the agriculture school credit portion of property taxes. The Farm Bureau bill calls for:

+ Increasing the credit from 29 per cent to 30 per cent of the gross taxes paid on the first 320 acres;

+ Increasing the credit from 13 per cent to 20 per cent of the gross taxes paid on the next 320 acres;

+ Increasing the credit from 10 per cent to 15 per cent of the gross tax on the remainder of the farm.

The bill also calls for eliminating the $2,000 cap (maximum credit) allowed under current law.

"Property taxes are soaring in Minnesota, and one reason is the revised formula for figuring the ag school credit. Farm Bureau's number one issue this year is property taxes, and we feel that increasing the credit on the ag school portion of a farmer's taxes makes the most sense," Lokensgard said.

"With the price of farmland having lowered in value about 10 per cent from mid-1982 to mid-1983, this is sorely needed," he added.

Senator Roger Moe, commenting on the bill, said that "this bill attempts to address some of the major concerns of the farming community, and we anticipate vigorous discussion. Property tax relief is needed in 1984, and this could be the means to get it done."

Farm Bureau figures the cost to the state for this increased credit amounts to $20.6 million annually. "With a large, expected surplus, now is the time for the legislature to grant some property tax relief to farmers, and we feel this is the vehicle to accomplish it," Lokensgard said.

Tips Given For Property Tax Refunds

This spring, regardless of your income, look into all state and federal tax credits and refunds that may be available to you. You may be eligible for a direct payment even if you have not earned enough to file an income tax return.

For example, as a Minnesota homeowner or renter, you may be entitled to a property tax refund. This refund was designed to ease the property tax burden, especially for persons who pay a larger share of their income in property taxes either directly as homeowners, or indirectly through rent. In fact, this year a special property tax refund has been added for homeowners earning under $40,000 whose property taxes increased more than 20 per cent in 1984. Use the 1983 gold-colored homeowner and renter property tax refund instructions and forms to see if you are eligible.

If you rented for all or part of 1983 in a building on which real estate tax is paid, file for a refund by attaching a signed rent certificate (form CRP) to your signed and completed property tax refund form. Your landlord should have given you a form CRP by January 31, showing the share of property tax you paid in 1983. If your landlord won't give you one, or if it is incorrect, you can get a rent paid affidavit from the department of revenue and attach it, instead. If your landlord needs help in filling out this year's form CRP, he or she can call that department for information, or get its bulletin 50, the "Landlord's Guide to the CRP".

If you are a homeowner, you may need a copy of your statement of property tax payable in 1983 which you attached to last year's refund return. If you do, and don't have a copy, for a slight charge you can either get a copy of that return from the department of revenue, or get a copy of that tax statement from the county office in your area which keeps non-current tax information.

If you are married and lived in 1983 with your spouse in your home or in an apartment, you can apply for only one refund between you. If you shared rent in 1983 with a roommate, each of you may apply for a refund. Your CRP forms should show you each as paying an equal share of the rent and property tax paid for your unit. If you own and live in a home with someone not your spouse, both of you may file for your share of the property tax refund.

File your return by August 31 to avoid a late filing penalty. All renters, including senior citizens and disabled persons, will receive their refund checks on or about August 15 or within 60 days of filing their return, whichever is later. Homeowners, including senior citizens and disabled persons, will receive their refund checks by the end of September or, if the returns are filed after August 31, within 60 days.

You should also look into other tax credits available. For example, if you are not someone else's dependent, look into the low income alternative tax to see if it may reduce your Minnesota tax. Or, if your earned income in 1983 was less than $10,000 and you have a dependent child living with you, check your federal tax instructions to see if you are eligible for the earned income credit. If you are, this credit — which can be as high as $500 — can be applied to reduce your federal tax or it can be paid to you as a refund even if no tax was withheld from your pay.

Other allowable credits include those for child and disabled dependent care, for homemakers, for elderly persons, and for persons with certain disabilities. If you need help there may be a free tax assistance center near your home which serves elderly, handicapped and low-income persons. Or you may call the following numbers: for state tax information, cal 296-3781 in the twin city metro area; outside that area call 800-652-9094 toll-free, or call 612-297-3730 for a 24 hour recording. For federal tax information, call 291-1422 in the twin city metro area; outside that area call 800-424-1040 toll-free. Asking questions about your taxes may save you money!

SENIOR SKATERS who have participated in the Thief River Falls recreational skating association program through their senior year in high school will have several roles in the association's "Evening in Paris" skating show Saturday and Sunday. Shelly Minar (left) and Kristie Leander have been with the program for a number of years and are among the few who have continued throughout high school. The ninth annual "Fantasy on Ice" will be presented at 7 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday in the sports arena.

GOLD. An Investment Opportunity for the 80's

Throughout history, gold has been a treasure of lasting value. Its qualities of durability and luster have given gold a special appeal in the eyes of many investors.

And in the unpredictable economic environment of the 1980's, gold may offer attractive hedging opportunities as well as serve as a vehicle for speculation.

Today, gold continues to attract interest as an important economic barometer. The price of gold is linked to such complex factors as interest rates, mining costs, political events and speculative rumors.

Farm Finance Course Taken By 10 Couples

Ten Marshall county farm couples recently completed an intensive farm financial planning workshop series, offered through the Marshall County Extension Service.

Those attending were involved in developing various long range planning options as well as putting together a current cash flow projection for the 1984 crop year. The new computer located in the Marshall county extension office was used as a tool in the three all-day workshop sessions.

Instructors for the course included Dick Hawkins, extension specialist in farm management at the University of Minnesota; Bill Penning, area extension agent farm management; and Ray Thompson, county extension director.

MCCC Hockey May Expand

Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) hockey is apparently alive and well, with expansion expected to add one and possibly two schools to the six-team league for the 1984-85 season.

Vermilion has indicated it plans to field its first intercollegiate hockey team in the Ely-based school next winter, joining current MCCC members Northland of Thief River Falls, University of Minnesota-Crookston, Mesabi of Virginia, Hibbing, Rainy River of International Falls and Rochester.

In addition to Vermilion, Fergus Falls is also reportedly considering adding hockey next winter.

That would leave only Itasca of Grand Rapids and Brainerd among the northern schools without an MCCC hockey team. Itasca fielded a team when the league was first formed for the 1970-71 season and played for five years, but dropped the sport after the 1974-75 season.

Twin Cities area schools Lakewood of White Bear Lake and Anoka-Ramsey were also briefly hockey-playing schools in the 1970's. Lakewood was among the first-year participants in 1970-71 and played through the 1973-74 season. Anoka-Ramsey fielded a team for the 1975-76 and 1976-77 seasons.

Only Northland, Rainy River and Hibbing have sponsored hockey through each of the league's 14 season. UMC joined in 1971-72, Mesabi in 1972-73 and Rochester in 1978-79.

There was some speculation that MCCC hockey might have been struggling for survival in the recently-completed 1983-84 season. Of the six members, only UMC and Hibbing fielded complete teams. Northland, Rainy River, Mesabi and Rochester all had trouble because of player shortages. Northland, in fact, forfeited its final regular season series at Rochester when illness and injuries took too much of a bite out of an already small squad.

League officials, though, apparently feel the small squads didn't mean the sport was dying at the schools. The cycle, they figure, can easily go the other way, and the interest must still be there if additional schools are thinking about fielding teams for the future.

Northland, meanwhile, is in search of a new hockey coach following the resignation of Tony Dorn, Jr. last week. Anyone interested in the position should contact Ken Wiebolt at the school.

Miscellaneous

+ Thief River Falls' Jim Hallamek is a member of the Hamline University baseball team that was the first collegiate squad to play a baseball game at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis. The Pipers beat Augsburg 10-1 and 9-5 in a doubleheader at the dome March 17, then swept St. John's University 17-13 and 5-2 the next day. Hamline will make two more appearances in the dome this week, playing St. John's Thursday and St. Cloud State Friday in a pair of doubleheaders. Hallamek is a freshman infielder-outfielder-catcher for the Pipers, who were 17-7 a year ago.

+ Mitch Rustad, a senior from Thief River Falls, leads the University of North Dakota tennis team with a 14-1 individual record this spring. Rustad has been playing No. 2 singles for the Sioux behind Dean Rudrud, but moved into the top position last week when Rudrud was sidelined with a knee injury. UND, 13-2 overall, will face three opponents this weekend in the Grand Forks Tennis Centre, meeting Carlson at 4 p.m. Saturday, St. Cloud State at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and Augustana at 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

+ Park Rapids football coach Andy McCarty has been named head coach of the Outstate team for the annual Minnesota high school all-star football game, scheduled to be played July 28. McCarty led the Panthers to the finals of the 1983 Class A state playoffs where they lost to Hutchinson 36-14.

+ Lincoln high school graduate Tom Kenville, who signed a year ago to attend school and play hockey at Clarkston, has transferred to Lowell University where he will join Scott Wiebolt, another former Thief River Falls skater, on the ice next winter.

TAXIDERMY
TROPHY DEPOT

TROPHY RACKS from this area fared well in this year's Minnesota Deer Classic, held March 16, 17 and 18 in Minneapolis. With about 600 entries from all over the state competing, four of those earning ribbons were transported to the show by Neil Jacobson of Thief River Falls, whose taxidermy business is an official trophy depot for the event. Mounted head at left made the Minnesota record book for typical whitetails with over 158 points. It is owned by Ed Mattson and was shot by Orval Stennes in the Oklee-Trail area in 1938. Antlers at top center made Boone and Crockett records for non-typical whitetail with over 197 points. They are owned by Loren Vettleson, who shot the buck in the Oklee-Trail area in 1970. Mounted head on the right made Boone and Crockett records for non-typical whitetail with over 207 points. It is owned by Glenn Tasa, who shot the buck in the Oklee-Trail area in 1940. Antlers at lower right made Pope and Young (archery) records with over 160 points, and are owned by James C. Pederson of Newfolden, who shot the buck in 1983. Although Minnesota Wildlife Heritage Foundation charges a fee to enter deer and moose antlers in the contest, Jacobson measures and transports the trophies free of charge.

At Minnesota Deer Classic Contest . . .

Area Antlers Have High Scores

While economists might dispute the statement that there are a lot of big bucks hanging around this part of the country, area deer hunters know it's true. They've seen those bucks, both in the woods and hanging on the walls where hunters congregate.

Evidence of that fact was shown to the rest of the state during the second annual Minnesota Deer Classic, March 16, 17 and 18 at the National Guard Armory in Minneapolis, sponsored by the Minnesota Wildlife Heritage Foundation. Antlers from a number of trophy-size bucks taken in this area were entered in the record books during that event, according to Neil Jacobson, who served as an official measurer and trophy depot operator.

Participation in the deer classic is a natural for Jacobson, since wildlife trophies are his business. He operates North Country Taxidermy out of his home, approximately seven miles northeast of Thief River Falls. Rafters in his shop are lined with antlers waiting to be mounted for display.

As a trophy depot operator and official measurer for the Minnesota Deer Classic, Jake measures and scores antlers brought to his shop free of charge. Scores are based on a point system which takes into account such factors as number and length of tines, thickness of the base and sweep and spread of the beam.

If owners of antlers would like to enter them in the Minnesota deer classic, Jacobson also offers to transport them to the event and display them free of charge. Owners are responsible, however, for paying an entry fee to the Minnesota Wildlife Heritage Foundation. No additional charge is made for entering qualifying racks in the appropriate record books.

Only qualification for entry in the deer classic is that the animal must have been shot in Minnesota by a legal hunter. However, a special class exists for non-hunters, which might include antlers found in the woods, taken from road kills, or shed by pen-raised deer. Special classes exist for adults and youths, and deer taken with modern conventional firearms, muzzle loaders and bow and arrow. Classes also exist for whitetails, mule deer and moose. Deer may have been taken in any year, although a special class exists for animals taken during the immediate past season.

Among the qualifications for placement in the Minnesota record book are minimum point totals of 150 for firearm-killed typical whitetail, 170 for non-typical whitetail, 160 for moose, 125 for archery-killed typical whitetail, and 140 for non-typical whitetail.

Boone and Crockett records which are national, require 170 points for firearm-killed typical whitetail, 195 for non-typical whitetail and 195 for moose.

Pope and Young records, which are the archer's national equivalent of Boone and Crockett, require a minimum of 140 points for typical whitetails and 155 for non-typical whitetail.

Among the winners from this area were the top whitetail taken by archery in the state, with 161 points. That deer was shot near Strandquist in 1983 by Richard Hoff of Crookston.

Entered in the Boone and Crockett records were a non-typical whitetail with over 205 points, shot by Glenn Tasa in the Oklee Trail area in 1940; and another non-typical whitetail totaling over 197 points, taken in the same area by Loren Vettleson in 1970.

Entered in the Pope and Young records was a typical whitetail totaling nearly 161 points, which was killed by James C. Pederson of Newfolden in 1983.

Entered in the Minnesota record book were a typical whitetail totaling 157 points, taken by Jeff Davidson of Thief River Falls in 1983, near Wannaska; and another typical whitetail totaling nearly 159 points, taken by Orval Stennes in the Oklee-Trail area in 1983. That rack is owned by Ed Mattson.

Other trophy racks from the area which were entered in the deer classic included two typical whitetails taken by Arlie Brekke of Oklee in 1973, with point values of nearly 137 and 144; a typical whitetail scoring nearly 124 points, owned by Renae Vedbraaten of Thief River Falls (shot by her grandfather in 1928); and a moose scoring over 149 points, taken by LeRoy Reitmeier of Crookston in 1983.

"I feel the showing made by this area was pretty darn good when you consider the fact that there were about 600 entries in the deer classic," commented Jacobson, "But I

DNR NEWS

Two sport fishing organizations — Walleye Unlimited and the Northern Pike Association — have donated a pH meter to the Department of Natural Resources to assist the agency in detecting evidence of harm from acid rain.

Presentation of the equipment was made by Jim Blumberg, president of the Northern Pike Association and Bob DeVries, Walleye Unlimited president.

Accepting the donation on behalf of the DNR were fisheries specialists Ron Payer and Ron Lawrenz who thanked the groups for their valuable contribution towards the department's efforts to detect the first signs of acid rain problems in Minnesota Lakes.

Officials said the pH meter will be available for use statewide, primarily for monitoring waters in northern pike and walleye spawning areas

Birds Of Prey Exhibit

A unique portable collection of Minnesota's birds of prey, believed to be the only collection of its kind in the nation, has been created by the Department of Natural Resources nongame wildlife program and will be exhibited this summer at several Minnesota state parks.

Birds are specimens ranging from a golden eagle with a seven foot wing-spread to a tiny American kestrel. "The exhibit allows a closeup examination of our beautiful birds of prey, showing their identification marks and their special adaptations for survival," said Nongame Supervisor Carrol Henderson.

Birds are those found dead by the public and turned in to the Department of Natural Resources or the Raptor Research and Rehabilitation Program at the University of Minnesota.

Collection is unique because the birds have all been mounted in flying positions to display their lower surfaces, which are typically seen as a hawk or eagle flies overhead.

All carpentry work for the protable display boxes was donated to the Nongame Wildlife Program by Dave Ahlgren of Burnsville. Taxidermy work was donated by Henderson, who is a taxidermy hobbyist. The collection has been in preparation for a year.

Exhibit will be scheduled for display at Minnesota's state parks beginning in April.

Donations through the nongame wildlife checkoff on Minnesota's income tax and property tax forms made the exhibit possible, said Henderson.

Prairie Chicken Meeting

Public has been invited to attend a meeting of the Prairie Chicken Society in St. Paul on Saturday, April 7, to hear noted wildlife biologists disucuss research and management programs aimed at maintaining and expanding the bird's population.

Registration for the meeting will start at 8 a.m. at the Earle Brown Center for Continuing Education on the St. Paul Campus of the University of Minnesota.

Once numbering in the millions in Minnesota, the prairie chicken population in the state now comprises about 2,500 birds found in a few northwestern and north-central counties.

At the tenth annual meeting of the Society, the public will be treated to slide presentations on the prairie chicken and other prairie wildlife and plants.

Featured speakers at the evening banquet will be Drs. Fred and Frances Hamerstrom, internationally known wildlife biologists and authors who conducted pioneering research on prairie chicken in Wisconsin and guided the highly successful management effort in that state.

For more information, contact Dan Svedarsky, University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC); Phone 281-6510, extension 310.

by John Michael Anderson

Coach Dale Wennberg's Pee-Wee B team won the consolation championship in the first annual McDonald's Pee-Wee B tournament held in the old arena over the weekend.

Thief River Falls lost 7-1 to Grand Forks, the eventual tournament champion, in the 8 a.m. tournament opener. Thief River Falls then blasted Fergus Falls 11-1 in the consolation semifinals — their fourth win over Fergus Falls this year — with all four lines contributing in the scoring.

Thief River Falls then defeated St. Cloud 5-4 in five overtimes to claim the consolation title. Thief River Falls came from behind twice to tie the game, the last one coming with 2:06 left in regulation time as Jay Opdahl scored.

Paul Borchert scored the winning goal off a scramble in front of the St. Cloud net.

Both teams were very evenly matched, and neither deserved to lose.

Thief River Falls Pee-Wee B team finished with a great 24-8-2 record, winning trophies in three tournaments: second place in the East Grand Forks Christmas tournament, first place in the district tournament and consolation championship in the Thief River Falls McDonald's tournament.

General manager Larry Lee would like to thank the kids for a super year and coach Dale Wennberg for volunteering his time. Lee also predicts the fathers will send the Pee-Wee B team to a long summer with a sound defeat at the hands of the fathers in the father-son game tonight (Wednesday).

In the semifinals, Thief River Falls got single goals from Jorde, Robby Coltom, Corey Poole and Looker to defeat arch-rival East Grand Forks 4-3. They out-shot East Grand Forks 30-13.

Thief River Falls also outshot the Seven Oaks Raiders of Winnipeg in the championship game, 29-12, but lost the game 7-1.

Thief River Falls Eagles Pee-Wee A team, coached by Tim Engelstad and Jim Thompson, finished the season with a 21-13 record.

Campground Hosts

Department of Natural Resources is again seeking persons willing to serve as unpaid volunteers in state parks in the role of "campground hosts."

Campground hosts stay a minimum of four weeks in those state parks having semi-modern or rustic campsites, where they assist fellow campers and provide minor services at the campground. Campground hosts are located in parks from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Although exact schedules and duties are worked out by mutual agreement between the host and park manager, hosts are generally expected to be available for duty during early evening hours, weekends and holidays. Hosts are given a free campsite, have the enjoyment of meeting other campers, and the satisfaction of knowing they have helped make a visit to the park more pleasant.

Campground hosts are usually an active couple or individual and live in the campground in their own camping unit. They provide park visitors with information, assist in cases of emergencies, remind visitors of park rules, inform the park manager of any problems in the campground and help keep the grounds and buildings neat and clean.

Persons interested in being hosts this summer are asked to contact the office at the state park where they would like to serve, or write to: Campground Host Program, DNR Parks and Recreation, Box 39 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155, Attention: Don Jueneman.

Youth Firearms Training Given In Newfolden

Minnesota firearms safety training will be offered for boys and girls in the Newfolden area, and all who are interested in hunting or shooting are invited to enroll.

Certified firearms safety instructors will conduct the course. Instructors are certified by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and the National Rifle Association.

Students who enroll must be 12 years old by this fall. There is no maximum age, although the course is designed for youth up to age 16. There will be ten hours of instruction covering safe gun handling, gun safety in the home, care and storage of firearms, marksmanship, hunter responsobility, basic first aid and survival.

Course fee of $5 will cover the cost of all materials.

Students may register at the first class on Fri., April 6 at 7:00 p.m. at the Newfolden Community Center.

At least one parent or guardian must be with the student the first night to register your child, and parents are welcome to attend all classes.

Upon successful completion of the course, students will receive a certificate and arm patch.

Youth between the ages of 12 and 16 who have taken the training and have received a certificate, are permitted to hunt small game and are eligible to purchase a big game license.
